

TIRE OF MARTYRDOM

60 SAYS MRS. ROLAND MOLINEUX, WHO WANTS A DIVORCE.

TO GET IT IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

She Has Already Reached Sioux Falls—Says She is Justified in Seeking a Separation—Roland's Father Refuses to Discuss Matter.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(Special.)—Mrs. Roland B. Molineux, wife of the man recently acquitted of murder after many sensational trials, will start for South Dakota, where she will stay long enough to secure a divorce.

There have been rumors of estrangement between the man and his wife, but no suspicion that the trouble was as serious as this. The bill of complaint will probably make very interesting reading and the filing of an answer by Molineux just as highly interesting.

During the trials of Molineux, there have been many rumors circulated, both against him and against his wife, in the matter of her morality.

Tied of Martyrdom. NEW YORK, November 17.—The following dispatch has been received here from Mrs. Roland B. Molineux, in answer to a telegram asking her if it were true that she was in Sioux Falls, S. D., with view of seeking a divorce.

"Sioux Falls, S. D. Your information is correct. Am in Sioux Falls to institute divorce proceedings. I have been married five years and I am justified in seeking my freedom, and I am justified in seeking my freedom."

Gen. Molineux Won't Talk.

NEW YORK, November 17.—The dispatch from Sioux Falls to-day, announcing Mrs. Roland B. Molineux's arrival there to take up her residence, was shown to General Molineux to-day, and he was asked if his daughter-in-law intended to get a divorce.

"I have nothing to say," said the General.

Roland B. Molineux's counsel, G. G. Battle, said he knew nothing of Mrs. Molineux's reason for going to Sioux Falls. Former Governor Black was not in the city.

DISAPPEARANCE FROM NEW YORK. Mrs. Molineux's absence from court during her husband's last trial revived rumors of family differences, but she went to the Molineux residence in Brooklyn a few hours after her husband's acquittal, and remained there until the next morning, when she returned to the hotel in New York, where she had been staying. She was there on Nov. 17 and then disappeared. She was not seen in public with her husband last week.

JUDGE OLCOTT SURPRISED. Es-Judge Olcott, of Molineux's counsel, said the news from Sioux Falls was a surprise to him, because the differences between Mrs. Molineux and her mother-in-law had been settled, and the family relations, so far as he knew, were amicable.

TRIBUTE TO THE LADY. General Molineux paid his son's wife's expenses all the while his son was in prison, and last week made a statement about his daughter-in-law, in which he said: "She is as good and pure a woman as breathes."

He said he had traced all the stories concerning her and found they were false.

Later in the day, General Molineux said to the Associated Press that Mrs. Roland B. Molineux arrived at his home the night of Thursday, November 14, and the day of the acquittal of her husband, leaving there the ensuing morning. The General had gone on business earlier in the day, and did not see her.

SHE LEFT NO WORD. "She left no word," said "and that is the last we have seen or heard of her."

As to the report that Mrs. Roland B. Molineux has gone to South Dakota for the purpose of obtaining a divorce, the General said: "I know that the idea of a divorce did not come from any member months it has deposited with national banks many millions of dollars secured by government bonds. October 31, 1902, the total amount of bonds held as security for deposits of public money with national banks was $149,216,920, while for the same period five years ago the total bonds on deposit for the same purpose were $17,665,590. At that time the Treasury did not have the cash to place with the banks, and contented itself with holding on to what it possessed. There were neither purchases of bonds nor deposits of government money, in material sums.

MORGAN CONSTANTLY GUARDED.

Detectives Near Him at All Times—The Reason Why. NEW YORK, November 17.—(Special.)—One of the startling revelations resulting from the three days' illness of J. Pierpont Morgan, when he was confined to his home with a cold, was that he is constantly guarded by three sets of detectives.

That some of these are in the employ of persons who are anxious that the great trust builder shall live long, gives deep significance to his absence from Wall Street at a critical moment in manipulation of the stock market by raiders. An accident to him at a time so momentous would mean the loss of millions to speculators. His return to the city in this case was coincident with a check in bear raids.

First of the detectives who watch Morgan are those of his private bureau and police. At his Wall-Street office a former roundsman, who is a steady, gives additional police to his absence from the city. From two to a dozen men are in his command in front of the office or across the street at Broad and Wall.

The next are life insurance detectives, representing companies who carry large policies on Morgan's life, for speculators all over the world. It is of great importance to know the condition of the financier's health at all times, that they may regulate their charges for additional policies applied for. Not even the King of England has more speculative insurance on his life than has Mr. Morgan.

These two classes Mr. Morgan does not object to, but the third he heartily dislikes. These are in the employ of the market speculators. For protection against them, as much as for the safety from other dangers, he has his own guards. The watchfulness of these men, who must keep speculators fully aware of his every move and of his health, is a continual source of irritation to him.

Not long ago when a runaway team came near colliding with a cab in which Mr. Morgan was driving, the incident was known within a minute in many quarters of the city. The newspapers received tips of the escape the financier had had, and there was scurrying in all directions of the city to had to report quickly to employers.

Such things are naturally irritating to the trust builder, and it is with great relief that he boards his yacht, which, in fact is the only place where he can have the absolute security which he wishes. Even from this retreat, information frequently comes ashore in a way that proves what a complete system of espionage is maintained about him.

Mr. Morgan's illness of last week was not serious, but every minute of the days when he stayed at home reports were being sent to many places of his condition. Another annoyance resulting from this system is the constant tempting of Mr. Morgan's servants with bribes. This makes it difficult for him to be certain of immunity in his home, for servants who have been with him for years now and then come under suspicion. Well paid as they are, especially those of the third class they must have accurate information at whatever cost, and consequently they resort to any and all means to keep posted promptly and accurately of Mr. Morgan's movements and health.

WHO FIRED THE MINES?

Several Arrests Instigated by the Pocahontas Collieries Company. POCAHONTAS, VA., November 17.—(Special.)—Raymond David, William Rowe, and Ellis Swim, three more men charged with the firing of the West mines of the Pocahontas Collieries Company, have been arrested in McDowell county, W. Va., and lodged in the Welch jail. It is understood that a requisition will be applied for to remove C. A. Mitchell, Crockett Swim, and Marshall Mitchell, who were arrested at Atkin's, Crockett Swim was arrested Saturday night and placed in jail at this place. The portion of the mine which was charged the fire originated, is located on the West Virginia side of the line, hence the reason for the attempt to have the case tried there.

MURDER OR SUICIDE?

INTERESTING DEVELOPMENTS CONCERNING R. R. REMINGTON'S DEATH

A BROTHER CHARGES CRIME.

He Says That an Autopsy Privately Ordered Reveals Many Startling Things—Significance of the Wounds.

NEW YORK, November 17.—(Special.)—Despite the fact that up to the present time the theory that Robert Reading Remington, who was the fiancé of Miss May Van Alen, committed suicide in a Newport reading-room, on the afternoon of August 18th, has been generally entertained, Edward P. Y. M. Remington, brother of the dead man, in a statement made to the New York Evening Journal to-day, asserts that his brother was murdered.

According to Mr. Remington's statement, he had an autopsy performed on his brother's body by four physicians, and he now has detectives working on the case. As a clue to the motive for the murder, Mr. Remington declares he found a copy of the letter in his brother's room in Newport.

The autopsy showed, Mr. Remington says, that the wounds could not have been self-inflicted. They were made with a sharp instrument, and two bullet wounds, either of which, it is declared, would have produced almost instant insensibility, if not death.

The revolver with which the wounds were inflicted was, he says, of Parisian make, and was not purchased in Newport, although the police officials stated that it was his brother's. Mr. Remington says, had an aversion for firearms, and did not carry them.

In his statement Mr. Remington says: "MURDER MOST FOUL."

"I am convinced that my brother did not commit suicide. I believe that he was foully murdered, and the reason that I have hesitated before and am anxious now not to have the truth known of the results of the autopsy, is my own belief, is because I am not yet prepared to lay hands upon the murderer of my brother."

"We know that he did not commit suicide, we know that Miss Van Alen was every evidence of loving him. We know, moreover, that by the testimony of persons who had seen him within two hours of his death, by telegram that he sent to a friend in New York, of his own actions as well, that he was not insane and had given absolutely no evidence of having determined to make way with himself."

He then describes the wounds he says he found on his brother's body, and adds: "It is the talk of the clubs in New York that there is a mystery in his death which is not explained by the assumption of suicide."

"On every hand I see evidence of black guilt, and yet what can a man do in the eyes of the law without positive proof?"

TIME NOT RIPE FOR CHARGES. "There is evidence in my possession that leads me to continue the search with the definite end in view of being able to finally prefer formal charges, but the time is not ripe for such procedure."

"Whether or not it will involve the name of one of the great families of the land is a matter for the future alone to decide. But I will pursue my object with the constant belief that my brother came to his end through murder."

"I became satisfied that my brother met his death, not in the small back room, which was spoken of in the newspapers, but in the library of the club on the second floor. This is a large room and is heavily carpeted."

"The spot where my brother was found was pointed out to me, and I also saw a hole in the wall where one of the bullets entered."

"After questioning one of the attaches of the club I went to the office of Dr. Henry Eerooy, medical examiner for the State of Rhode Island, and from him I learned that he had not been summoned for four hours after the body had been found."

Mr. Remington said he found his brother's room had been ransacked.

FOUND A LETTER. "In the haste with which his various effects had been overhauled and dumped into his trunk by whoever this morning was done, it had been neglected to open the hat box that lay upon the floor," he continued.

A SIGNIFICANT LETTER. "I opened the lid and upon the top of it I found a letter addressed to my brother in his own handwriting. I opened it and read the contents. It was a copy of a letter written by him to another, and if there had been no other evidence of foul play this letter was a clue that was sufficient in itself to lead to startling developments."

"That letter is now in a safe deposit vault, and its contents will not be revealed until the proper time."

In telling of his visit to the Van Alen mansion in Newport, Mr. Remington says: "I sent word to Mr. Van Alen that I desired to see him, and in response to my message his private secretary appeared and said that the letters would be produced."

"It had been reported that I was intending to swear out warrants for the arrest of certain people, and he seemed immensely relieved when I informed him that I had then no intention of securing the arrest of people who had been more or less connected with the case."

"He then arranged to have me call upon Mr. Van Alen, and that I would also be able to see Miss Van Alen. I accordingly called upon Mr. Van Alen and requested to see letters that he had stated had been written to Miss Van Alen by my brother while in a peculiar, if not mentally deranged condition of mind. These letters were produced and I read them. In my judgment they were nothing more than the letters of a man to a well-to-do woman, who had written him and had allowed announcement to be made abroad that she was engaged to him."

NO TRACE OF INSANITY. "I told Mr. Van Alen this immediately after reading them. There was no trace of insanity or of disturbed condition of mind in them."

"Shortly after this interview I saw Miss Van Alen and recovered from her a number of letters that had been written by my brother."

"I have every reason to believe that Miss Van Alen loved my brother and that the engagement would not have been broken if she had had her way. Robert and Miss Van Alen were engaged when she sailed for Europe. They were still engaged when the positive announcement was sent from Paris, where Robert had followed her in April. They certainly were still engaged when he returned with her in July in a party among whom was Mrs. Astor. How much longer they were engaged I do not know."

"I do know that after my brother's death I was assured of the love of Miss Van Alen for him. Even when her family did not allow the tragedy to have any effect upon their social life Miss Van Alen donated mourning and she was wearing it when I last saw her."

"The engagement ring which was purchased in London in April last was returned to me and it is in the safe deposit vault with other evidence."

"Pathological investigations of the brain of my brother, who has been autopsied and written testimony also in the vaults waiting for the proper time to come. No one has access to those vaults save myself or persons designated by order of the court."

Richmond's Greatest Reduced Price Sale of Desirable Dress Goods. A Sale That for Quality and Class of Materials at the Prices Mentioned Must Stand Unique and Alone in Richmond. TOLD in a few plain words, the proposition is simply reduced to this. We bought Dress Goods broadly, almost bounteously, in extensive preparation for a full, long season of many demands, but the season grows late, while the frost and sunshine still play hide and seek. Warm days have been such a constancy that you have not felt the necessity for winter-weight dresses and heavy materials have been little in demand. Plenty of cold weather to come, undoubtedly, yet the conditions of to-day make it possible for you to prepare for the Mercury's fall, and to do so stylishly and attractively in dress goods at less cost than you ever did before. Mostly new materials, all reliable and desirable at an average of One Third of Original Prices. This first reduction of the season is a story that tells of wrecked profits and bargain-strewn counters. There is a price-surprise in every line of it—READ ON!

"What the result will be no one knows, but this much is certain—the end is not yet." WONT SAY A WORD. Miss Van Alen stood in the doorway of her room, No. 91, at the Hotel Cambridge, this afternoon and for twenty minutes was engrossed in the reading of the papers, but in every line, showing breathless interest in the startling details. To a reporter who asked her for some expression of opinion, she said: "I won't say a word on this thing. I must see my friend." She seemed to be laboring under great emotion, which she suppressed with difficulty.

Drop-stitch Stocking. VERY SHOCKING. Good Pastor Opposed Bright Colored Hose—When Malignant, Wearers Kicked Up Shiny, So He Resigned.

NEW YORK, November 17.—(Special.)—The Board of Consistory of the Old Bushwick Dutch Reformed church, Humboldt and Conover streets, Williamsburg, has come to the rescue of brightly-colored and lace open-work stockings by announcing the resignation of Dr. James C. Hume, as pastor.

Dr. Hume waged war on women's stockings of the fish-net variety, and also upon hosiery which was colored for the purpose of being attractive. The female members of his church rebelled. His resignation is the result.

In a sermon last spring Dr. Hume declared that a woman who put her feet in a stocking of flashy colors was taking a long step in the direction of perdition, but the pastor expressed his horror of a young woman who would wear the modern, open-work lace stockings in stronger language.

It was just coming on towards summer, and many of the younger women of his congregation had sought relief and beauty in stockings which consist of a piece of lace sewed together in the back. Dr. Hume said they were actually flirting with Satan himself.

The war was kept up all summer. Dr. Hume would not change his opinions on hosiery, and then members of the Board of Consistory were sought. Attendance at church began to drop, until recently it is said Rev. Dr. Hume had for auditors a murderer, which was taking a long step in the direction of perdition, but the pastor expressed his horror of a young woman who would wear the modern, open-work lace stockings in stronger language.

RIPANS. I had been troubled for over seventeen years with gas in the stomach, caused from indigestion. Six years ago I began to have dreadful distress spells and at times would suffer such intense pain that the doctor would give me a hypodermic of morphine to relieve me. In the spring of 1899 my stomach became so bad that I could take no food without suffering dreadfully. I thought I would try Ripans Tablets. The first one I took gave me relief, and I have never had one of those dreadful spells since. They have also helped my rheumatism. At Druggists.
