ALUMNAE ELECTS OFFICERS

Congressman Flood Expresses Some Considered Obsolete Ideas on Education.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) STATE NORMAL SCHOOL, FARMVILLE, VA., June 9.—The commencement exercises of the twentieth session of the State Normal School began Sunday evening, June 9, with the baccalaureate sermon in the auditorium. It was delivered by Dr. Henry W. Battle, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Greensboro, N. C.

The class exercises occurred Monday evening with a double programme. Part one was as follows: Class song, "S. N. S. for Me"; History, Miss Virgie McCue; Poem, Miss Nellie Baker; Piano solo, Impromptu No. 2, Schubert, Miss Maud Mason; Prophecy, Miss Elizabeth Verser; Will, Miss Carrie Dungan. Part two consisted of a play, "The Man in the Case," in three acts, by Winthrop Packard, adapted to the needs of the present class by Dr. J. F. Messenger, honorary member, who was assisted by Miss Marie Louise Whiting in the arrangement of costumes and other details. The persons in the play were Mrs. Montross, lately from Boston; Merle Albert, son of Mrs. Montross's daughter; Lizzie Kiser; Doris, Mrs. Montross's niece; Frances Munden; Madame Bogusky, a theosophist; Mary Coleman; Gladys, a Normal School senior; Isa Compton; Aline, an Irish maid, who tries to appear French; Maud Mason. Especial mention should be made of Miss Mason, whose bright, sprightly work gave great pleasure to the audience.

The Alumnae Association met in business session at half-past 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, Miss Natalie Lancaster, class of 1900, presiding. Among other important matters, it was almost unanimously decided, after earnest discussion, to ask the Virginia Normal League to take charge, temporarily, of the Cunningham Memorial Scholarship Fund, now amounting to about a thousand dollars, and use it in helping needy girls. As soon as $2500, the desired amount, has been raised, the trust will be withdrawn, and the income from that amount be set aside as a permanent scholarship fund in memory of Mr. John A. Cunningham, once president of this school.

The following officers of the association were elected for another term: Mrs. Jean Caruthers Boatwright, '83, Lynchburg, president; Miss Isa McKay Compton, '06, vice-president; Mrs. Josie Winston Woodson, Farmville, secretary and treasurer.

The address to the alumnae was delivered Tuesday evening by Major Francis T. Lasater, of Petersburg, his theme being "The Virginia Woman of the Olden Time." Following the address, a delightful reception was given by President Jarman to the alumnae, graduating class and guests of the graduates, members of the board and of the faculty. A happy evening was spent in greeting the friends of other days and recounting experiences, grave and gay. Congratulations and good wishes were showered upon the graduates to-day.

The unusually large attendance of alumnae was very gratifying. Those present were as follows, by classes: Miss Lulu Phillips, '85; Mrs. Jean Caruthers Boatwright, '88; Mrs. Martha Berkeley Tuggle, '87; Miss Fannie Berkeley, and Mrs. Josie Winston Woodson, '88; Mrs. Dinah Gilliam Putney, '91; Mrs. Louise Twelvetrees Hamlett, February, '92; Miss Julia Davidson, June, '92; Mrs. Mary Boyd Flournoy, Miss Jennie Tabb, Mrs. Nettie Morton Scott and Miss Matilda Davidson, February, '93; Misses Rebekah Berkeley, Ruby Venable and Louie Morrison, '94; Misses Mattie Wainwright Whitehead, '95; Misses Laura Baldwin, Mary White Cox and Genevieve Venable, February, '98; Misses Anna Daniel and Mary Jackson, June, '98; Miss Nelly Preston, June, '99; Miss Kellogg Holland, January, 1900; Misses Yennie Cox and Natalie Lancaster, June, 1900; Miss Lillian Cheatham, January, 1901; Mrs. Jennie Jackson Roberts, June, '01; Misses Willie Moore and Fannie Smith, January, '03; Misses Lucy Wood, Helen Blackiston, Maude Clark, Ora Harris, Mary P. Powers and Marie Wade, June, '03; Misses Otella Har-

GRADUATES OF WILLIAM AND MARY

Small in Number, but Fine in Intelligence and Worth.

SICKNESS THINNED THEM OUT

They Are the Product of the Honor System That Prevails With Fine Success.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) WILLIAMSBURG, VA., June 9.—The William and Mary graduating class of 1906, although small in numbers, is by no means small in other respects. In it are some of the brightest men that the college has probably ever turned out. The class was at the opening of the present session composed of thirteen, and the usual ill luck attending that most feared of all lumbers has not failed to show itself in some respects.

In this case, from thirteen the class has gradually been thinned down to the present number by sickness, both here and at the homes of the students. But the class has, nevertheless, done good work, and taken a firm stand to preserve good order and to enforce the rigid observance of the honor system, that has gone so far towards making the college what it is to-day.

For what is a college but the student body? And their standards are the standards of the college.

The following is the list of officers as originally elected last fall: President, W. R. Wriglesworth; Vice-President, R. E. Henley; Secretary and Treasurer, R. B. Dade; Historian, W. B. Newcomb; Frother, J. H. Garner; Valetictorian, J. N. Hubbard. Thursday will be a happy day for the members of the class; perhaps the happiest in the lives of some. It will be the day long looked forward to and long anticipated; the day when, with proud step and conscious well-earned merit, they will boldly step forward to receive the degree of Bachelor of Arts of William and Mary College. But with the general happiness will be mingled pain, the ever present in this world, even in our greatest triumphs and joys. The students will then realize for the first time fully that they are no longer students, but are men trained to fight the battles of the world. It will be the day when the majority will bid a last farewell to college life and college associations, the most charming in the life of man. Old friends will bid each other good-bye, some of them probably never to meet again; certainly none of them
