

Commissioners had been sent to Richmond. So that, for the purpose of investigation, every fact that had been established as well as before the poll books were taken. Certainly, nothing in my favor was accomplished by the taking of the poll books. Fortunately for me, the original returns of the commissioners were in Richmond, otherwise the taking of the papers would have been very much against my interest, as I would have had to establish my seat by legal proceedings. It was, no harm was done to any one, further than to furnish a pretext for a cry of fraud on the part of some of my political enemies.

"I immediately declared that if it were shown by any reliable evidence in a contest, that there was no fraud in my favor in the election, or that the papers had been taken by any one friendly to me, I would at once resign. I did not ask for proof of the facts. If there had been any substantial evidence which would raise even a suspicion of fraud, it would have been sufficient, and I would have sent in my resignation. To have done otherwise would have been to charge myself with a crime of which I believed myself entirely innocent.

Republicans voted for him. "I was opposed in the election by an independent Democrat, and the white Republicans and negroes united with the regular Democrats in voting for me. Only two votes were cast against me at my own precinct, and only one at the larger county, so that it would have been very easy to show fraud if any existed. It was shown who those fifty voters were, and I publicly stated that if it were shown that one single other voter had voted against me, his vote had not been counted. I would resign. I did everything I thought an honorable man could do in the premises.

"No evidence of any kind whatever was ever produced of any fraud in the election; no charge of fraud was made, except by my political enemies, who specified nothing, and who did not have enough faith in their own charges to inquire into them when every opportunity for investigation was open to them, and an investigation was made.

"To show that the people here do not connect me in any way with this matter, I will state that at the last election, with the liquor element organized and earnestly desiring my defeat, and with no effort on my part, I received at my own, the courthouse precinct, 125 votes, while my opponent received only eight. Not the slightest question as to my election was raised. A very large number of the most reputable and honest citizens of Brunswick and Lunenburg counties, the other counties which in 1879 formed with Nottoway my senatorial district, are supporting me now, and my friends in those counties tell me that I will receive a very much larger vote in any of them than I received when a candidate for the State Senate. I will get several times as many votes in Nottoway county as my opponents combined.

"Now that I have stated the facts, I wish to state with all the candor possible that I did not know then, and do not know now, who took those papers from the clerk's office, and I haven't the most remote knowledge of why they were taken.

"And further, I have not the slightest reason to believe, and do not believe, that there was fraud practiced in my favor, but on the contrary I believed at the time, and believe now, that I received a majority of the votes, and was honestly and fairly elected."

"Thereupon the News Leader, which was opposed to my nomination, realizing that it had done me injustice in publishing the charge, after stating that it was a noble citizen, did the amenable honorable in the following editorial statement:

"We like the prompt, strong, frank way in which he answers charges against his integrity and sincerity. His answer seems to us to be complete and to tell the truth on the charge of hypocrisy. His answer is manly and straightforward. A man may be wrong, and to our way of thinking, foolish, but so long as he is a real man, honest and fearless, and looking at the world as it is, we can honor and respect him. Judge Mann's promptness and frankness in meeting his accusers impresses us most favorably."

"Why He Voted for Rhea. "In regard to my action touching the confirmation of Judge Rhea, I wish to say that, as a member of the Committee on Confirmed Judges, and as a member of the General Assembly of Virginia, I voted for his confirmation because the evidence produced before the committee compelled me to do so.

"Without my knowledge and against my wish, I was placed on the joint committee on the appointment of the Governor were referred to me. I had not the slightest reason to believe that confirmation of any of His Excellency's appointees would be opposed. But the committee was careful and conservative in its action, and having met and adjourned on the same day, in order to give to any one desiring to do so the opportunity of objecting. Notice of this meeting and its object was published in all of the Richmond papers, and when the committee again assembled, there being no objection from any one, all of the Governor's appointments, including Judge Rhea, were unanimously recommended for confirmation. On my way to the joint Assembly, to which the Committee on Confirmations made their report, I heard for the first time that Judge Rhea's confirmation would be opposed.

"It was opposed by Senator Noel, a Republican from Lee county, who had not reduced his protest to writing, and had no evidence to support it, although he had known for months that Judge Rhea would be appointed. I knew something of political conditions in the Ninth District, and thought then and think now that Senator Noel's protest, and opposition to the confirmation of Judge Rhea, was a political device to create a political difference between Judge Rhea and himself, and the splendid and successful fight made in the Ninth District by Judge Rhea against the growing power of the Republican party. Judge Rhea's appointment, made with the approval of Judge Martin, Williams, of Giles, and Mr. Stuart, of Washington county, the only Democratic member of the Legislature from the Ninth District, as I now remember, and their recommendation gave me an edge. If, indeed, any was necessary, that our Governor would not have appointed Judge Rhea unless he had been entirely satisfied that he was in every way fit and worthy of his office, and that the objection to him was made for political reasons.

"It is impossible to go into this matter as I would like to do because too much space would be required, and, therefore, I am condensing as much as possible and leaving out much which would be interesting and which I would like to put in.

"Did Not Know Evidence. "The unanimous recommendation of the committee for Judge Rhea's confirmation was referred back to it. I did not, as one of the Richmond papers stated at the time, say that I knew the evidence in the case. I did not know any of it, and heard it for the first time from the witnesses before the committee. What I did say was that I knew something of political conditions in the Ninth District, and I believed the objections made were for political effect.

"The committee went very fully into the evidence, and at its request a resolution was passed pledging the State to the payment of witnesses' fees and mileage, and that the Senator making the protests every facility to prove that Judge Rhea's nomination should not be confirmed.

"After a patient hearing of all the evidence, and after Judge Rhea had appeared at the bar and by witnesses of the highest character and standing that he was a man of high character, and as no witness was introduced on the other side to controvert this, I considered the evidence as established, and his ability and integrity conceded. His ability and capacity were not even questioned, and as the charges were not proved, nine out of ten members of the committee reported that the charges against Judge Rhea were not sustained, and that there was no reason why he should not be confirmed.

"This report was sustained by an overwhelming majority of the Legislature. Roanoke Convention Sustained Action. "If any doubt existed at the time of this action, surely it ought to be put at rest by the resolutions adopted, without a single dissent, by the Democratic members of the Ninth District, and which are as follows:

"Whereas, Judge William F. Rhea has all his life been a citizen of the Ninth Congressional District, and has twice represented said district in Congress and has held various public positions; and

"Whereas, we have known him well during all these years, and we deem it proper, in view of certain recent events, to give some expression of our confidence in the integrity and ability of our citizen and public official; therefore, be it

"Resolved by the delegation from the Ninth Congressional District of Virginia attending the Roanoke convention, that we hereby express our most confident confidence in the integrity and ability of Judge Rhea and in his fitness for the high position he now occupies, and we endorse the action of the Governor and General Assembly of this State in his appointment and confirmation, and we also desire to extend our thanks to the Hon. A. A. Phlegar, Hon. R. T. Tate, Hon. A. A. Campbell and Hon. E. F. Buchanan for their voluntary and patriotic denials of Judge Rhea before the legislative committee.

"Surely the gallant Democrats of the Ninth District, who know Judge Rhea personally and who adopted these resolutions, are entitled to the confidence of the people of Virginia, and justify the committee in the conclusions reached. I believed then and believe now that I was right in voting with the committee and Legislature for the confirmation of Judge Rhea.

"His Confederate Record. "There is nothing in my Confederate record of which I am ashamed. In fact, I have always felt what I believed was it pardonable pride in the fact that a very important part of my boyhood was spent as a volunteer in the military service of the Confederacy. I take pleasure in relating the small service I was able to render in that great struggle for the State's rights. I was never asked for my record before or I would have gladly given it.

"In the early part of June, 1861, when seventeen years of age, I volunteered in the Confederate army, and became a member of Company E, Twelfth Virginia Infantry. About January of the year following, without my consent or even my previous knowledge, I was honorably discharged to take charge of the clerk's office of Nottoway county. I have been deputy clerk of that county before my enlistment, as the clerk had been appointed commissary to one of General Fry's regiments.

"Captain Egan returned to the clerk's office after some months, and I at once, although exempt from military service, rejoined my regiment and participated in the battles of Drewry's Bluff and Seven Pines. In the latter battle I became afflicted with severe herna on both sides, which disabled me from undertaking any severe physical exercise, such as marching and marching.

"In consequence of this disability I could not perform active duty, and for a while was employed in the Confederate States Treasury Department and in the clerk's office of the Confederate States Court. Getting better, as I thought, I voluntarily resigned both positions and started to join the army again, but was taken ill on the way and was disabled for a considerable time. When I got better I went to Dinwiddie county as deputy clerk, and though still suffering with severe herna, which at times wholly disabled me, I at once connected myself with Captain W. A. Adams, formerly of the 1st Virginia Cavalry, and with him rendered considerable service to the Confederate army as scout and otherwise in the operations around Petersburg.

"In the latter part of the war I went frequently with Captain Adams, and occasionally alone, into the Federal lines, sometimes in Yankee uniform, and made myself so obnoxious to the enemy that a Federal officer told Major Jones, who I had met at Dinwiddie Courthouse, that if either Captain Adams or myself should be captured we would be hung at once. The Federal officers knew me by name, and on one occasion they came near burning the house of Jones, because I had been sheltered there for a few days before. On another occasion I was captured by the Federals under the notorious Colonel Speers, but by a fortunate circumstance made good my escape.

"During my service in Dinwiddie, I frequently rendered most dangerous and difficult service, although at times, on account of my herna, I would be compelled to dismount and lie on the ground until the intestines returned to the cavity, in each instance running the risk of strangulation and death. After the war I was engaged in the exposure and violent exercise to which I had been subjected, became more serious, and there was an almost daily return of the herna. I was under the treatment of Dr. Joseph A. Jones, Dr. J. A. Agnew and Dr. Hunter McGuire, and finally an operation of the kind now performed in this city was performed on me. This day compelled to wear a truss, and an never able to ride horse back or to take other violent exercise.

"I regret to have to make this statement of my physical disabilities, and sincerely wish I could have ways been for the cause which has at ways been next to my heart. I will add that I am now, and have been for many years, the commander of the camp of Confederate veterans in my county.

"Not a 'Tilted' Candidate. "As to the general charge that I am a candidate of the Anti-Saloon League, I will say that four years ago, when I was defeated for the nomination, I announced that I would be a candidate at the next primary, and many voters then promised me their support. Since that time many of the best men and women, knowing my views and opinions, have kindly offered me their assistance and are now honoring me with their support.

"I have not, nor has any one for me, made any compromise or combination of any kind whatsoever, and I have no promise or pledge to any man or set of men whatsoever, nor have I been asked to do so. I will add that no such pledge, promise or combination will be made, and if elected, Governor, I will be able to do so, and will act for the best interest of the people and for the advancement of their moral, educational and industrial development.

"The Anti-Saloon League is neither a political organization, and has not endorsed me or been asked to do so. I have, however, as one of its original members, and even long before its organization, been identified with it, and striving for the principles for which it stands, and it therefore to be expected that many of the men who have touched elbows with me in the fight should favor my nomination. And I esteem it a privilege and an honor to be able to say that I believe many of the leaders, and very many if not most of the rank and file of this splendid organization are giving me their support, and so far as I know there are no facts which can be relied on to justify the charge made by the Journal.

"No Compact With Liquor Men. "The statement that a combination was made between the leaders of the Anti-Saloon League and representatives of the liquor interests in my behalf, or between any of the members of the Anti-Saloon League as I do, I have no hesitation in saying that no more intelligent, consecrated or earnest men can be found. They are giving their time and money, devoting their energies and abilities to the work which they believe to be for the best interests of society and which has resulted in so much good to the people of Virginia.

"In concluding this part of my reply, I beg to say that I am not the candidate of any 'ring' or 'combination,' that I stand for the principles which I have proclaimed all over this Commonwealth, principles which are read and known of all men."

"There is nothing in my Confederate record of which I am ashamed. In fact, I have always felt what I believed was

It is a pardonable pride in the fact that a very important part of my boyhood was spent as a volunteer in the military service of the Confederacy. I take pleasure in relating the small service I was able to render in that great struggle for the State's rights. I was never asked for my record before or I would have gladly given it.

decided to establish a national gallery of photographic portraiture. The scheme has met with enthusiastic support from all those interested in the photographic art. A hair dresser of Soko bought for a few shillings a suit of picture which is now believed to be a genuine Titian. The subject is 'Jupiter Transformed to a Satyr Surprising Antiope.'

The treatment is bold and masterly, and the artist's skill is admirably shown in the left hand corner. A former secretary of the Louvre gallery in Paris pronounced it an incomparable Titian. Other authorities are all with him. The work for the restoration of the picture is now taking place, and the hair dresser who bought the picture, a wealthy American picture lover will purchase the masterpiece.
