JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION; THE EVENT AND THE MEN.

The Three Hundredth Anniversary of the Foundation of Anglo-Saxon Civilization in the Western Hemisphere Will Be Celebrated by the Nation.

(Written for the Dispatch by Gwynn T. Shepperd.)

Although it was with Columbus that certainty as to the existence of the western hemisphere began, the new world and Anglo-Saxon supremacy does not date until the time of Captain Christopher Newport, and the settlement of Jamestown on May 13, 1607.

It was in Virginia that this little band of one hundred sturdy colonists planted the seeds of the greatest power the world knows at the present time. The event might be likened to the throwing of a pebble into the placid waters of a lake.

The settlement of Jamestown marks an epoch in the development of the English-speaking people that at once and forever lifts it above the sphere of a local incident in the history of the world.

Although the island is almost deserted and uninhabited save by a few souls, there is no more sacred spot in America; and this sentiment will never die as long as the Americans cherish love and patriotism for their great and glorious republic.

Lee, of Virginia. A better leader could not have been selected, nor a more beautiful spot in the world to hold the celebration than historic Hampton Roads.

The first expedition was sent over to America by James I., and he himself drew up the royal charter for the government of the colony and signed the same on April 16, 1606.

By recent excavations many interesting discoveries have been made. Lying across the north and south aisle of a tomb was found what from its armorial bearing, must have once been the resting place of some knight.

est display of naval and marine architecture ever seen in the world. This feature alone, regardless of the rest, will undoubtedly attract more people than any exposition ever held in America.

The Jamestown of to-day is but little more than it was the day that Captain John Smith first set foot on Virginia soil. Nothing now remains of this famous settlement but the ruins of the old church tower, covered with ivy, and some old tombstones; and but for the care of the Society for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, there would be nothing left to mark the most historical spot on the American continent.

Here lies William Sherwood. Born in the Parish of White Chapel, "A Sinner." Awaiting the Joyful Resurrection.

SHADY SIDE OF LIFE.

THREE STORIES FROM NEW YORK FULL OF HUMAN INTEREST.

HAD NO HOME BUT THE TOMBS.

An Inhuman Mother Sells Her Home and Leaves Her Son to Wander in the Streets—A New Jersey Banker to Be Made to Answer Why He Allows Father to Beg on the Streets for a Living.

NEW YORK, October 11.—(Special.)

The Dispatch correspondent to-day unearthed two stories so full of pathetic human interest that I cannot forbear sending them to you. The first is of old Charles Sherman, 60 years of age, a painter by trade, and so thoroughly alone in the world that he was glad to find shelter within a prison walls, a poor, homeless old man, died to-day in the Tombs.

SON WITH THE STORE.

A case of unusual interest came up before Justice Olmstead, in the Children's Court to-day. Abraham Holtz was arrested by the police as a homeless boy. In court he gave his age as 12 years and said that the last home he knew was at No. 221 East Broadway, where his mother formerly kept a candy store. She had sold it, he said, to Mrs. Solomon, who, the day before, had told him to get out, as she had no use for him.

CAUGHT A THIEF; THEN GAVE HIM CAKES.

GRAVEL HILL, BUCKINGHAM COUNTY, VA., October 11.—(Special.)—Mr. R. M. Booth, manager for the Gold Hill Trading Company, at Gold Hill, captured a thief in his store a few evenings since. Mr. Booth stepped out of the store for a few moments, locking the front doors and leaving the back door next to the dwelling house open. When he returned a tramp was in the store and within a few feet of the cash drawer. Mr. Booth was unarmed, but had the presence of mind to throw his hand to his pistol or hip pocket and order the man to throw up his hands, which he did. After the tramp had been searched and nothing belonging to the store found on his person, he was given some cakes and ordered to move on, which he did at once.
