

THE FINEST CARD HAD SMALL CROWD

The Last Three Events Were Run in a Driving Snow Storm.

WINNERS GIVE LOSERS DINNER

Bookies Got First Real Jar When Nutwood Beat Monte Carlo.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31.—The finest card of the week drew the smallest crowd at 2 o'clock; soon a gale was blowing also, and the last three events were run in a driving snow storm.

The event of the afternoon was the third race, the Ox-nard dinner stakes, which went to Belmont's Okente. The winner had to set a dinner for those who lost, under the terms of the prize, and it is presumed August Belmont took today's host at dinner to the defeated contestants to-night.

The first event of the day was a contest of three-year-olds and upwards, good sport. Wincheater (8 to 1) took the cake, with Jack McKean, even money, second, and Sals (3 to 1) third, the world, but the judges surprised everybody by giving third place to Echo-lade.

Belmont's Okente (9 to 10) then took the Ox-nard dinner stakes, and Manila (1 to 1) ran in second, a length ahead of Lady Vera (2).

Then the bookies got the first real jar of the week, when Nutwood (60 to 1) took the third race by a nose from Monte Carlo (2 to 1), who was not a length ahead of Cannon Ball (6 to 5).

The fourth event was the steeplechase, in which Kuntz (6 to 1) finished first with ease, and Croxton beat Black Death for place.

Lucky, at 7 to 5, took the fifth; Sir Brinkley (4 to 1) finished some distance behind, but in second place.

The stewards substituted Miller for Cleve on Warning (1 to 2), a Virginia horse, who won in a canter; Zana, even money, second; Tarkie, not quoted, third.

Among the spectators in the grandstand, but not near the betting ring, of course, were Speaker W. D. Cantrill, of the Virginia House of Delegates; Horace Buchanan, Esq., of Ashland; Colonel Joseph Patton, of Appomattox, and George Lindsay, of Portsmouth, Va.
