At midday a group of about fifty intimate friends, Barker G. The dinner was a stag event, was novel and successful in every particular and was in honor of Mr. Hamill's approaching marriage to Miss Page Royal, of Richmond, June 2. The dining room was converted into an imitation of a Bohemian cafe, in the center of the big hall the dining table was placed, with smaller tables arranged around it. The electrical effects brought out more clearly the suggestion of a Bohemian atmosphere, which the scattered furniture and floral fixtures completed. Winkler's Orchestra rendered a program of music during the evening. Mr. Hamill's guests included Messrs. Francis B. Lee, Dr. Paul Cort, R. C. Manning, John H. Broughton, Nelson L.
