

A Brave Virginia Woman.

NEWCASTLE, VA., September 27.—(Special.)—In the recent death of Mrs. Virginia Kyle, of this place, the end of a unique and most interesting life was reached, which was of more than mere local meaning—from an historical standpoint.

Mrs. Kyle was the widow of Captain W. H. Kyle, who died exactly a year ago, and who was one of the Virginia Military Institute cadets who left that institution to fight for the Confederacy. In 1864 he came up from Richmond, where his company was in camp, and married his school girl sweetheart, Virginia Scott, who lived near Newcastle.

Miss Scott was at the time a famous belle in this part of the State, and had lovers by the score. She had been engaged to Captain Kyle, a mere boy, but captain of a company of cadets, who were of the bravest. But they had "fallen out" in love's will, and he had gone to war to get himself killed.

He had wealth—for those days—and, being a practical young man, decided that he would like to win his sweetheart by his property, slaves, lands, etc., and upon investigation, found he could not do that and die in his maiden. So he wrote to her and asked her if she would not reconsider her decision, and marry him—"just to inherit his property." He was the only heir to fine property in Roanoke and Botetourt counties. Miss Scott had indeed reconsidered matters, and the affair of the speedy marriage, and the soldier came up from Richmond, in February, 1864, and the marriage was celebrated under the gloom and sorrows of war.

Their long life together, that followed, was one of the purest devotion that I ever knew. Last September Captain Kyle fell dead in his maiden. So he wrote to her and asked her if she would not reconsider her decision, and marry him—"just to inherit his property." He was the only heir to fine property in Roanoke and Botetourt counties. Miss Scott had indeed reconsidered matters, and the affair of the speedy marriage, and the soldier came up from Richmond, in February, 1864, and the marriage was celebrated under the gloom and sorrows of war.

Perhaps no young Southern girl saw a more romantic side of the war than did this lady. Several occurrences of unwritten history are interesting, and serves to show the personality of the spirited girl.

In 1863 a large party of Union soldiers arrived in this county, and were en masse at the home of Miss Scott. Her father was dead and her brothers in the Confederate army. Five Union generals had charge of the blue coats, and the first ones appeared on Monday morning, and the last ones to pass went on Friday. Thus, for five days a seething mass of soldiers were moving past the old inn, not far from Sweet Springs, where Miss Scott lived, and the destruction caused by the army was terrible. The soldiers, besides the negro slaves, fleeing from their plantation homes—some of them half nude, and all of them brutalized by the contact with alien principles. They, of course, halted at the inn, and confiscated everything in sight.

Miss Scott was 18 years old and a most beautiful and highly accomplished girl. She was just home from a woman's college. The family consisted of several ladies, some faithful servants, and several children. They all went to the second floor and hid in the attic. The soldiers, besides the negro slaves, fleeing from their plantation homes—some of them half nude, and all of them brutalized by the contact with alien principles. They, of course, halted at the inn, and confiscated everything in sight.

One of them, a lieutenant, snatched boldly at Miss Scott's hand, and with an impudent compliment—a speech of coarse admiration—attempted to take a ring from her finger. She was too quick for him, and too loopy for such rudeness, so with the toe of her boot she sent him spinning to the bottom of the stairs, and several others with him. It was so unexpected that it was amply successful and convincing.

When the lieutenant reported the affair to his general, as one man was hurt in his fall, General Averill himself approached the young girl, and inquired why she had so treated one of his staff officers.

"Were you not afraid to see?" he asked. "No," she replied. "I was not afraid to see you, so if you were to offer me a like indignity."

This pleased General Averill that he offered to make any reparation he could for her annoyances, and asked her what she would have him do.

She told him she would return her black riding horse—a blooded animal, and pet of her very own. His men had stolen him, with all the other horses and cattle. This horse was named "McDonald," for Colonel J. C. McDonald, who was her brother's colonel in the Confederate army, and she abbreviated the name by calling him "Don."

So if General Averill would return "Don" to his stall she would forgive the staff officer whom she had kicked down stairs. General Averill was evidently charmed with her daring, and her request was graciously granted.

However, some days later, among those thousands of Yankee soldiers, and identify "Don." If "Don" could not be found, if some Yankee had already ridden him away, then she might select any horse she wished from the thousands of these. This heroic rescue of her brother's horse, and the girl was not allowed to go into that setting mass of blue-coats; so, she lost "Don" forever.

This story, about the ring episode, was printed in the Richmond papers at the time, and also the Raleigh, N. C., papers, with graphic details; but this is the real truth in point of the affair.

At another time Miss Scott played a more important, if less dramatic, part in the history of that convulsive period.

An incident, in 1863, I think I was Richmond, and I met her by force, but she executed him and saved it, he not dreaming the value it contained.

The money was later safely taken to headquarters, and the beloved cause was many thousands the richer because of it.

When Miss Scott was calmly surveying the scene with the thousands of dollars which were intended for the eager soldiers in West Virginia, carelessly held in her calico sun-bonnet, which she carried in her hands. An impudent Yankee tried to take it from her by force, but she executed him and saved it, he not dreaming the value it contained.

ed nurse other soldiers, too. She saw the poor fellows in Libby prison, who looked out on the pile of plain coffins that were kept ready for use, and she contributed many a knick-knack to a home-sick "Yankee" boy.

Most of her life has been spent in Newcastle and Fincastrale. By marriage, and by blood, she was connected with many of the leading families of Botetourt, Roanoke, and Craig counties. She had two children, a beautiful daughter, who married Mr. William Echols, county surveyor for Craig, and who died some years ago. The son, Mr. James Kyle, lives in West Virginia after her marriage.

For many years after her marriage Mrs. Kyle lived at her husband's ancestral home, "Bel-View," near Roanoke city, which he inherited from his father. By some mismanagement of an uncle's estate this property fell into the hands of Captain Kyle's cousin, Mrs. Helen Thompson, and is now occupied by the only daughter of Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Almsworth, and her interesting family. It is, or used to be, one of the finest old mansions in the State.

For many years Mrs. Kyle has lived in New Castle, and was very dearly beloved for her genial, cherry nature, and her attractive personality.

She was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Her death on Friday last week, was a shock to her friends, because her illness was of short duration. Very touching services were held in the Methodist church on Saturday, and the remains were then buried in the New Castle cemetery.

Mrs. Kyle was a first cousin of Mrs. James W. Marshall, Sr. Her father was one of the anti-war gentlemen, the founder of the Craig County Bank, and one of the trustees of the county when it was first formed, in 1854. He died in 1855.

HE CARRIED AWAY HER CLOTHING

Queer Charge Against Former Partner of Levi P. Morton.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., September 27.—(Special.)—Thomas Murphy, 32 years old, and former partner of ex-Vice-President Levi P. Morton, was arrested to-day on a warrant sworn out by his daughter, Mrs. Lucy O. Lindsley, charging him with forcibly entering her apartments and carrying away her belongings. Murphy was not taken into custody until after he was arrested by Mrs. Ormsby, Lindsley's counsel. He was locked up for two hours, when his counsel, Judge George C. Appel, bailed him out. His trial will take place Monday morning.

A year ago Mr. Murphy and ex-Vice-President Morton were partners in a dry-goods store in Greenfield, N. H. It is while engaged in this line of business that Mr. Murphy is supposed to have made his money. His daughter, Mrs. Lindsley, was formerly Mrs. Ormsby, wife of lawyer Ormsby, who defended Jefferson Davis at his trial for treason. She was at one time one of the society women of Washington.

A year ago Mr. Murphy decided his fortune, estimated at several thousand dollars, to Annie Rose Fallon, at that time his boarding mistress. When Mrs. Lindsley heard of this she engaged lawyer Riggs and set about to have her father declared of unsound mind. A sheriff's jury was empaneled, and after a three-day trial the jury disagreed. Another trial followed, and Mr. Murphy was declared incompetent to manage his estate. A trustee was appointed by the court to look after Mr. Murphy's interests. Since Mr. Murphy has been declared incompetent, he has been living with his daughter, Mrs. Lindsley, in the old Murphy home at 215 E. 17th St.

A few nights ago, it is said, Mrs. Lindsley awoke and found her father standing at her bedside with a revolver in his hand. She spoke to him kindly and begged him not to shoot. He went away.

To-day lawyer Riggs called on Mrs. Lindsley at her home, and while there, it is said that Mr. Murphy caught hold of him and knocked him down. He is then accused of forcing the lawyer out of his home.

Mrs. Lindsley's complaint accuses her father of violating section 465 of the Penal Code, inasmuch as he forced an entrance into her apartments and carried away her wearing apparel and other things.

BOX-CAR BURGLARS.

Two Negroes Caught at Gordonsville and Sent to Grand Jury.

GORDONSVILLE, VA., September 27.—(Special.)—Two negro men, claiming to be from Gordon Courthouse, were arrested here Friday night for breaking into a Chesapeake and Ohio box car loaded with merchandise. They had broken the seal and were in the car when arrested, and Dr. Pettit, of New Canton, have attended her. She is very much improved to-day.

Mr. C. T. Way and wife, of Cismont, Mr. W. S. Camden and Miss Sallie Camden, of Roanoke, and Mr. Thomas Nuckolls and wife, of Richmond, have returned to their homes. They attended the funeral of Mr. Lewis Camden near God's Hill.

The registration of voters for Marshall District will close this week. A goodly number have failed to register.

Miss Louise Leasure, of Red Mills, is reported to be quite sick. It is thought she has fever.

Why He Quit Iowa. (Kansas City Journal.) Henry Clay Dean, who was a famous orator a generation ago, was referred to many years after he had moved to Missouri from Iowa as "Henry Clay Dean of Iowa." He used to explain his move from the Hawkeye State in this way: "You see, they passed a nefarious prohibition law in Iowa, and there's your whiskey gone. Then they abolished capital punishment, and there's your hanging gone. And now the whole population seems to be drifting toward Universalism, and there's your hell gone. I can't live in a State that has neither hell, hanging nor whiskey."

COSTLY WOODS FOR FUEL. A Factory's Furnaces Fed With Ebony, Rosewood, Boxwood, and Lignum-Vitae. (Boston Evening Transcript.) People have turned to everything for fuel during the coal famine brought on by the present strike, but it is doubtful if the furnaces of more than one factory are fed by costly imported woods, where every ton burned means a value of from $30 to $40 gone in smoke.

The one firm in question is located in Cambridgeport. Its engineers have found that hard woods like ebony, rosewood, boxwood and lignum-vitae, well seasoned, burn almost as well as coal. The only precaution which they take is not to
