

FINANCES IN MANCHESTER

License Ordinance Brings in More Revenue Than Was Expected.

BAZAAR CLOSING TO-NIGHT

Swansboro Elects Delegates to State Convention—Declared Insane.

Manchester Bureau, Times-Dispatch, No. 112 Hill Street.

In figuring out the financial condition of the city, the treasurer showed last night that the Finance Committee displayed wisdom in revising the license tax ordinance.

The ordinance went into effect this year. The estimated increase to the income was $2,000. This was an under estimate. So far the increase is something like $3,500, $1,700 more than was expected.

Treasurer Brough said before the Finance Committee last night that his collections so far amounted to $5,373.34, as against $4,450 for the same period last year.

"In addition to the increase," he said, "those who require licenses are more prompt this year than before."

A large amount of this license increase came from liquor licenses, which were increased from $30 to $40.

The report of Special Collector of Taxes J. K. Reid shows $2,566.97 collected—$2,160.41 city taxes, $177.78 school taxes, and $177.78 sewer taxes.

STREET SWEEPERS. At the meeting of the Finance Committee last night a sum of $250 was appropriated for the purchase of a street sweeper, the request having come from the Street Committee.

The latter committee feels that a street sweeper is something needed very much and the Finance Committee in approving the sum sufficient to buy the sweeper is looked upon by those along the paved streets, as a consummation long desired.

Mr. Owen opposed the appropriation on the grounds of the low condition of the treasury, but Mr. Abbott's resolution appropriating the money was passed.

Those present at the meeting were Messrs. Bradley, Owen, Rudd, Perdue, Abbott and Huband and City Attorney Page.

BAZAAR TO CLOSE. The bazaar being held at Leader Hall by the "Daughters" and "Juniors" will close in a blaze of glory to-night.

The finest program of the week will be given on the closing night, when "Freeman and Wilson's Funsmiths" will give lots of laughter. They will present "Family Troubles," by Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and Mr. Freeman, and will be followed by the clever West End Angels and Misses Lucy, Hills and Williams.

Last night the entertainment was in charge of Professor Criffin. The Glee Club sang several selections with marked ability. The club consists of the following gentlemen: Messrs. Richard Hughes, Aubrey Williamson, T. H. Smith, Daniels, A. A. Adkins, James Baker, T. E. Johnson, J. M. Woodson, John Hughes, J. Henry Smith, Perdue, Criffin, and others.

GOT BETTER RESULTS. Councilman Ellett Does Not Regret Fight Over Pavement.

Councilman T. H. Ellett, of Lee Ward, is one of those who believe that the result of the fight over the pavement contract before the Street Committee resulted in saving money for the city, and therefore he is glad it occurred.

"You will recall," he said, "that the stiff fight put up by the bitulthite concern resulted in rejecting all bids and calling for others on modified specifications."

"Had the asphalt people won on the start," he continued, "the city would have paid $1.35 per square yard, whereas they got the new pavement for $2.30, finally saving 88 cents per square yard. It is true the first figures were for a concrete base and that lately they got iron and gravel, but it is nevertheless a fact that but for the fight, the city would have paid the higher price."

Mr. Ellett thinks Mr. Huber, who was voting for bitulthite, rendered the city great service in moving that new bids be called for.

PERSONALS AND BRIEFS. Miss Rachel Crenshaw is visiting Bon Air.

Rev. Theobald Clark, Baptist minister of Lunenburg county, was in the city yesterday to see the Rev. Dr. George Cooper, who is under treatment here by the Memorial Hospital.

Oppose Primary Plan. (Special to The Times-Dispatch.) BRISTOL, VA., June 3.—Many of the leading Democrats in Bristol and in Southwest Virginia counties are not pleased with the State primary plan, and argue that the primary should be when it comes to nominating for United States senators and for Governor, but that it should not be forced upon districts and counties. They think that each district, knowing its own conditions and what is best suited to them, should be allowed to exercise its own judgment as regards the method it will adopt with reference to the naming of candidates.

One time, they argue, a district might name a candidate, and another time it might be wisest and best that the convention plan should be adopted. Bristol will send delegates to the State Democratic convention at Richmond on the 8th instant to fight the primary plan was a general and sweeping proposition.

The Belated Debates of the Convention. Editor of The Times-Dispatch: Sir.—The whirlwind of time revolves so fast in these days, and the people, like the Athenians of old, are so eager to hear or to tell some new thing, that the events of great pitch and moment pass out of mind and memory as a tale that is told.

There have been matters in our recent history that ought not to be forgotten and put aside so soon; but rather ought to be cherished as we cherish the annals of Virginia for religious freedom, the Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence, great and notable landmarks in the progress of liberty.

Worthy of perpetual memory here and everywhere is the great debate in our late Convention between the members of the question of taking an oath by its members to support the (then) existing Constitution, known as the Underwood Constitution. That debate brought to the fore, and at their very best, some of the ablest and most conspicuous members of the Convention.

Braxton, made us all feel proud again that we were Virginians, and that the leaves of the old stock still grew in the soil of our State. Dan and Glass and Wyser and Thom and others too numerous to be named showed us the mettle of their name, and the view not sustained by the convention.

But the gem of the debate, in masterly logic and persuasive eloquence, was the speech of William E. Cameron, one of the delegates from Petersburg. If he had served the cause of the other side, the masterful debate, he would deserve well of the republic, for that splendid effort, too, the convention would have brought tears of pride to the eyes of many Virginian listeners.

It has been the misfortune of the people and of the members of the convention that the debates have never had the circulation they deserved. Published in rather crude form, and supplemented by news of the day, they made little lodgment in the minds of the people.

I have seen a few who heard the speeches that could rate them at their real value. Governor Cameron's speech was the talk of the city, and no one named him or his "wardly dialect."

It is to be hoped that the long incubating committee will soon give us the debates in some convenient form, and that enough copies will be published for a liberal distribution among the people.

Then let all who can "read, mark, learn and count" learn from this admirable speech; for it is a very horn book of liberty, and a worthy consecration of the fathers' and of that memorable time, have not been of that memorable time, have not been of that memorable time, have not been of that memorable time.

He Can Afford It. Because he believes that some of his property in Omaha, Neb., has been unjustly taxed, George A. Joslyn, the millionaire president of the Western Newspaper Union, has ordered the windows of the mansion he recently built there at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, turned his cows into the grounds which enclose the mansion, and has sought to beautify, and gone with his family to Saratoga, N. Y., to reside permanently.

Benson's "Dodo." The death of Stanley recalls many anecdotes not only of the great explorer, but of his beautiful widow, who was Miss Dorothy Tennant. She and her sister were brought into some unenviable notoriety by the late F. Benson's "Dodo," one of them is said to have inspired. While the novel was the rage the author wrote to Miss Tennant: "Dear Miss Tennant: The whole world is talking about you and my book. When may I call?" For reply he was told: "Dear Mr. Benson: Have you really written a book? How about of you? Call at any time. But she was never at home."
