

Johnson newspaper writers, who witnessed the tragedy, declared in turn upon the portrait that Thaw impressed them as decidedly insane. L. L. Straus, a portrait painter and an eye-witness, also characterized Thaw's actions as irrational. Francis McGuinness, who was a member of the coroner's jury, testified that Thaw at the inquest appeared irrational, while Henry Schaefer, another member of the coroner's jury, was testifying Thaw appeared irrational at the inquest. Foreman Drémalla put a question to the jury: "Did Thaw's eyes appear then as they do now?" he replied the witness.

Richmond Man as Witness. Mr. Albert Leo Thaw, of Richmond, a son of William Simmons Thaw, was the first witness called after recess. Annie Brooks was his mother, and three children were born to the union. The witness said he had a brother named Horace A. Thaw, and that he had seen Harriet Alice Thaw, who was his father's half-sister. He said his grandfather's name was Harriet Alice Thaw. His great-grandfather was Benjamin Thaw. He said he knew Harry Thaw's father, who was his father's first cousin.

The witness was tall, with clear-cut features, close cropped mustache, high forehead and broad brow. He was attired neatly in a dark business suit, with a turndown collar and small black tie. He described himself as a merchant, and gave his address as Richmond, Va.

The witness said his father died in 1855, at the age of sixty-nine years. He saw him frequently up to the time of his death. Then Mr. Littleton asked the witness about his father's mental condition. Mr. Jerome objected, on the ground that the mental condition of the man referred to would have no bearing on the defendant's mental condition. Justice Downing permitted Mr. Littleton to proceed. His father died in an insane asylum, after having been in an inmate of the institution for fourteen years. He said there was no unsoundness of mind among his mother's people or in the Simmons family, one of which was his grandmother. He knew Harriet Alice Thaw, who had been taken to the Friends' Asylum, Philadelphia. Horace S. Thaw, his brother, he said, died at the age of twenty-three, in the Western State Hospital for the Insane in Virginia. That was in 1870. Horace S. Thaw, the witness said, in answer to a question by Mr. Littleton, was in a disturbed mental condition about a year before he went to the asylum.

Cross-examined by Mr. Jerome, the witness traced the branches of his family, and said Harriet Alice Thaw was his aunt. He could not remember the first time he saw her. On redirect examination the witness said he did not know Alice Kendall Thaw. He was positive that Harriet Alice Thaw, was insane for twenty-five years, before she went to an asylum. He analyzed the testimony of the Richmond witnesses.

The commitment papers of William S. and Horace Thaw were introduced in evidence.

Was Absolutely Crazy. Several additional members of the coroner's jury were called to the stand and all agreed that Thaw was an irrational man the day following the shooting. One of the jurors called, said he was sure Thaw was absolutely crazy.

After the coroner's jurors, ten of them altogether, had been disposed of, Mr. Littleton called Per August Weber to the stand. Weber served as a butler in the Thaw home in Lafayette Square, Washington, from January to May, 1902. The witness said he formerly was in the employ of Senator Foraker of Ohio.

He related many incidents of what he described as irrational behavior on the part of the defendant. Thaw would order that no dinner be prepared on certain evenings and a few hours later would come in and demand to know why there was nothing to eat. He would call the butler out of his bed and give him $5 for some trifling service. Thaw would sometimes pace the floor of the dining-room in the midst of dinner, muttering to himself. Once Thaw called for a carriage at 2 A. M. and when one was not available became hysterical and fell prone on a couch. During the irrational outbreaks, Thaw would say, "Thaw's eyes were shiny and had a vacant stare."

Mr. Thaw went to Mattewan. Criminal lawyers of prominence, who are following the case outlined by the defense and who are taking into consideration the fact that a specific plea of insanity has been entered in the case, declare that several circumstances can be considered under the added clause "On account of the insanity of the defendant at the time the act was committed, he is declared, would compel the jury to find that Thaw was sane at the time of the shooting, and thus gain freedom, would have to be conducted through habeas corpus proceedings.

FIVE SKATERS ARE LOST

Two broke through ice and three others of Hunt and the following: CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., January 15.—Of six persons who formed a skating party at the Huntown Reservoir, near here tonight, five were drowned. They are: John Brown, nineteen years old, Jimtown, Pa.; George W. Brown, twenty-one years old, of Spring Grove, near Jimtown; Frank Cochran, Jr., a brother, seventeen years old; William Fulmer, twenty-three years old, of Jimtown; Elmer Fulmer, seventeen years old, a sister.

Miss Fulmer and George Cochran started toward the center of the reservoir, but had not gone far when the ice broke, and they were thrown into the water. As the other members of the party gazed horrified at the spot where Cochran supported the girl with

DEFENDS THE PRESIDENT

Mr. Treat Declares Mr. Roosevelt Was Not Responsible for Panic. COLUMBIA, S. C., January 15.—At the annual dinner of the Columbia Chamber of Commerce, this evening, Hon. Charles H. Treat, treasurer of the United States, was the principal speaker. He was given a great ovation by the 300 or more representative citizens gathered from all sections of the State.

Mr. Treat's subject was "Some Financial Suggestions." Among other things Mr. Treat showed that the United States government through the Secretary of the Treasury, backed up the President, had aided all the sections of the country, without special privilege to any.

Mr. Treat said figures which he gave fairly illustrated that the deposits of the treasury were not where they were most needed to move the crops of the South, and that much of the money deposited in New York City banks was afterwards loaned to Southern banks, so that the South got not only the use of the money, but also a deposit of those made to the banks of the North.

SCENES OF ANGUISH AROUND THEIR DEAD

Old and Young Gather Around Morgues in Boyertown to Identify Bodies. WERE OVERCOME BY FUMES

BOYERTOWN, Pa., January 15.—Bearing up bravely under the awful blow which it received in the destruction of Rhoads's Opera House by fire on Monday, this thriving little borough today came to the attention of the fact that one-tenth of its population was wiped out of existence by the holocaust. The figures compiled by Coroner Strasser at nightfall show that there are 170 dead as a result of the fire.

The list of dead includes one fireman, who lost his life fighting the fire, and one man, Jacob Johnson, who died to-day from injuries received in the blazing playhouse. Three charred bodies were recovered from the ruins of the building to-day, and of the 168 bodies or remains that lie in the improvised morgues 115 have been officially or partially identified by sorrowful relatives or friends.

Few Could Be Recognized. Few of the bodies could be recognized by the living, as in many cases the upper portion of the corpses was seared or burned to a crisp. A detail of State police held the anxious crowds in check around the improvised morgue, and those seeking missing relatives or friends were compelled to pass in to view the bodies in order. The scenes at the morgues were heart-rending. Children of tender years were in some cases called upon to assist in making the identification of parents and friends who were hurriedly called to the scene of the death in the fire and panic, and who were unable to view the bodies in order.

Before any of the bodies were removed from the morgue Coroner Strasser empaneled a jury to view the remains and the scene of the fire and to sit at the inquest. The jury made an inspection of the ruins and went through the morgues. No date has been fixed for the inquest. Coroner Strasser opened an office to-night in the Mansion House, and established a bureau of information, where he granted death certificates and signed insurance policies. In this connection, representatives of scores of insurance companies are in Boyertown paying off claims as fast as they are presented.

All Undertakers Busy. There were fifty-five undertakers or their representatives in the town to-day, and there was plenty for them to do, as all were urged upon to keep the remains for inspection and identification. There are several trunks that will probably never be identified as there were several strangers in the audience. Building Inspector Headman, of Reading, who made an inspection of the opera house, which was destroyed, says to-night: "In my opinion the people in the hall were overcome by the fumes from the tank used in connection with the lighting, and, as they could not help themselves, I am told that he reached in the doorway to assist a woman from the building, and that he was nearly overcome by gas. He was not in the hall when the first explosion occurred, and his grandson, who were supposed to have been killed in the fire, and Mrs. John Dyer, another supposed victim, turned up to-day. A committee has been appointed to arrange for the proper burial of the dead.

SEVERE PENALTIES FOR TAKING BRIBES

Senate Therefore Adopts Cullerton Resolution Asking for One. WASHINGTON, D. C., January 15.—The Senate did not receive a reply to the Cullerton resolution, which was referred to its resolution calling for information concerning the financial situation, an had been promised, and consented to the passage of Senator Cullerton's resolution on the same subject. The Senate passed a joint resolution reducing from $24,440,073 to $11,655,482 the war indemnity of the United States, which was ordered by the Executive in 1900. The remainder of the session was devoted to the discussion of the penal code bill.

Calling up his resolution directing the Secretary of the Treasury to communicate to the Senate the amount of the unpaid interest on the Panama bonds to which was awarded the award of the bonds. The secretary had responded to the resolution adopted before the holidays, calling for specific information as to the amount of the bonds issued, and was told by the Vice-President that he should refer to his desk. Senator Aldrich stated that he had no objection to having the bill reported to the Senate, but that he would not support it. The bill to codify the penal laws of the United States, which was passed as the unfinished business and occupied the remainder of the day.

Bill Offered to Establish One With the Government Holding Control. WASHINGTON, January 15.—The establishment of "The United States National Bank of America" is provided for in a bill introduced in the House to-day by Mr. Forney (Democrat), of New York. The bank is to be located in Washington, and is to have a capital stock of $100,000,000, divided into 100,000 shares of the par value of $1,000; three-fifths of these shares to be purchased by the United States Treasury at par, the purchase price to be raised by the sale of $50,000,000 of United States bonds, payable in fifty years and bearing 3 per cent. interest, the same to be designated "United States currency bonds"; two-fifths of the shares are to be offered for not less than par to the national banks of the country, to be paid for in gold coin.

made in the bill itself. An amendment by Mr. Cullerton to make the application of the law "willfully and negligently" fail safely to keep the money entrusted to their care was lost. The Democrats waged an unsuccessful fight against a committee amendment which modified the statute prohibiting the discharge of officers and clerks from trading in public property so as to make the penalty "not more than" $3,000, instead of the specific amount. An amendment by Mr. De Armond, of Missouri, to add imprisonment of not more than one year, or both, was defeated. He then changed it to make the imprisonment not more than one year. Amid loud Democratic applause the amendment was accepted by the committee. Kuefermann, of Wisconsin, declared that the trouble with the bill was that there were too many lawyers in the House to discuss it. If, he said, the lawyers would retire, and let manufacturers, the merchant and the farmer have their say, they would do the work and the bill would be passed.

Party lines were obliterated on an amendment to section 108 by Mr. Crumpacker, Republican, Indiana, limiting the punishment to any "material" statement which he knows to be false. Giving and Accepting Bribes. The amendment was rejected. Amendments so Section 112 relating to the soliciting or accepting of bribes by Senators or members came thick and fast. Mr. Randall, of Texas, offered two, the first making it a misdemeanor for any Senator or member or judge of a United States court any free transportation of person or property, frank or franking privilege, money or anything of value, making it a misdemeanor to receive the same under penalty of a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment for one year or both; and the second making it a high misdemeanor for any Senator or member of the Senate to receive any pay for any employment or service as an officer of any bank or public service corporation, and providing a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment of not less than one year and infelicitously to hold a public office or to receive a salary or other benefit in connection with a clause applying the penalty to any Senator or member when the bribe is given to any person, "with the consent, connivance or concurrence" of such Senator or member. The amendment was allowed to go over until to-morrow.

Section 113 was also strengthened by an amendment which punishes the bribe-giver when the bribe is given or offered "with the consent, connivance or concurrence of any Senator or member." A vigorous protest against the purchase and sale of indorsements or support for public offices was made by Mr. Hardwick, of Georgia, who offered an amendment to the present statute so as to include in addition to Senators, Members and Delegates in Congress, every person whomsoever who may violate the law in that respect. Mr. Hardwick said that he desired to have clean lines in the matter of such indorsements, particularly in the Southern States, where he charged appointments were frequently auctioned. Mr. Williams offered an amendment making the whole statute applicable only to "appointive offices or places." No objection was made by any one to the amendment, but in order that the subject might be more thoroughly considered, the bill was laid aside and the House adjourned.

Stamp Out Before-Day Clubs. COLUMBIA, S. C., January 15.—Representative Rucker introduced a bill to extend the law relating to before-day clubs and other negro secret societies to procure licenses from clerks of court and making attendance upon meetings of unlicensed societies a crime. It is aimed at the before-day clubs and other negro secret societies. Grayson had a bill making it unlawful for any person to be present at any meeting or assembly for the purpose of assault or homicide case to plead self-defense unless he was on his own premises.

KILLING OF MR. DEW. Native of King and Queen and Well Known in West Point. WEST POINT, Va., January 15.—Mayor H. Eastwood returned last night from Norfolk, where he was called by the sudden death of Robert S. Dew, who was weighmaster of the Southern Railway Company at Pinners Point. Mr. Dew was found on the yards at Pinners Point Friday afternoon while yet warm, dead and cut to pieces by a train. No one knows how it happened.

Mr. Dew was born in King and Queen, and was fifty-eight years of age. In 1871 he married Miss Rebekah Henley, daughter of the late Dr. Thomas Henley, so well known in business circles and came to West Point to live about twenty-five years ago. It was then he accepted a position with the Southern Railway Company (then the Richmond and Danville, Va.) and he remained there until he died. He leaves a widow, one son, Calvin, and three daughters, Mary, Ernestine and Pearl, all of whom remain in the town. He was a member of the Disciples' Church. Mrs. Dew is a sister of Mrs. A. W. Eastwood, of West Point.

Funeral of Mr. Christian. The funeral of Mr. Frank Wood Christian took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from Grace Episcopal Church. The services were conducted by the Rev. Landon R. Mason. The church was crowded with people who had known Mr. Christian and esteemed him. The Rev. Landon R. Mason, of the Richmond bar, was especially notable, and his address was a most interesting and profitable to the great of their number.

The Richmond Bar Association, with Judge John H. Ingram in the chair, appointed yesterday afternoon a committee of which the Hon. Wyndam R. Meredith was chairman, to draw up resolutions of respect, which were ordered spread on the court records of the city. A special mark of honor to Mr. Christian all the city courts were closed yesterday.

The following were the pall-bearers: Honorary—Messrs. Hill Carter, Alexander Hamilton, William H. White, James H. Boyd, James M. Alexander, George Hayes, Colonel John B. Purcell, Mann S.
