In addition to the mineral properties the chemist states that this water has a considerable excess of free gas, besides the carbonic acid, gas in combination, making it an exceedingly light water, with a fine flavor, delightful for table use, having no mineral taste whatever.

A HISTORY OF THE DISCOVERY OF BUCKHORN LITHIA WATER—Nature's Great Boon to Mankind

(Editorial from the Henderson, N. C., Gold Leaf, of September 15, 1904.) By THAD. R. MANNING.

No State in the Union, perhaps, has a greater diversity of resources than North Carolina. And in nothing is it richer than in mineral water, whose curative properties are recognized far and wide. The latest discovery of this kind is that of the Buckhorn Lithia Springs, one mile from Bullock, Granville county, on the line of the Durham and Keysville (Southern) Railway, between Oxford and Clarksville.

The story of the discovery and beneficial results obtained from the use of this water make interesting reading. The sons of Mr. B. T. Hicks, on whose lands the springs is located, while working in a field nearby, discovered a small stream gushing up out of a rock. The water looked pure and sparkling, and being thirsty, they stopped to drink. It had a marked effect, and they drank of it again, and repeatedly. Mr. Hicks was away from home at the time, having gone to a well-known spring in the western part of the State, seeking relief from an aggravated case of catarrh of the stomach. At the end of three or four weeks he returned home, apparently no better, and dejected in spirit.

When Mr. Hicks reached home the boys told him about the water they had found, and the peculiar effect it had upon those who drank it. They suggested that he try it; but he had lost all hope. If the water and medicine he had been using for so long a time were without avail, surely he did not expect to find relief from any water, or anything, on his own premises. But, incredulous as he was, like a drowning man grasping at a straw, he determined to give this water a trial.

There was no spring there—merely a small stream gushing up out of a rock. Perhaps no one would have thought of taking notice of it or drinking at such a place but boys. Mr. Hicks began drinking the water, and soon commenced to improve. The effect was marked from the very first. The man who went home a wreck is to-day a well man—strong, vigorous, hearty—a walking, living illustration of the marvelous curative powers of this wonderful water, after six or eight months' use of it.

After using the water awhile, and finding there was virtue in it, Mr. Hicks cut away the rock through which it had forced itself in a tiny stream all through the ages, undiscovered and unutilized, and released a bold spring, which flows at the rate of a gallon a minute. This, in brief, is the story of the discovery of this new elixir of life.

A gentleman from Baltimore came out to Mr. Hicks' on a hunting expedition. So impressed was he with the extraordinary activity of the water from this spring that he took a sample home with him and had it analyzed at his own expense.

The analysis shows it to contain double the quantity of lithia of the most celebrated lithia waters known. As a diuretic, alterative and laxative it has no superior. Its effect upon the stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder is very pronounced, and it is attended with the most beneficial results.

Kinston, N. C., July 15, 1905.
Buckhorn Lithia Water Company:
Gentlemen,—I received the case of water, and it was a godsend to me. I have suffered with kidney and bladder trouble a long time—have been operated on three times, and four very large stones taken from my bladder. Have been so I could not stand or walk for six months, suffering excruciating pains nearly all the time. Dr. J. M. Parrott, my physician, sent me six bottles of Buckhorn Lithia Water. I began to mend after using two or three bottles. With the case you sent me I have drunk twenty-one bottles, and I am now so I can walk around without pain. My case was one that baffled all the doctors that attended me, but I am now satisfied the water will cure me.

I shall always prescribe and recommend Buckhorn Lithia Water in the highest terms.
I am returning the empty case to you by express to-day. Please send me another case, as I do not want to be without the use of the water.
Yours very truly,
D. L. STONE, M. D.
