

lashed the young man on the shoulder. "You're under arrest," he said. "All right, it's all right," the prisoner replied.

Wife Was There.
Just before the elevator started a slender, dark, very pretty young woman, the same one with whom Thaw had been sitting before he snatched away on his second of death, came rushing into the car. She threw her arms around the prisoner and kissed him.

"It's all right, dear," he answered, kissing her. "It's all right, and I fixed him. It's all right."
To a man who had been in the elevator before he was arrested the prisoner now turned. He opened his pocket-book and handed the man a $10 bill.

"I wish," he said, "that you would call up Mr. Andrew Carnegie and tell him I'm in trouble. I am Harry Thaw, of Pittsburg."

Thaw Locked Up.
When the elevator arrived at the ground floor the young woman who had kissed Thaw slipped through the crowd, quickly got into a big touring automobile and was driven away. Debbas took Thaw to the Tedesco Police Station. When Thaw was taken to the West Third Street Station, his pedigree was taken by the sergeant in the usual manner, and a search of his pockets disclosed cards bearing his name. After he had been locked up the police held, pending the arrival of the coroner, the following witnesses to the shooting:

At the station Policeman Debbas, who arrested Thaw, reported to the coroner, and said on handing the pistol to him, that White had ruined his wife, and that he was glad he had killed him. Fireman Brud, detailed at the roof, corroborated Debbas.

Lawyer "Dan" O'Reilly arrived at the police station soon after the arrest with Ted Sloan, the jockey, saying they were present to look after Thaw's interests. Another was permitted to see the prisoner.

What Son Says.
Lawrence White, a son of the murdered man, did not learn of the murder of his father until a late hour last night. He returned from the New Amsterdam roof garden about midnight. A reporter scolded him with the aid and intelligence that his father had been shot. It was learned from Lawrence White that his father had planned to go to Chicago. He said this afternoon on a matter of business, but for some reason not known at this time, the trip was postponed.

When the son reached his home at No. 12 East Twenty-first Street, he said that his father had left him at the New Amsterdam roof garden to go to the Madison Square roof.

"I have been home from college but a few days," said Lawrence. "Mother is at her country home at St. James, L. I. Father and I have had to go with him to the country for a few days. I have had a dinner outside."

Dined at Cafe.
"It was at home this evening when father stopped in. He said that he had declared the Philadelphia trip off, and that he was going to remain in town and dine. He invited me to go with him to the Cafe for a dinner. Another gentleman, a guest, dined with us."

"The three of us then got in an electric hansom and were driven to the New Amsterdam roof. Father had us there, saying he was going to the Madison Square roof. He said that he would see us later at home. I do not know anything of his movements after he left us at the New Amsterdam."

It could not be learned who the third person was at the Madison Square roof. White said that his father may have gone to the Madison Square roof on a matter of business, as he was a director of the garden.

At the Holland House it was late at night that Thaw's brother was registered at the house, but had gone out on a bicycle trip and probably had not learned of the tragedy.

Both Widely Known.
(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
PITTSBURG, Pa., June 25.—Harry Kendall Thaw is about thirty-six years old, and is the son of the late William Thaw, Senator of Pennsylvania, and the daughter of the late George Washington Thaw, a prominent banker and philanthropist.

Thaw is a brother of J. Copley Thaw, the Countess of Yarmouth, who was Alice Thaw, and also of Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, of Cumberland P. O. He is also a half-brother of Benjamin Thaw.

Mrs. William Thaw, mother of Harry, is on her way to England to visit her daughter, the Countess of Yarmouth. No reason for the shooting can be assigned by friends of the family in this city.

adson, assisting the latter in the construction of Trinity Church, Boston. In 1880 he became a member of the firm of McKim, Meade and White, architects, of New York, who have a world-wide reputation.

It is worthy of note that Mr. White was killed in Madison Square Garden in 1880 by a bullet from the tower which he had designed and in the tower of which he still kept an apartment.

Mr. White was well-known in Virginia, for it was he who restored the buildings at the University of Virginia after the fire there seven years ago. In 1880 he became a member of the firm of McKim, Meade and White, architects, of New York, who have a world-wide reputation.

Recently Engaged.
At the last meeting of the Board of Visitors of the University, Mr. White was employed to draw plans for a residence for President Alderman, and for a new University mess hall.

The handsome residence of Dr. Thomas Nelson Page, in Washington, is the work of Mr. White, who was probably considered the best architect in America.

Stanford White was a specialist in some reputation; an ardent fisherman and hunter, and a club man above all. His acquaintance was wide and varied and probably no man in New York had a better knowledge of the city in all its aspects.

Entire Department Re-Elected.
The Board of Fire Commissioners held its special meeting last night and elected members of the entire Fire and Fire Alarm Department for the next year. Chief W. G. Patten, First Assistant George C. Shaw, Superintendent of Fire Alarm, and Chief Engineer W. B. Jones, secretary, were re-elected, as was the entire department as it now stands, with a few changes and transfers.

Election of Officers.
At the weekly meeting of George E. Pickett Camp, Confederate Veterans, held last night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: Commander, Miles W. Cary; First Lieutenant, Commander, J. H. Second Lieutenant, W. H. Thompson, and L. S. Zimmerman; Chaplain, C. J. Chapman, W. E. Talley; Treasurer, C. T. Lohr; Surgeon, Dr. J. A. Hillman; Officer of Day, Commander, E. H. Hardy; and Lieutenant in Charge, H. First Virginia Regiment, who has been very ill, suffering from wounds received in getting up Dr. Brewer's Bluff, May 18, 1864, was reported not any better.

COMES LONG WAY TO SEE GOVERNOR
at Swanson's Face—Sees Ben Owen.

HAILS FROM ABINGDON
Catherine Hampton Tells Strange Story, Then Starts Back to Her Home.

A very weary and wayworn bit of femininity drifted into Governor Swanson's office yesterday morning. On her shoes lingered the dust of 800 miles of more, for this waif of a far country, with a firm and unshaken faith in the omnipotence of the Governor—as strong, perhaps, as the trust in his ability to speak of an invisible presence—had come to seek the aid and help of Governor Swanson, whom she quaintly observed, "has power to do anything."

The woman is Catherine Hampton, and her home is in Abingdon, where in her own words she has lived since the first of May.

She took to the roads and byways of the country, securing a friendly lodging and her sustenance from a friendly innkeeper, for obeying the scriptural injunction, except for one change of clothing, she brought neither scrip nor purse. The woman is one of those wisps of human frailty, which cast up from the ebb tide of life, are flung higher and higher, and every wind of the race, she is very gypsy-like, and appears to be more at home on the road than in a house.

Her Husband Dead.
The woman says that she was born in 1860, and that she was married fifteen years ago. Her husband, after eleven months of married bliss, was stricken with the disease of meningitis, and died in the State penitentiary of Tennessee for ten years. Three years ago she heard of his death, and since that time she has been one of the disconsolates.

Her hair is dark and her features, which are not marked by the marks of disipation or otalgia, are much tanned by the sun. She has evidently been more of the stress and strain of life than of its sun and calm, and, though strong and hearty, is much weatherbeaten.

Mr. Owen finally persuaded her to come to the City Home, and she was accordingly sent there in the ambulance.

Arrived there, she was shown to the woman's ward, but did not seem very much at home in it, and she was taken to the room with her hat off and her little bundle by her, she told something of her life.

"I don't have to stay here, do I?" she appealed. She moved uncomfortably. "I believe I'll go to Washington, and see the President," she said, and she was rather an unwise undertaking, for there was little more likelihood of her being satisfied there than here.

She told of her travels, saying that she never lacked for food or bed, as every one she met was kind to her, and she was taken to a woman in West Virginia who had given her a dollar and thirty cents. She was asked if she had any relatives in Abingdon. She said that she has a sister, who has a little son, and spoke of them very fondly. She said that she "hired out" to earn her livelihood, and that "wax" or "wax" she lived in the family of Dr. George Ben Johnston's father, adding, "I wish I could see Mr. Ben and Mr. Joe. They wanted me to come here with them, but I wouldn't leave my mammy."

Has Brother Living.
She said that she also lived with "Lawyer" Dickinson, as she described him, in Abingdon. She spoke of many people in Abingdon, and of many who have removed to Richmond. She has a brother, Tyler Castle, living in Russell county.

The woman does not seem to be dejected, or really mentally ill. Indeed, it is difficult to describe her at all. She is simply an earnest, pleasant, and simple-minded woman, who seems to be where her feet grow, weary and stop for a night's rest.

As the reporter arose to go she turned to him and appealed: "What must I do to go back to little Jimmy? He is the little boy that I ever loved." She sighed and her under lip trembled a little, and she looked ready to weep. But she calmed herself.

"I've had to live this life for fifteen years," which perhaps holds her story in a nutshell. "I'll go back to Abingdon to see little Jimmy," and picking up her little bundle she went out of the room and out of Richmond.

NEELY NOT BRONSON.
Peterburg's Forger is Not the Same Man as Richmond's. The police authorities of Peterburg sent the photograph and measurements of M. B. Neely, the man wanted for alleged pass forgery in this city, to the place, to Chief Werner yesterday, thinking he might be the same man as C. H. Bronson, who is in all here for forgery.

At the yesterday afternoon the identification were sent down to the jail to compare with Bronson. The picture showed that the slightest similarity, but the marks and scars on Neely's body, of which he had a great many in no way corresponded with any of those on the person of Bronson.

Improve Quality of American Meat
Sacred Cattle of India Brought Here at Great Expense by Texan.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
NEW YORK, June 25.—On the heels of the beef investigation, there have just been imported into this country seven particular species of cattle, which when they have reproduced and multiplied, are expected to furnish America with a superior quality of meat.

The animals, forty-six bulls, three cows and two calves, arrived a few days ago on the steamship Protea, and are now at the United States animal quarantine.

The importation of these cattle represents two years of pleading and argument with the Agricultural Department on the part of the Texas A. & M. College proprietor of a cattle ranch of 20,000 acres in Southern Texas, six months of search through all India, and many thousands of dollars. The purchase price paid for the cattle alone was about $5,000, and the duty $1,000.

WOMAN ARRESTED RESISTS OFFICER
Officer Belton Uses Force to Get Her to Patrol Box.

Mary Barber, a white woman, was arrested at College and Marshall Streets about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon for alleged drunkenness by Officer P. A. Belton.

The nearest patrol box was at Twelfth and Clay Streets, and as Officer Belton started up the street, the woman resisted being taken along and shouted that she would not be taken to the police station. Soon a large crowd of negroes and a few white people were following the two.

The woman was, quite frail, not weighing over a hundred pounds, but she made a strong resistance against reaching the patrol box.

A witness said that at last the policeman pulled and struck her over the head and face with an umbrella.

He said that the officer struck her several times later, and the people living along the street, who saw it, thought he would have been wiser had he gotten some one to help carry her along, instead of striking her.

At least several hundred people were around when the patrol arrived and took the drunken woman to the First Police Station.

CAUCUS NAMES CITY OFFICERS

of how all eyes of the Confederacy had turned to Richmond as the place for the Confederate memorial building, and said that the plan of a composite building had been conceived by those who desired that both institutions should be a success.

"Up to" the Council.
"What we want," he said, "is to establish a great auditorium, so greatly needed in this city. It is a splendid idea, and I greatly desire to see it consummated. It is up to this body to see that this thing is done. It will take some hustling to get it ready by 1907, but the generation of hustlers is not yet dead."

"We will have a Confederate memorial hall which will compare favorably with any of the great auditoriums in the country, and we will have an auditorium which will be ample for all purposes, and which will appeal to all conditions of the people of this country."

When Mr. Bryan concluded, Mr. Freeman spoke briefly and presented the resolutions passed by the Chamber of Commerce favoring the proposition.

The suggestion brought before the caucus by these gentlemen has already been set out at length in the papers. It is, briefly, that the Confederate Memorial Association will give $100,000 to the composite building and asks that the Council give $50,000.

The papers were referred by the caucus to the Common Council for action.

For Health Board.
At 8:50 o'clock the real business of the caucus was gone into.

Mr. Pollock offered a resolution, which was adopted, applying the rules of the Council to the caucus.

For the Board of Health, Mr. Gunst named Dr. Oppenheimer, and Mr. Bateson named Dr. T. D. Garcia; Mr. Pollock nominated Dr. Hoge; Mr. Maurer, Mr. James E. Phillips; Mr. Morton, Mr. E. T. D. Myers, Jr., and Mr. Peters, Mr. E. L. Bemis.

The president of the lower branch paid a fine tribute to Mr. Bemis.

Mr. James E. Phillips, nominated Dr. George Ben Johnston, and said his was not only a household word in Virginia, but in other States and in foreign lands.

Mr. Blair named Mr. James R. Gordon, and he paid him a splendid tribute and said he would be the "balanced wheel" of the board.

The first vote resulted: Oppenheimer, 53; Garcia, 39; Hoge, 46; Phillips, 84; Myers, 41; Bemis, 23; Johnston, 20; Gordon, 41. There were many changes from Myers to Bemis before the vote was announced.

There were some changes from Johnston to Bemis, and Mr. Phillips was not named, but the chair reminded the member that the vote had not been announced.

A great deal of lobbying was going on, and the chair had some trouble in maintaining order.

The chair announced that Messrs. Oppenheimer, Hoge, Phillips, and Johnston had been nominated, and nominations for other officers were called for.

Other Nominations.
Mr. Ben T. August was unanimously nominated for city clerk on motion of Mr. Pollock, and Mr. Ruskell and Mr. McDowell were named, respectively, for sergeant-at-arms and clerk of Council committees.

Mr. Pollock wished to nominate Police Justice Gratchfield, but the chair objected, and Mr. Batterfield did the honors. Other officers were named as follows: For City Attorney, H. R. Pollard; for Superintendent of the Water Works, E. Bolling; for Superintendent of Gas Works, W. P. Knowles; for City Engineer, W. E. Cuthaw; for Superintendent City Home, George E. Taylor; for City Auditor, W. S. Reid; for First Market, J. E. Sullivan; for Second Market, J. P. Flournoy; for Weighmaster, First Market, F. A. Bowry; for Inspector and Gauger, T. W. Joseph; for Inspector of Carts and Wagons, J. D. Taylor; for Grain Measurer, R. King; for Clerk of the Police Court—Edgar W. Taylor; for Bailiff Police Court—L. B. Gibbons; for Harbormaster—John A. Curtis; for Port Warden—J. R. Hopkins, L. Dougherty, R. Currie and J. J. Buchanan; for Collector Delinquent Taxes—Thomas C. Walker.

A large company of Mr. Cohn's friends and employees were on the street without, and they set up a wild shout when they heard the result.

Paulo Lennie Graves was made acting Police Justice in the absence of the Police Justice, and Messrs. E. C. Hicks and Chappell were renominated on the Board of Plumbing Inspectors. Mr. William T. Holt was named to succeed himself as police commissioner from Clay Ward, and the caucus, at 10:30 o'clock, adjourned.

Miss Dresser is Pretty and Clever, While Chassinio is a Wonder.

The Casino vaudeville bill this week is the best that has been presented to the patrons of the cool theatre at Reservoir Park. Messrs. Wells and McKee have set themselves a difficult task to furnish anything better during the summer season.

Jack Norworth, "The College Boy," in the raucous which marks the intellectual youth of modern acts of excellent style, and followed it with a very clever talk concerning "one Kelly," which endeared him to the audience. "The College Boy" concluded his "turn" by singing "Holding Hands," a lyric which he accused himself with having written and to which he sang a full half dozen encores, and finally retired hard pressed by cries for more.

Chassinio, a shadowgraph artist, made a big hit by his wonderfully clever work with both feet and hands.

M. Chassinio is Gallic, indeed, that his English vocabulary seems to consist of but two words—"Thank you," which he used on several occasions.

The shadows Jacques Bonhomme cannot make can be written down on a very small bit of paper. Animals, birds, comic faces and still life followed each other in quick succession, while a "Cuckoo" and "twist of the wrist."

James and Bonnie Farley did a song and dance turn.

Bonnie sang one of Edna May's old songs, and both danced to music furnished by the orchestra of Wooder and Fields, of happy memory.

The moving pictures were so good that the crowd stayed to see them before wending its way across the street to Idlewood with its 100 lights, where a variety of acts were presented, and a crowd of several thousand.

Arrivals at Hotels.
Among the Virginians at the Jefferson Hotel are Messrs. T. C. Watkins, Jr., and wife, Houston; W. G. Dunnington, Fernville; and A. Barnard, Norfolk. Mr. George Foster Peabody, of New York, the well known capitalist, is also at the Jefferson.

Mr. S. E. Rickford, of Hampton, and Mr. F. H. Ball and wife, of Columbia, are among the Virginians at the Richmond Hotel.

The following Virginia people are registered at Murphy's Hotel: Messrs. W. F. Brainerd, R. B. K. Roanoke; Frederick Elyner, Norfolk; William M. Perkins, Pulaski; R. B. Hug and wife, Petersburg; and Messrs. W. B. Aldred and Prof. W. B. Atwood, of Charlottesville.

Mr. H. H. Black, of Staunton, and Mr. J. H. Black, of Danville, are guests at the Lexington Hotel.

Mays Still at Large.
D. W. Mays, who is charged with criminal assault on Miss Emma Nicholas, is still unheard of by the police. His whereabouts are completely hidden, and there seems to be no clue as to where he may be. The Henrico authorities are still inclined to believe that he is hiding in the mountains near his old home in Charlottesville.

The Same Color.
