ALTERNATIVE OF TWO SENTENCES

He Elected Paying Back Amount Which He Defrauded Government of.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

CHAS. SCOTT, JR., June 21.—D. L. Arey, the Salisbury distiller, who pleaded guilty in the Federal court to a violation of the internal revenue laws, was given the alternative of two sentences by Judge Boyd to-day.

He was given his choice of going to Atlanta Federal prison for two years and paying a fine of $5,000 and costs, or he may serve three months, two hundred dollars' fine and costs and refund to the government the amount he is alleged to have defrauded it of; in round figures $22,000.

After consultation Arey's counsel chose to refund the $22,000 and the sentence of three months. An order will be issued to-morrow holding open the three months' imprisonment sentence and binding Arey to appear later, and if his appeal is approved the imprisonment will be served.

DISCHARGED OF CONTEMPT. In the United States District Court this morning Judge Boyd discharged the rule for contempt issued against J. L. Sherrill, of Statesville, one of the five grand jurors indicted in connection with the divulgence of privileged evidence.

In the case of the other four each was fined $50 and costs, and counsel gave notice of appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Only one case, that of C. F. Atwell, will be appealed, the other respondents abiding by the decision in this case.

KILLED IN CHURCH. As the result of a quarrel over a woman lasting several months, John Wilson and Henry Maxwell, both colored, met at the Baptist Church, near Hope, well Township Presbyterian Church, early this morning and Wilson killed Maxwell with a pistol. Maxwell died in a few minutes and Wilson was made his escape.

FOR A LIFE. It is estimated that the crop of Orange amounts to about half a million barrels a year. The crop this year is very promising. Census reports indicate that the average yield of corn per acre is twenty bushels in both Culpeper and Albemarle.

Something over 100,000 bushels is said to be a fairly good wheat crop for Albemarle. The crop this year is not above the average.

Although the soil of Orange appears to be adapted to fruit growing, the county does not do much in this line. The value of the fruit crop is estimated never to exceed $15,000. At the last census it was estimated at $12,000.

Nor does Orange have as large a trade in dairy products as comparative nearness to Washington would appear to justify. It is estimated that the value of the butter and milk sold by Orange farmers amounts to about $15,000. The farmers of Culpeper sell more than twice as much.

Big Business. Orange sells at least a hundred thousand dollars' worth of live stock every year. The reputation of Orange bred thoroughbreds is all. We of this generation will live to see twice as many cattle and horses raised in Orange as at present. Limestone soil is best for racers, where hardness of bone is specially desired. The best of Orange stock is sold for much more than the market value. In addition to the hundred thousand dollars' worth of live stock sold by Orange farmers annually, it is estimated that half as much is butchered on the farms.

It is estimated that the live stock of Albemarle is worth about half a million. Five years ago there were 10,000 cattle, the same number of hogs, 3,400 horses and 7,000 sheep. I was told that all these figures are increased now, with the possible exception of those representing the number of hogs.

Though such a small county, Orange ranks sixteenth in the list of counties in the Commonwealth. Few came back, but are sleeping now in the bosom of the old State for which they gave their lives. Colonel George S. Shackelford, whose home is here, told me of a remarkable story connecting Orange county with a brother of the Burruss family, sturdy sons of Orange, good, honest, plain fellows, respected for their virtues, though they made no pretensions to lofty social position.

At the battle of Cold Harbor three of these brothers were killed within a few minutes of each other, and the other two were so badly wounded they died. I should like to know if there is any other instance of the death of so many brothers in one battle.

The monument erected in Courthouse Square to the memory of the fallen Confederates of Orange is probably the handsomest I have seen in Virginia. Montpelier, the home of President Madison, is there and a half mile west of Orange. It is now owned by Mr. William Dupont, the celebrated powder manufacturer, who resides there. Mr. Dupont, by the way, is probably the wealthiest man in Virginia.

Walnut Hill, the home of Governor Kemper for years, is about three miles from Orange. It is now occupied by Mr. J. P. Thompson and wife, the latter a daughter of Governor Kemper.

I might prolong this letter indefinitely while I talked about the beauties of Orange, but I desire to let you hear of the neighborhood of Somerset, on the line of the Southern, between Orange and Charlottesville, but to speak words of sober truth, the red mud of Orange county, resulting from a downpour that lasted all night and has not yet ceased, is a very effective obstacle to sightseers. Gordonsville, eleven miles away, a little town of great age, that surprised the world by taking on new life and starting to grow a few years ago, is worthy of a long letter. It shall have it, but not to-day.

WALTER EDWARD HARRIS.

UNATTRACTIVE FRONT DOOR

Orange hills, many of them outside the corporate limits. On all of these are beautiful views of the country, and the view from the hills, especially in the agricultural country, and immunity from malaria and mosquitoes. The fact that so many of these summits are beyond the corporate limits causes Orange to take a place in population tables below that to which she is entitled.

There are approximately a thousand people in Orange. And they are busier than the heat of a day like this at all justified—busier, in fact, than their neighbors in other Piedmont towns. It appears that it takes two nations of banks with combined assets amounting to over half a million dollars, to supply the financial needs of Orange business. That single fact would indicate the thrift and energy of the town.

But there are many others. Orange has a wholesale grocery house, which though established but about six months ago, is doing an excellent trade. Orange is fortunate in being so located that it is the natural shipping point for an extensive base country, and in this railway station and constant market for a large portion of Greene and Madison counties. Lumber, tanbark, cross ties and farm products are hauled from those sections to Gordonsville for shipment. A great many of these products are sold to Orange merchants and the actors haul home goods bought in Orange stores.

The firm of Greiner & Shackelford carries a stock of hardware valued at $20,000 and it is doing such a large business that it is erecting a larger store house—a large brick structure—in order to handle the growing trade.

Department Store. Orange has a department store that would not discredit a much larger town. Then there is a big steam flouring mill which does a very large business, chiefly in mill feed. The firm has a very extensive branch in South Carolina and North Carolina. Orange farmers cannot begin to supply the grain ground by these mills.

An extensive planing mill and moulding mill is another of the industries of Orange. The mill has an excellent reputation among builders in Piedmont.

It takes two hotels and two livery stables to supply the demand for board and lodging and teams for the traveling trade. The hotels are the Commercial Hotel, the livery business is good here as there is no railroad into Madison and Greene counties, where so many of the commercial travelers have customers. By the by, Captain Bill Williams, so well known in Richmond, where he was for years the proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, is now running the Morris Hotel here.

Orange is an oddly shaped county, forty miles long, and in places about eight miles wide. It was never intended that the shape had not the people of that section now known as Greene county become dissatisfied in 1837 and formed a new county from Orange. I should like to know something of the arguments advanced to favor the creation of a new county. They are not now remembered.

The County. Orange would be about as large as Culpeper had she not lost the territory included in Greene county. I was surprised to learn that the value of the improved land in Orange was valued at $1,000,000. The improved land of Culpeper amounts to 149,000 acres and that of Orange to 109,000 acres.

In all things relating to material welfare Orange is well in the front. The county is small but it is rich. Crops this year are uniformly good and the promise of a fine harvest is about to be fulfilled.

The value of the farm products sold by Orange is estimated to be about $1,000,000 over half a million dollars. The census people estimated it at about $550,000 and that was thought to be low. It has increased very much in the course of five years.

It is estimated that the crop of Orange amounts to about half a million barrels a year. The crop this year is very promising. Census reports indicate that the average yield of corn per acre is twenty bushels in both Culpeper and Albemarle.

Something over 100,000 bushels is said to be a fairly good wheat crop for Albemarle. The crop this year is not above the average.
