DOG LED THE WAY TO BABES IN WOOD

Little Girls Sent to Call the Cows Wandered Into Forest and Slept.

WASHINGTON, N. J., August 17.—Pearl Lindberry, aged six, and Cassio Anglo, twelve, who lives with the Lindberry family on their farm in Knowlton Township, under the Blue Mountains, were sent out Wednesday evening to bring in the cows for milking and got lost.

The woods leading up to the foot of the mountains are almost impenetrable. Yet the children wandered nearly three miles through the thicket. One of the cows had strayed from the herd, though it was the bell cow, and the two children, with night falling about them, went further and further into the brush, led by the sound of the tinkling bell and not heeding their direction. The bell seemed near at times and then far away, and oblivious to the danger of snakes, with which the woods abound.

BRIDE-ELECT FLEES. Only Seventeen, Decides She Does Not Like Fiance.

PITTSBURG, August 17.—Miss Myrtle, daughter of John R. Jones, superintendent of the water works at Berlin, disappeared last Tuesday, the day she was to have been married to Wilson E. Baker, a well-known young man of Greencastle. She was seen by her father at the home of friends in this city yesterday, and refused to return home and marry Baker.

SHOCK LINEMAN. Squirrels Scare Him Worse Than Many Volts Would.

WEST CHESTER, PA., August 17.—Climbing a telephone pole while at work near Chester Heights, George Cardwell, of this place, was shocked almost to death by a live wire when three small animals darted from a cable box and gave him battle. He captured one of them, and it proved to be a flying squirrel.

TO WED DAUGHTER OF GENERAL WHEELER. Miss Carrie Wheeler, Youngest of Four Sisters, to Marry Mr. Gordon Buck.

NEW YORK, August 17.—An announcement was made here and in Wheeler, Ala., yesterday of the engagement of Miss Carrie Peyton Wheeler, a daughter of the late General Joseph Wheeler, to Mr. Gordon M. Buck, of New York. The marriage will be celebrated in Louisville, Ky., last summer at the country house of the bride's family, in Wheeler, Ala.

Miss Wheeler is the youngest of the four daughters of the renowned fighter, who died last January. Her sisters are Misses Lucy L. and Annie E. Wheeler and Mrs. William J. Harris. She has a brother, Major Joseph Wheeler, Jr. Mrs. Harris was a volunteer nurse in Cuba during the Spanish-American War.

Miss Carrie Wheeler is pretty and talented, and still in her teens. At the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans at Louisville, Ky., last summer she was the sponsor for the South, and her appearance in the hall with her aged father was the signal for a notable demonstration. She is quite well known in New York, having been a member of the Younger set in society while General Wheeler made his home at the Wakarusa, Astoria.

Mr. Buck, like his fiancée, is a Southerner and has resided here for several years. He is a lawyer and belongs to the University Club and the Southern Society. He was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1894.

Guilty!

He who tears down for the joy of it, or for the attention he may draw toward himself, should himself be torn down. But he who points out the evils of the time and indicates how they may be remedied; he who points to the good that is being done, and the good that may be done—he, we believe, has a place in our progressive, active, strenuous, earnest American life—whether "he" be a man or a magazine.

Just pick up the September number of Everybody's and look for the "tearing down."

See Russell—how he pictures the abolition of slavery in Australia—didn't you know there was actual human slavery there six years ago? How a small body of workingmen did work too big for experienced and able legislators—controlling strikes and a land-domination equal to our Trust and Railroad domination. Read Marion Melius' account of the big, broad-minded, progressive, but simple plan by which Springfield, Massachusetts, is bringing her children of low intelligence and small opportunities up to the higher level. Then Teague showing how victims of bucket-shop swindlers can recover their losses, and how bucket-shoppers can be driven out of business, leaving the field clear to legitimate investors and saving the millions, and the honor, and even the lives of good Americans.

The Judge, the Pharisee, and the Publican.

Two went to pray; or, rather, say One went to brag, the other to pray; One stands up close, and treads on high, Where the other dares not stand his eye. The other to the altar goes.—Anon.

Most pictorial of parables! On background of temple these antipodal worshippers live and move and have a being. Jesus deals in no abstractness or generalities, no vague ratiocination. He just personifies, incarnates, concretizes truth.

How true the Pharisee is to his name, which signifies "separated!" He stands apart to avoid ceremonial pollution, and to be more conspicuous. He strikes an attitude. He is statuesque. He is in full "stands up close, and treads on high."

He gets as close to the holiest place as a layman dares to tread. With outstretched palms and upturned eyes, he begins his self-laudation before the Deity. "I thank Thee"—that is a promising prelude. But the next syllable dashes us with disappointment. He does not say, "I thank God as the Author of his good character or happy environment. He does not say, "But for the grace of God I might be an auditor, or a publican. Depreciation would have followed a sincere confession of sin."

He passes now from the denial of his gross sins to the affirmation of his good character. He is an uncomprehending man. He is an uncomprehending man. He is an uncomprehending man. He is an uncomprehending man.

How about our Church-goers of to-day? Are their likenesses to be found in this parable? The age-old contrast still maintains the conflict. One is still "works" and "faith." The effort to merit heaven is a struggle of good deeds; all tends to pride, complacency, self-righteousness. This "deadly doing" must be laid down, all down at Jesus' feet.

A parallel Bible-reading

1. The Character of the Pharisee: "For thus saith the high and lofty one that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones." (Isa. lvii, 15.)

2. Why the Pharisee was unheard: "But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid His face from you, that He will not hear." (Isa. lix, 2.)

3. The Humbling of the Proud: "And the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled, and the eyes of the lofty shall be humbled." (Isa. lv, 5.)

4. Good near to the Humble: "For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones." (Isa. lvii, 15.)

5. God near the Penitent: "The Lord is high upon them that are of a broken heart; and saved such as be of a contrite spirit." (Psa. cxlv, 18.)

6. The Exaltation of the Humble: "When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up; and he shall save the humble person." Job xxii, 23.)

Newspaper Tributes.

On the demise of the late Henry Clay Payne, a concern in New York gathered from the papers published throughout the United States 4,685 newspaper stories of the life and career of the deceased. These items were carefully mounted on Irish linen leaves and bound in 6 volumes, 400 pages to the book. A cover of genuine seal was appreciably lettered in gold and the entire material, representing the work of many people for several months, has just been delivered to Mrs. Payne at Milwaukee.

Mr. Barwell, who makes a specialty of this unique method of preserving family history, also compiled four volumes containing the letters, telegrams and cards of condolence received by the family, all constituting a family heirloom that will be handed down to future generations.

There is one of the several developments of the press clipping industry and Mr. Burr Reilly has made a special study of the work he created several years ago.
