

OLGA NETHERSOLE PARTS WITH DOG

Every Hotel Refuses to Accommodate Her Unless She Does.

ACTRESS ANGRY BECAUSE OF RULE

First Turned Down at Jefferson, She Goes Back There When Other Hotels and Apartment Houses Tell Her Dogs Can't Sleep in Rooms.

Olga Nethersole, the actress, came to town last night to find that she could not secure accommodations in a single hotel or apartment house because she wanted a room for herself and her little dog. Indeed, for a time it looked as if she would have to go to some boarding house, for she positively refused to be entertained in any establishment the rules of which forbade dogs of the apartments provided for human beings.

Finally Had to Submit. But when Miss Nethersole realized an hour after arrival at the Jefferson that she could not be entertained in any of the rooms, she turned to the dog and said, "I am going to leave it here, as he is expected to break in the deadlock this week, he replied: 'You can't tell. I hope so.'"

Could Not Persuade Him. Scores of Richmond people who sat around the hotel lobby and balconies saw that something was wrong at the desk. In a very dignified manner Miss Nethersole was introduced to the manager. She stood by his side, and then somebody remarked that only a few weeks ago Mrs. James Brown Potter, of New York, could not secure rooms at the Jefferson for herself and her dog.

Dog Goes to Trash-Room. The carriage wheeled back to the Jefferson. The crowds in the lobby by this time had expanded to a scene, but this actress, who is truly a wonderful actress, walked quietly to the desk and announced that she would take such and such rooms, if the hotel people would promise and guarantee to take the best care of her dog elsewhere in the house. So she gave the animal a few caresses with her hand and stepped into the elevator.

When a reporter called her room an hour later, the maid explained that Miss Nethersole was weary and that she did not wish to be disturbed. One of the clerks at the Jefferson explained that this was the first time the dog had ever been put to all of the hotels, and that there was cause for gratification that all acted alike.

BRIDGE WHIST WRECKS HOMES

Dr. MacLachlan, in Strong Sermon on Suffrage Question, Asserts That Cards and Punch Do More Harm Than Votes for Women Ever Will Do.

Bridge whist parties and punch parties have done more to wreck homes and happiness than the votes of women ever did or will do.

Returning to his subject, "Woman in Democracy," Dr. MacLachlan said: "The average man and woman is not informed on the facts of equal suffrage, of its past history and present accomplishments. It is a question of fact, and not of theory, and is not deliberative enough for suffrage."

At the very start," said Mr. Keith to the reporter, who met him at the Arnold home, "I wish to set straight for once and all the connection, it is not a matter of fact, but of opinion."

As soon as Miss Arnold disappeared we immediately started an investigation. The first thing we did was to make a most thorough search of every hospital and all other institutions in which she might have been taken care of.

Manuel to Receive $3,500 Monthly From Portugal.

Lisbon, January 29.—The Diario De Noticias, the important newspaper of Portugal, has decided to pay $3,500 a month to the deposed King Manuel. Checks for the months of October, November and December already have been sent to him.

Since his arrival in England there have been many reports of the poverty-stricken condition of the former sovereign, whose debts in Portugal are estimated at more than $300,000. The important creditors have been strong, and it was understood at one time that the new government of Portugal had determined to liquidate those of the obligations legally incurred.

FORTY IN ROOM PLAYING CARDS

Dr. Wimpleberg, Alleged Head of So-Called Literary Club, Bailed by Negro Woman Residing in Jackson Ward. Break Up Big Game.

Led by Detective Sergeant Wiley and Acting Detective Atkinson, a squad of police early yesterday morning raided the rooms of the Arlington Literary Society, at 318 West Broad Street, and arrested Dr. Benjamin Wimpleberg on a charge of running a common gambling resort. The officers also had a warrant for C. G. Gebhardt, an officer of the literary society, but he was not in. He surrendered himself yesterday, and was bailed in the sum of $500.

Evidence against the alleged gambler was found in possession of the detective. The officers had decided that the time was propitious for a raid. They summoned Patrolmen Hulcher and Farley, and waited in the shadow across the street for an hour or more. The right moment came when they saw a negro porter, carrying a basket of bottles, beer, etc. They nabbed him before he had time to give warning.

Jump Two Stories. While Detective Atkinson held the porter, Sergeant Wiley took his keys and went through the second story. The negro attempted to ring the bell, as a means of warning to the members of the club, but was pulled away by Atkinson. Then Sergeant Wiley, followed by the patrolmen, and Atkinson, went to the second story. A third door by means of the press key he had obtained from the porter, and got into the rooms where the society had its quarters.

The library of the literary society was not in evidence. Instead, between thirty and forty members and other busy shuffling the cards on the green. Immediately there was confusion. Three men jumped out of the second-story window facing on Broad Street into an awning over a store, and from there slid down to the ground. They got away, and have not been heard from since. Others attempted to get out of the same exit, but were prevented. The majority of the men arrested were negroes, and about ten of them were bailed by a woman, who said they had neglected to pay their dues, or had not been asked for them, went over to the detectives and police.

Some Real Big Hands. But several others stuck through the game, and went on dealing out the cards and raking in the chips. "Four aces," sang out one man, and two full-houses, a flush and a straight rattled down on the board. The man with the four spots raked in a pile of red, white and blue chips. He called the game off for the time being.
