

A MUSEUM OF WAR. DESIGNED BY VIRGINIAN AT MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGE. AN INTERESTING PROJECT.

The following article appeared in Sunday's issue of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican as correspondence from Boston. The article is an interesting one, in that it treats of a subject of considerable importance to the people of Richmond and the South; and it is of still greater importance because it contains a plan of a Confederate Museum of War...

"Perhaps the most definite plan yet advanced for a museum of the struggles and memories of the four years' struggle and commemoration of the Southern Confederacy is due, by a curious turn of fortune, to a thesis recently read here in Boston at the commencement exercises of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. There are several departments of instruction at the institute, and each of these departments is represented at commencement by a public thesis. The thesis in the department of architecture was read this year by Mr. Esckridge Kern, a graduate of Randolph-Macon College, at Ashland, Va., who has spent the greater part of the last few months in preparing a plan for a museum, which, as a Virginian, he hoped might some day be embodied in stone as a memorial to the battles and campaigns of the southern armies.

"IN HONOR OF SOUTHERNERS. It was not Mr. Kern's intention to design a national museum, such as the United States might build to commemorate the victories of the Union. He was rather desirous to erect in honor of those who fought on the southern side in the civil war. The building would be situated, of course, in Richmond, as the capital of the Confederacy, and would have a double purpose—first, as a monument, and second, as a place for the exhibition of relics. As a monument, Mr. Kern went on to say, not dedicated to the memory of the war, but to the peace coming after a long conflict, its design should express quietude and rest. Considered as a place of exhibition, its chief requirements would be adequate floor space, easy circulation, and good light.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BUILDING. "Mr. Kern's drawings showed a T-shaped building of monumental character standing on a high platform of the same shape, approached by a broad flight of steps flanked by sphinxes. This platform is treated with heavy 'battered' or sloping walls, with angles emphasized by projecting pavilions. Between the pavilions, the design shows a row of cannons pointing outward along a broad curve. The museum is Doric in general style, with an imposing entrance at the center of the front facade. The wide portico is meant to be placed at regular intervals. Like the canon on the platform, these porticos would be selected by their position in relation to the water. Above the plinth the plans show a broad sculptured band, some four or five feet high, which runs clear round the building. The sculptures are in low relief and represent the various phases of the war. Above the band, are equestrian statues of men to be selected from the role of distinguished Confederate generals. One of the most striking features of the plan is a beautiful Doric colonnade, between the columns of which are large windows with mullions formed of small bronze columns made in the form of canon. The entablature is heavy and richly sculptured in relief at definite intervals, representing shields, helmets, and other armor. Above the entablature is decorated cresting of stone. The stone roof is built in steps.

THE CENTRAL ENTRANCE. "The central entrance is treated after the manner of a magnificent triumphal arch, crowned by a sort of pyramidal pediment bearing a four-horse war chariot. On either side of the arch is a Doric column of peace. Around the base of each stand three female figures—representing, respectively, peace joining the hands of the Union and the Confederacy, and industry uniting the North and the South. Delicately sculptured palm branches in low relief decorate the fluting of the columns, and above the cornice of the column is a pediment on which is seated figure of a warrior resting after the conflict. Between the columns runs a frieze, on which may be inscribed the names of the principal southern statesmen and soldiers who were prominent in the war. Below and within the arch is supported by two noble caryatides or figures of maidens taking the place of pillars. On entering the building one comes directly into the main hall, which is square in plan, but opens between great corner pierces into the wings. In the corners of the main hall are small, circular stairs leading to a gallery. The wall under the gallery is treated with niches for the reception of relics, while the wall above is intended to be covered with large historical paintings. Two rows of exhibits, arranged in pyramidal form, as in larger exhibitions, extend the whole length. The smaller wings are intended for similar exhibits, though of less importance; while in the end pavilions are glass cases for the preservation of relics, documents, and historical publications.

IN CONCLUSION. "Mr. Kern concludes his description of the building by saying: 'I have supposed the museum to be constructed of soft-gray limestone throughout, as harmonizing with the local color of the place where I would like to have it stand—Richmond, the city of all others, where it is naturally built in order to commemorate that peace which made us once more a united country.'

SCOTLAND NECK, N. C., June 23.—(Special.)—Friday night Mr. John A. Oates addressed a fair sized audience in the opera house in the interests of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League. SPENCER JACKSON IS STILL VERY ILL.

Hansbrough is Deeply Distressed and Gives No Reason for the Shooting of Jackson.

WARRENTON, VA., June 23.—(Special.)—Spencer Jackson, who was shot by Lewis F. Hansbrough Saturday night, continues in a very low state. He has been under the influence of opiates more or less ever since the shooting. He rested fairly well last night and his case to-day looks more hopeful.

The tragedy was the one chief topic of conversation on the street yesterday and continues to be the all-absorbing topic. No reason at all can be assigned for the crime. Hansbrough is deeply distressed over the matter, and is suffering mental torture and anguish that is beyond imagination. As far as can be learned, he had nothing against Jackson, and neither did the latter have anything against Hansbrough.

The shooting occurred in front of Carter's drug store in Culpeper street. Hansbrough and Keno Bush were witnesses to the shooting. They came upon the scene while Hansbrough and Jackson were quarrelling, relative to a game of cards. It seemed that Jackson accused Hansbrough of playing with wild cards, and in this charge Hansbrough gave the lie and followed his remark by drawing a revolver and cursing Jackson at the same time. Fearing serious trouble, Fisher and Bush took hold of Hansbrough and tried to restrain him. He resisted their interference, and during the scuffle, the first two shots went wild, one imbedding itself in the sill of the door, and the other one entering the cellar door. The third shot struck Jackson, entering on the right side of the lower part of the stomach, and taking an upward course, penetrating the stomach, diaphragm and lungs, and coming out under the right shoulder blade.

Hansbrough was lodged in jail immediately after the shooting. Jackson was taken to the home of his brother-in-law, C. M. Pattle, where a hasty examination of his wound was made.

Dr. James Kerr, a surgeon of Washington, who has a summer home here, was called in and after a consultation with Drs. Maphis, Carter and Douglas, an operation was deemed necessary.

The operation was successful so far as tracing the course of the bullet. The man's condition is regarded as serious, and little hope is entertained of his recovery.

Hansbrough is a well known Republican politician, and is a special deputy internal revenue collector. He expresses deep regret at the unfortunate tragedy. There had been no past bad feelings between the two men. Had both men been sober the tragedy would not have occurred.

ILLEGAL SALE OF LIQUOR.

Negro Arrested in Fincastle—Fierce Storm Does Great Damage.

FINCATTLE, June 23.—(Special.)—Davis Hawkins (colored) was arrested here Saturday morning and carried to Salem by United States officers on the charge of selling liquor without a license. Fincastle has been carrying the name of a dry town, but by some means or other, after the barrooms were closed, intoxicating drinks did not cease to flow, and men continued to find some way of getting drunk. The "ardent" could not be obtained for love or money, except by those who knew the ropes, and consequently it was a most

JUDGE LOVE MAY GO TO THE PHILIPPINES.

He is Said to Stand a Fair Chance of Appointment to a Judgeship.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., June 23.—(Special.)—There is considerable interest in Alexandria and Fairfax counties over the selection of a judge to succeed Judge James M. Love, of the County Court, at the event of his resignation. Judge Love has made application for such a position and it is said that he stands a good chance of getting it. The remaining time, however, would not be long, as the office will be vacated out of existence in 1904 by the new constitution. But the position, owing to its prominence, is considered very desirable, especially by the younger members of the bar. It is understood that Attorney W. W. Douglas, of Alexandria county, will be a candidate for the appointment to succeed Judge Love. Should Judge Love actually resign it is expected that there will be many other applicants.

VIRGINIA-TENNESSEE BOUNDARY LINE.

Work on the Matter to Be Resumed at Once—Cat Conquers a Snake—Marriages.

BRISTOL, VA., June 23.—(Special.)—Mr. A. H. Buchanan, the Tennessee member of the commission appointed by the United States Supreme Court to re-run and re-mark the Tennessee-Virginia boundary line, arrived here Saturday and went to the point where the commission quit last fall. The work will be resumed at once, and Mr. Buchanan thinks it can be completed in about two months. The line is being re-marked in so substantial a way as not to admit of dispute in the future, and the commission is confident that there will be no cause for further surveys in this connection. This boundary line, one of the most noted in the country from a historical standpoint, has been in dispute ever since Colonial days, and has been repeatedly surveyed, without bringing about a satisfactory settlement of matters in dispute. It was this line that marked the course of civilization westward in this country. The present commission has instructions from the Supreme Court of the United States to locate and re-mark the line as determined by the commission of 1802, just one hundred years ago.

CAT VERSUS SNAKE.

A house cat belonging to Mrs. W. H. Fillingim, of Bristol, had a spirited battle with a snake a few days ago. Each used its influence to put the other under the power of its cunning. Neither was able to make any headway at this, and finally the cat sprang suddenly upon the snake, exercising care not to come in contact with the head of the reptile. The snake sought to defend itself, but when it would strike in an effort to pierce the cat with its venomous fangs, the cat would spring upward and bound away, only to wait until the snake came again. In this way the cat soon had the tail of the reptile in a mutilated condition and the snake gradually grew weaker, until the cat was complete master of the situation. The reptile, which was about three feet in length, died after having been subjected to rather severe torture by the cat.

The bride was well-known in Bristol, and after her first husband's death was matron of Southwest Virginia Institute for Young Ladies for two or three years.

It is announced that on Wednesday of this week Mr. Carl A. Jones, assistant cashier of the Dominion National Bank, of Bristol, and Miss Edith Carr will be married. The bride is a beautiful and popular young lady. Mr. Jones is a brother of Mr. H. E. Jones, president of the Dominion National Bank.
