PAGEANT TO ATTEND OBSEQUIES OF HEART

Carrying Out of Prince's Wish Will Recall Customs of Middle Ages.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY. IT is only subsequent to the state funeral of the nonagenarian prince regent of Bavaria, and after the departure of the royal and imperial guests from abroad, that the obsequies of his heart will be made the occasion of a pageant, recalling the customs of the middle ages.

In the testamentary dispositions of the regent he expressed the desire that his heart should in accordance with the traditional usage of the reigning house of Bavaria, be removed from his body previous to the embalmment of the latter, should be placed in the customary silver urn filled with spirits of wine and confided to the care of the ancient Chapel of Our Lady of Merces at Alt-Otting, a lovely spot about half an hour's ride by rail from Munich.

This sacred edifice, which is famed for possessing a picture of the Holy Virgin brought from the Orient in the seventh century and asserted to be endowed with miraculous properties, occupies one side of the small market place of the picturesque little town, in the niches of its chancel walls are placed the urns containing the hearts of the Kings, Queens, dukes, duchesses, princes and princesses of the house of Bavaria, since the foundation of the Wittelsbach dynasty, long centuries ago.

Having been a witness, not to say a participant, in the ceremony of the burial of a royal heart at Alt-Otting considerably more than a quarter of a century ago and as the program of these ceremonies has been the same for generations, I may describe here what will be done with the heart of the prince regent.

On the day fixed for its conveyance from Munich to Alt-Otting, it will be borne from the All Saints Church, as the court chapel of Munich is called, and where it is now preserved, through the Bavarian capital, to the railroad terminus. The urn, draped with crepe, will be carried by the dean of the court chapel, seated in a splendid state coach drawn by six milk-white horses. All the gorgeous gilt carvings and ornaments of the carriage, as well as the lighted lanterns thereof, will be shrouded with crepe, while the horses will be almost hidden from view by heavy black velvet and silver trappings.

The great officers of the royal household and the cabinet ministers who take part in the procession will be arrayed in full uniform, the gold embroideries of which and the sword hilts will be covered with crepe. The great officers of the royal household will be accompanied by a big military escort, representing all arms, under the command of the military Governor of Munich, while the bells of the cathedral and of all other churches of the city will toll, flags being lowered to half-mast and minute guns being fired. On the arrival at the railroad station the urn will be borne from the special train, all the officials bearing arms, and the officials bearing their heads, as the heart passes up the platform to the royal carriage.

On the special train reaching Alt-Otting, a procession will once more be formed, court carriages together with regiments of cavalry and battalions of infantry for service as escort, leaving for Munich a few hours earlier. As at Munich, the dean bearing the heart of the regent will ride in a state coach and thus proceed at a foot pace to the parish church, an edifice of great antiquity and much architectural beauty. On the day fixed for the obsequies, the abbot of the monastic order entrusted with the guardianship of the Lady Chapel and the clergy of the parish.

After having incensed the urn, the bishop and attendant clergy will be borne to the moving strains of Chopin's Funeral Anthem played by the organ at the aisle to the high altar, the dean following with the heart under a purple and gold baldquoin or canopy borne by the leading citizens of Alt-Otting, who have possessed the privilege of performing this duty from time immemorial.

On reaching the altar the urn will be placed on the Castrum Dolores, and the grand officers of the royal household and the great dignitaries of the realm will take their places around the chapel of Our Lady of Merces, the latter will be displayed on purple velvet cushions, the regent's crown, his orders of knighthood and the various emblems of royalty which had been his in life. Standing beside the catafalque the dean will deliver over the urn to the bishop with the following: "My lord bishop, we are commissioned by his royal highness (the now) prince regent, to deliver into your safe keeping the heart of his late Royal Highness Prince Luitpold, Regent of Bavaria, in order that in accordance with the traditions of the sovereign house of Bavaria it may find its last resting place before the high altar in the Chapel of Our Lady of Merces, beside the hearts of his kinsmen and relatives. Your lordship knew this heart when it was still alive and were acquainted with the trials which it was called upon to undergo. But your lordship can also bear witness to the patience with which it endured all trials, to the deep piety and faith which so distinguished it and, above all, to the great love which it bore for the Bavarian country and people. It has been a noble and a pious heart—this heart of our never to be forgotten Prince Luitpold. The rest which was denied to this heart in life it will find in the Holy Chapel of Our Lady, here and may in the other world that sorely tried heart be granted through the grace of the Mother of Merces, the everlasting peace of God."

A requiem will then be sung and the urn sprinkled with holy water and solemnly blessed by the bishop, after which the heart will be borne once more in solemn procession through the streets and across the market place to the Chapel of Our Lady, where it will be placed by the abbot in the niche prepared for it.

Sir Richard Musgrave, who is lying so very seriously ill having recently undergone a severe operation, is not as has been asserted, the Sir Richard Musgrave, owner of the celebrated and tallman's glass beaker, known as "The Luck of Eden Hall," which has formed the theme of poems by Uhland and by Longfellow. He is the baronet of the same name, but of Tourin, in County Waterford, instead of Eden Hall in Cumberland. Sir Richard Musgrave, of Tourin, is married to a Canadian, a daughter of the Hon. R. Dunsun, of Victoria, British Columbia, owns extensive estates, both in the Dominion and in the United States, and has for twenty years past been an almost annual visitor to the western hemisphere. He has no son, only two daughters, the elder twenty and the next heir to the baronetcy is his uncle, Edward Musgrave, who besides being a justice of the peace of County Waterford, has a home in Victoria, British Columbia, and a large family of children, two of his sons being married and settled in British Columbia.

The Musgraves of Tourin hall originally from Yorkshire and settled at Tourin, in County Waterford, in the early part of the eighteenth century, the baronetcy being bestowed upon Richard Musgrave in 1782, as a reward for his services as a member of the Irish Parliament in promoting the Union.

FUNDS NEEDED FOR HOSPITAL

Institution at Winchester No Longer Large Enough to Meet Demands.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) Winchester, Va., December 18.—In the hope of raising $10,000 with which to erect a large addition in order to meet pressing demands, the physicians of Winchester to-day began a general solicitation of contributions for the Winchester Memorial Hospital, and it is expected that the amount will be raised in the near future among the people of Winchester and vicinity and also by contributions from former residents now living in various sections of the United States. Peter Winchester House, of New York, son of the late Charles Broadway House, the blind millionaire merchant, has headed the list with $2,000, and members of the medical staff of the hospital have contributed $1,150, leaving about $6,850 to be raised. When the hospital was built some years ago it was believed the institution was of sufficient size and capacity to meet the demands of many years, but during the past few years it has been necessary for the authorities to refuse to admit large numbers of patients, who sought treatment there, wholly on account of lack of room. It is now proposed to double the capacity of the institution by erecting two additions and also making provision for the accommodation of twice the number of benevolent city charity patients, whose treatment is paid for by the Common Council, and to increase the number of beds of treatment to none who are not able to pay, the hospital, according to the annual report of the president, Dr. Hunter M. Moore, has been unable to earn more than its actual running expenses. The physicians give freely of their services and time, and in numerous instances they receive no pay. In order to maintain the institution and provide more room for the constantly increasing number of patients, the executive committee has found it necessary to make an appeal for funds. Already quite a number of substantial contributions have been made.

ARTILLERYMEN ARE ASSAULTED

Soldiers Attacked at Phoebus and Both Perhaps Fatally Injured.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) Hampton, Va., December 18.—Two artillerymen of Fort Monroe were waylaid and probably fatally injured near Phoebus this morning as the result of the strangest assault the officers have had to deal with in several years.

Private Charles C. Davis, of the 11th Company, had both jawbones crushed by the assault, while Private Jonas H. Pullin, of the Fifty-eighth Company, has a fractured skull. Both of the soldiers are said to be fatally injured. The assault on Davis occurred in a section known as County Street, while that on Pullin took place in Slabtown, a colored settlement. Both of the artillerymen were found lying in the road, and so far have been unable to give a connected story of the assaults.

The men are said to have won some money in a gambling place. They were taken to the fort hospital, where it is said that the chances for Davis's recovery are slight to-night. No arrests have been made.
