more besides. I made five more, which made eight. I caught a small rabbit which I kept a few days for a pet...

Saturday before last, which was Christmas Eve, it rained very hard. I was the colored hand behind him...

THE NEW YEAR'S EVE PARTY. Mrs. and Mr. McGuire were sitting by the open fire, talking about New Year's eve...

AN INDIAN ATTACK. (Continued from last Sunday.) Soon all the Indians dispersed and surrounded the house...

But Mary was firm, and she looked beautiful there on her knees before the stern, relentless man...

Now we will leave Mary and go to the home. Mrs. Cameron had gotten a gun, and had been an already for himself...

An hour later all of the children were up and shooting except Flora and Lora. Flora was crying and Lora couldn't shoot...

Then Flora came up and said: "I am so glad you saved us, Mary, because I know those horrid Indians would have ruined my complexion. And she said: "What is the difference between a pie and a pair of pants? No one could answer. So she said: "A pair of pants have to be cut out before they are made and a pie has to be cut after it is made."

IN A FLOWER GARDEN. "Dear me, how happy I am!" cried the rose. "Why, without a doubt, I am the loveliest flower in the garden...

My dear rose, little Grace planted me here. I like this place, and even if no one does know I am here, I don't think Grace has forgotten me."

"Why, how pretty you look this morning!" Grace cried, as she ran on and looked at the other flowers—all of the flowers out the violets. I need not describe the look the rose gave...

"Why, Nurse, I am just to see my violets, and I can't find them. You know that I planted them just because they are the sweetest flowers I ever saw, and I wanted to give mother a nice, beautiful bunch of them to put on her dresser, for she loves them better than any other flower. Oh! where can they be? Perhaps they are under the leaves."

"Yes, violet dear, I see you are right. Grace hadn't forgotten you, and she loves you better than any other flower. I was very wrong, and I am far, far from being the prettiest flower in the garden. But I am happy just the same," humbly said the rose.

There's the one who says I'm right. There's the one who says I'm wrong. There's the one who says I'm strong. There's the one who says I'm strong. There's the one with outstretched hands. You're the one I hold most dear— You're the one who understands!

There's the one who deems me strange. There's the one who bids me dare. There's the one who'd have me change. There's the one who doesn't care. There's the one who with me pleads. There's the one who gives commands. You're the one my spirit needs— You're the one who understands!
