G. O. P. IS LOOKING TOWARD THE SOUTH

Hopes to Gain Republicans to Take Place of Western Insurgents.

PLANS ARE BEING LAID

Far From Likely That Many Recruits Will Come From Dixie.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch] WASHINGTON, D. C., January 1.—Republican leaders are looking to the South for Congressmen to take the places of Western Republicans who insure until they are out of the pale or defeated Republicans. They see a fallow field in Dixie, and will work it if they feel that such a step is necessary.

The Real Situation in Dixie.

But independent men, who were encouraged by William Howard Taft in 1906, are not so much interested as they were in the campaign of 1908. Their hopes have vanished, and there are two reasons for this—first, President Taft has permitted organization Republicans of Southern States to dictate most of his appointments, or to queer the new element, which is composed of recruits from the Democratic party, at the White House, and the Aldrich-Cannon Congress has given the Southern manufacturer the hot end of the tariff poker.

Cold on the Trail.

One incident will serve to show the change of conditions. Two years ago, when the news of John M. Morehead's election in the Fifth North Carolina District reached Charlotte, a little party of mill men, who had assembled informally in the Southern Millmen's Club to enjoy a quiet smoke and a cheering cup, pledged themselves that they would send one of their associates to Congress in 1910.

One Instance in Many Years.

The election of Morehead was one of the most remarkable elections in the South in many years. The negro had kept him in line for the local Democracy year after year. Hundreds of people who believe in the principles of the Republican party could not afford to vote their convictions until the black voter was eliminated.

That Charlotte Fund.

In Charlotte, where the hurried campaign fund was raised, the manufacturers have lost their political zeal, not because of any change in local conditions, but the apparent change in Mr. Taft. At present the talk there is of an independent, who would represent the manufacturing interests of the district, thus insuring, may not result in anything tangible.

One More Man in Virginia.

Although the Republicans of Virginia made a poor showing in the gubernatorial election last year, they are going to try to capture the Fifth Congressional District next fall.

or he will lose the respect of the entire people.

The country will not condemn him yet. He is on trial. Everybody says he is a fine, jolly fellow—but, H. E. C. B.

supported the nominees of the Democratic party are tired of it, but they have nowhere to turn. Two, and even four years ago, one heard much talk of Republican gains in Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee, but recently it has almost ceased.

In Charlotte, where the hurried campaign fund was raised, the manufacturers have lost their political zeal, not because of any change in local conditions, but the apparent change in Mr. Taft.

This is the information that comes to Washington, and what is true of North Carolina and Virginia is true of other Southern States.

The appointment of Connor, judge of the Eastern District Court of North Carolina, gave President Taft cold feet. He had already promised to divide the census supervisors equally between the Republicans and Democrats, but he back-pedaled when the hue and cry of certain leaders reached his ears, and gave every appointment to his own party.

CRUEL TORTURES ARE INFLICTED

ATLANTA, GA., January 1.—John W. Dodd, former overseer at the city prisoners' stockade, was the principal witness heard by the Council Committee, investigating conditions at the stockade, when that body resumed its session to-day. In addition to corroborating the stories of cruelty to prisoners and filthy and unsanitary conditions as told by other witnesses, he produced a diary covering events which transpired while he was employed at the stockade.

Dodd testified that the food served the prisoners was unfit even for the lowest kind of animals. Prisoners frequently showed him bread containing what he said, and one man brought him a piece of bread containing a spider. He declared the place was overrun with vermin of all kinds. He produced a bottle of vermin, which he said a prisoner had captured, and brought to him. The bread with the spider in it also was offered as evidence.

Asked what proportion of the prisoners were whipped, Dodd replied: "I heard them whipped nearly every morning. Sometimes there were two or three whipped again there would be as many as a half a dozen beaten."

The witness stated that he kept a diary, because he thought the people of Atlanta were ignorant of conditions at the city prison, and he intended to make it public at a later date.

Pearl Bryan, one of the three white women who was hung up by the rings while at the stockade, also was a witness. She said she was strung up nearly forty-five minutes, and was only taken down when they saw blood running down her arm.

Dr. W. W. M. Rose, who was summoned to the stockade for violation of the prohibition laws, also testified before the committee at to-day's session. Among other things, he testified to seeing a thirteen-year-old negro girl whipped in the bucking chair. After the first beating they took her out in a hysterical condition, and when she made some remark to the guard, Superintendent Vining ordered her back again for another whipping.

He said the child was so small that she slipped her arms down through the machinery and tried to take some of the blows on her hands. When finally she was taken out her hands were raw and blood was oozing through her clothes. The doctor stated that she was sent to the field to work in this condition.

The witness said he could not eat the food served at the stockade, and went two days without a mouthful of food. He declared the punishment inflicted by suspending prisoners from the rings in the walls was "the most cruel, brutal and inhuman punishment" he could conceive of.

After adjourning shortly after 1 o'clock to meet again next Tuesday morning, the committee had a visit of inspection to the stockade.
