HEAT WOMAN IN MAN'S CLOTHES.

Discharged by Newport News Officials—The Finch Divorce Case. NEWPORT NEWS, VA., October 24.—(Special.)—Lorraine Thomas, alias Rosa Le Grande, alias Lorraine Aa, the young woman masquerading in men's clothes, and her companion, R. F. Thomas, alias Iwan Au, who claims to be her husband, were released by the police to-day and allowed to return to their sloop on which they claim to be making a trip around the world on a wager.

There was no evidence that they were wanted in other cities. This couple were arrested on suspicion of being connected with a third party, who was wanted for attempting to dispose of jewelry, but the police have been unable to fasten the crime on them and decided to hold them no longer as suspicious persons.

The woman continues in her masculine guise. She says they will remain here for several days before proceeding on their journey.

THE FINCH DIVORCE CASE.

The Finch case was again continued to-day and it may not come up in the court before the 15th of November term. The case is now before Judge Blackstone on a motion of the plaintiff, Mrs. Finch, who is suing for divorce and the possession of her property, that a receiver be appointed to take charge of the entire estate.

Argument was begun at Accomac and to have been concluded to-day, but absence of counsel interfered.

THE MAIN SAILS.

The rebuilt North German Lloyd steamship Main, Captain R. Dahl, left the shipyard to-day at noon for Baltimore, to load a general cargo for Bremen. The Main is one of the ships almost totally destroyed in the great Hoboken fire of June 30, 1910, being damaged to the greatest extent.

The shipyard contracted to rebuild her for a price less than $1,000,000, and just a year ago consumed with the work. The Main is now a new ship throughout. It is a singular coincidence that her sister ship, the Bremen, which was also wrecked by the fire, has just arrived at New York after being rebuilt.

THE PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS.

Resolution Asking Colombia and Venezuela to Keep the Peace in MEXICO CITY, October 24.—It had been expected that the Pan-American Congress would yesterday get down to a discussion of rules and organization, but an unexpected turn was given to the proceedings by the following resolution presented by the delegations signing the same:

Whereas, the American International Conference considers that peace is the first consideration of prosperity and national progress; that peace between the States represented in this conference is indispensable in order that other work should have the result that is sought; that this conference, invoking the common, original, historic traditions and solidarity of interests of the republics of Colombia and Venezuela, considers it opportune to address a friendly and operative appeal to the governments of the countries here mentioned, in order to prevent any sad conflict, which, in the present circumstances, might alter the cordial relations between sister republics; now then be it

Resolved, 1. That it convey its desire that the governments of the republic referred to, in accordance with sentiments already expressed, may reach an equitable and rational agreement of their present differences.

2. That the president of the congress be authorized to transmit to the respective governments this resolution, in the hope that it may be received in the same spirit of cordiality and deference which has inspired it.

For the Argentine delegation, A. Bermejo. For the Bolivian delegation, Fernando A. Ballivián. For the Paraguayan delegation, Cecil Obiz. For the Peruvian delegation, Manuel Alvarez Calderon. For the Brazilian delegation, Jose Hygino. For the Uruguayan delegation, John Quests." Technical objections were at once raised by the delegation of Chile, on the ground that as the congress was not yet organized, it was not competent to take the action suggested.

The Chilean delegation, however, manifested itself favorable to the proposition in its essence, taking exceptions only to the moment of its presentation. General Rafael Reyes, delegate from Colombia, spoke favorably to the proposition. He denied that war existed officially between his country and Venezuela, though admitting that the condition of border friction which prevailed might at any time provoke conflict. A similar condition of affairs prevailed, he said, with respect to Ecuador.

Colombia, continued General Reyes, was in the best of disposition to meet its neighbors half way. In general terms, the proposition was also supported by Jose Gilfortout, the delegate from the Venezuelan Government. However, in the voting the Venezuelan and Colombian delegations abstained from casting their votes, and the Chilean delegations also refrained from voting. The unanimous endorsement of the conference was given the resolution, which was then adopted. This was the only business transacted, save that resolutions deploring the death of President McKinley.

CHARLOTTESVILLE.

University Alumni Interested—A Pretty Marriage.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., October 24.—(Special.)—Much interest is felt at the University of Virginia in the movement inaugurated by its alumni in the city of St. Louis to have the rotunda of the institution duplicated upon the fair grounds of the World's Fair of 1904, as a memorial to Jefferson, and to be used as a permanent historical building or hall of fame. The St. Louis Fair is designed to celebrate the purchase by the United States of the Louisiana territory. This was done by the statesmanship of Mr. Jefferson, who was then the President of the United States, and so the fair is in a large sense a tribute to the father of the Virginia Commonwealth.

Dr. Thomas Nelson Page, an alumnus, is representing the University this week at the exercises of the Yale bicentennial.

Judkins, formerly of Danville, Va., but now of New York, one of the directors of the Universal Tobacco Company, an organization formed by opponents of the American Tobacco Company, and associated companies now known as the Consolidated Tobacco Company, was in the city yesterday afternoon, and left in the afternoon for the metropolis. Judkins is traveling in the interest of the new company, which he believes will be a formidable rival of the American and Continental companies, and received the sympathy and encouragement of many of the independent dealers and manufacturers of this city.

Organized competition with the big tobacco company is being developed both in this country and in England by the independent dealers.

Mr. Judkins is a brother of Mr. L. McK. Judkins, of this city, and a son of Rev. Dr. William B. Judkins. He is himself well known as the projector and promoter of big enterprises.

HE RECEIVED A BOMB.

DANGEROUS PACKAGE SENT TO MR. PETER W. ROUSS TUESDAY.

SON OF NEW YORK MILLIONAIRE.

Handwriting of Address on Explosive Shows Feminine Characteristics—Merchant's Son Puzzled—Thinks He Has No Enemy.

All the machinery of the detective bureau of Brooklyn was set in motion yesterday on the mystery that surrounds the attempt to assassinate, by means of an infernal machine, sent through the mails, last Tuesday, to Peter W. Rouss, son of Charles Broadway Rouss, the blind dry-goods and notion merchant of Broadway, Manhattan.

Up to an early hour this morning no arrests have been made. It is said, however, that the police believed that the infernal machine had been addressed by a woman, and they are working on that theory. Mr. Rouss himself is unable to suggest the identity of the sender of the deadly package, declaring that, so far as he knows, he has not an enemy in the world.

Captain Reynolds, in charge of the Brooklyn Central office, took personal charge of the case early yesterday morning. With six of the best detectives in his office he started to work long before Mr. Rouss and his wife had arisen for breakfast.

To a reporter for the Herald who saw him last night, Captain Reynolds said: "We have not learned anything that can be told up this time. I hope, however, to solve the mystery in a few days."

WOMAN MAY BE IMPLICATED. Captain Reynolds would not admit that the address on the paper wrapped around the box when it was delivered at the Rouss home, at No. 24 Park place, was that of a woman, but he said it "might be." The box itself, emptied of the powder that might have caused Mr. Rouss's death had the maker known, is in the charge of Captain Reynolds yesterday morning. It was taken to several box manufacturers for the purpose of learning, if possible, were it had been made.

The Captain learned that there was no less than a hundred factories in which the box might have been made.

It was such a box as is used by druggists for small bottles of peroxide. Its reconstruction into a bomb was ingenious, and indicated that the maker knew something about explosives. The box is cylindrical in shape, about six inches in length and two inches in diameter. It is of red colored wood with a screw top. Attached by a small brass screw on top of the box was a spindle of wood, with sulphur matches had been placed. Around the upper rim of the box and so arranged that the cover could hardly be unscrewed from its position without touching it was a quantity of sandpaper pasted around the entire rim. The idea of the maker of the bomb was, evidently, that when the cover should be unscrewed the matches in the spindle would ignite the powder in the cavity below and thus cause an explosion.

The box was divided into three compartments. In the first compartment was ordinary gunpowder; in the second was a quantity of fulminate, and the third compartment was filled with more gunpowder. All told, there were fully three ounces of powder in the box. Extending from the top of the box to the third or bottom compartment was a small brass tube, through which it has been suggested that the matches should be conveyed to the match heads on the wooden spindle.

NAME MISPELLED. The paper of the ordinary common brown sort, that was wrapped about the parcel when it was delivered at the Rouss home, was taken to the detective bureau and minutely examined. It read, "Mr. Peter W. Rouss, No. 24 Park Place, Brooklyn."

It was written in a hand of a first glance appeared to be that of a woman. A close examination, however, indicated that it was a disingenuous hand-writing, and might be that of either a schoolboy or a woman. The postmark on the cover showed that it had been mailed at the General Post Office, New York, on the 22d of October, 1910.

On the 23d of October, the wrapper was found in the inner pocket of a coat of the name of "Russell," written in lead pencil, and with this slight clew the detectives set to work.

It was shortly after 12 o'clock Tuesday that the round package with a number of letters at the Rouss home, Mrs. Rouss was at lunch in her private sitting room. Frank Udd, a Japanese servant in the house, received the cover package and the misspelled name attracted his attention. A feeling of fear or ed suspicion came over him when he handled the package, and he sent it to the stable in the rear, opened by one of the stable men, Patrick Rafferty, a groom, unscrewed the cover of the box after it had been unwrapped, and he heard a slight unscrewing noise. He then slowly unscrewed the cover, and he saw the matches in the match heads. The cover removed Rafferty tipped the box to one side and several particles of gunpowder fell out on the table.

Mrs. Rouss was informed and she telephoned to Mr. Rouss, who manages his father's Broadway store. He took the infernal machine to the Albany Street headquarters, where he told the entire story to Captain Titus and was referred to the Brooklyn Central Office.

Mrs. Rouss is only 25 years old, but has been his father's manager for many years.

Mrs. Rouss was a Miss Swan, daughter of a well-known resident of the twenty-third Ward, of Brooklyn. They have three children.

The theory advanced by the police that the infernal machine was sent by a former employee of the store, for purposes of revenge for some imagined wrong, is not believed by Mr. Rouss.

THE OHIO CAMPAIGN. Democrats Denounce "Firing from Behind Tomb of McKinley."

BUENOS AIRES, O., October 24.—The peculiar situation is presented in Ohio of the two parties not only differing on issues, but also as to what are the issues. At the Republican opening at Delaware, none of the five speakers referred to State issues. At the Democratic opening of campaign yesterday, State issues were paramount in all of the six speeches of the afternoon, and of the same number at the night meeting. Nearly all the speakers denounced what they called "firing from behind the tomb of McKinley."

Colonel Kilbourne compared the platforms, and discussed both State and national issues, as did also Charles W. Baker, who is declared the Democratic candidate for senator. Mr. Baker opened by saying the Republicans favored a canal in Nicaragua, while they had allowed the Ohio canals to go to electric traction companies, without compensation.

He stated that the Republican leaders were seeking to divert attention from Ohio affairs by discussing foreign questions.

TOM JOHNSON. Chairman of the Ohio General Finley, Anthony Howland, and Congressman Norton, Zimmerman, and McCarthy were all in tune with this keynote, but its most forcible exponent was Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland, who denounced the
