HOP LEE WAS FOXY

Known Nothing of Trouble, So Woo King Had Assault Convicted. The hearing will be concluded on Friday, when the telegraph, telephone and canal companies will appear.

As a result of a difficulty over a laundry ticket, in which Woo King got hit over the nut with a galvanic battery, Andrew Hall, who was the result, was fined $1 and costs in the Manchester Police Court yesterday.

In order to expedite matters before the court Woo King invited Cousin Hop Lee over from Richmond to interpret his jargon. The assessment was pointed to Hop Lee. When Hop Lee was questioned as to his part in the dispute he said, "Me live in blig, me know nothing."

Nothing could be more lucid than his chain of evidence. Hall was fined, at which Woo King winked at Cousin Hop Lee, and Hop Lee hopped back home.

Stewart, who died at the battle of Big Loxley, Miss., was taken to-day by the United Confederate Veterans in a general order which Adjutant-General and Chief of Staff William B. In conclusion, the order says: "He was dearly loved by the soldiers of his command, who playfully and lovingly called him 'Old Steady' on account of the simplicity of his character. Quiet and modest in manner, unostentatious in speech, a born leader of men, quick to detect the weak points of an adversary, and to push all to an advantage; strict in the execution of discipline, yet kindly and approachable at all times, he justly merited the high position he attained, and may be proudly pointed to as a type of Southern soldier and gentleman."
