A rustic basket of magnolia and jonquils decorated the one big table, at which the guests were seated for dinner.

C., to make her home in Richmond. Mrs. Frederick Murchison Hodges, a bride of the winter, and Mrs. James Daniel Gilliam, of Cairo, Egypt, sister of the hostess. The drawing-room was arranged throughout in pink tones and arched and long-eared pine and red flowers were used in the hall. The dining-room was decorated in pink blossoms, and a basket of pink peas caught with pink gauze bows formed an effective centrepiece for the tea table.

Mrs. Jackson received with the guests of honor and her daughter, Miss Evelyn Jackson, and Mrs. R. Turner Arrington and Mrs. William H. Higgins were at the punch bowl. Mrs. E. E. Moffitt and Miss Mary Litchford assisted in the dining-room, and about 100 guests, who included the younger married set in Richmond, were present.

The amendment provides that the Municipal Court shall take under its care "wayward children," the term applying to all children between the ages of six and eighteen, who habitually associate with vicious or immoral persons, or who are found to be growing up under circumstances which expose them to environments that tend to cause them to lead an immoral life.

DUKE VISITS AMERICA TO FIND RICH WIFE

Refers in Letter to Descent From Joan Arc, Who Died Without Posterity.

BY LA MARQUESE DE FONTENOY.
HISTORY, both secular and ecclesiastical, teaches us that Joan of Arc, as indicated by her title of Maid of Orleans, died, as she had lived, a maid, without posterity. Yet I have a letter before me, dated November 18, 1900, in which the individual, who styles himself "Duke of Warren-Surrey," asserts over that signature, upon the material upon I descend from St. Pierre Fourier and the venerable Jeanne d'Arc. The "duke" also in the same letter alludes to his royal origin, from William the Conqueror. Inasmuch as there are many thousands of lines of descendants in the female line from Norman, Plantagenet and Tudor Kings, occupying the humblest walks of life in Great Britain, this descent from William the Conqueror is of no account whatsoever.

It is because this person has just arrived by the French liner Provence in New York, where he is putting up at the Gotham, attracting notice there by his extraordinary clothes, his odd manner and utterances, and his ringleted hair. He proposes subsequently to honor Washington, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston, and other big cities of the United States, also Canada, with his presence. He was over here in 1890, when he publicly expressed purpose of finding some rich woman, preferably of the Catholic Church, willing to become his wife. He is still unmarried, and presumably his present trip to America has the same matrimonial object in view, since he has admitted in interview with me that he would not be inclined to wed a rich American woman.

It may, therefore, be of interest to furnish some information concerning the title which he uses, and which he proposes to share with some fair daughter of Uncle Sam. I claim to-day, as he did just fourteen years ago, that the dukedom was bestowed upon him by the Vatican on June 27, 1900, in a brief issued by the Pope, and that he has since then, before me an official list, bearing the date of 1913, of all the papal titles of nobility granted during the past century, and the dukedom of Warren-Surrey does not figure among them. I have the standard work here on titles of nobility, divided into two parts, one containing the names of those whose papal titles have been registered by the Keeper of the Great Seal, and are authorized to be officially borne in France, while the other part is devoted to those Frenchmen possessing nobiliary dignities obtained from the Vatican, and which, not having been registered, cannot be used in France. In neither of these lists does the dukedom of Warren-Surrey occur.

It is hardly necessary for me to add that the dukedom of Warren-Surrey does not occur in the English peerage. There is an earldom of Surrey, but it is borne by the Duke of Norfolk, and is borne by his son and heir, the Duke of Devonshire. The dukedom of Warren-Surrey does not figure in any official list of titles or in any of the standard works of reference of any country of Europe; and of all in the Almanach de Gotha, which regard to the dukedom of Warren-Surrey, I recall that when the "duke" was here fourteen years ago, and produced the patent in question, reference was made from here to several cardinals in France, who were secretary of state, who were certain that there was no record of any such dukedom having been granted by the Vatican.

The "duke," when asked to explain this, intimated that he had obtained the patent from one of the minor officials of the papal legation in Paris, and that if the cardinal secretary of state asserted that it was not on record at the Vatican, it was probably because he had not paid the requisite fees and dues of registration. Indeed, he intimated that, at the time, at my house when he called upon me, that he had not had the money for this, and that one of the reasons why he wished to obtain a rich wife in America was in order to pay these fees, or rather to take up the notes which he had given in lieu of cash. In view of the fact that the title has not been registered yet, it may be presumed that he has not until now succeeded in paying the registration fees, and that his title is therefore invalid.

Let me add that, although a Frenchman, and making his home in Paris, he does not belong to any reputable Parisian club. When he was over here last, and called upon me in New York, he claimed to know intimately several prominent members of the old French and Austrian aristocracy. One of them, with whom he declared himself to be particularly intimate, and to whom, indeed, he professed to be related, happened to be luncheon that very day at my house, and, summoning him from the drawing-room into the library, I confronted him with the "duke," much to the latter's dismay, since my guest had never heard of a Duke of Warren-Surrey, nor seen the individual in question in his life before.

The "duke" also claims that his aunt on the maternal side, that is to say, his mother's sister, is a Countess Natalie Huyn, one of the Damos du Palais of the court of Vienna, and lady in waiting of the Archduchess Maria Theresa, that he is the nephew, in the same way, of Count Paul Huyn, Bishop of Brunn, and of Count Karl Huyn, general in command of the cavalry division at Craoow. But I have before me a complete list of the members of the Austrian house of Huyn, and there is no Countess Marie Huyn among the number married to any one of the name of Warren, or, indeed, to any Frenchman.

When last here, the "duke" was accompanied by his mother, and she was good enough to give me copies in her own handwriting of the certificate of her own marriage, and of her eldest son's birth. In both of these documents her maiden name is given as Marie Huyn de Verneville. But there is no record of such a person, nor of the marriage of any such person, among the Counts and Countesses Huyn in that volume of the Almanach de Gotha which is devoted to the enumeration of German and Austrian counts and countesses. In her marriage certificate the name of her husband is given as Anselme Leon de Warren, a French citizen, and his profession as a sub-inspector of one of the French agencies of the English Great Ham Insurance Company.

In 1904 the "Duke" of Warren-Surrey was the hero of a Parisian scandal, owing to the arrest of his younger brother, who styles himself the "Marquis Hamelin de Warren-Surrey," under extremely scandalous circumstances; in fact, circumstances not fit for publication, and which I have heard of in a certain newspaper. Let it suffice to state that one of the charges against the said marquis was that he had taken a leading part in so-called "Black Masses," in an apartment which he and some other individuals of the same stripe had rented in the Avenue Friedland, in Paris, and that he was convicted and condemned to a long term of imprisonment, the sentence being confirmed on appeal. It is only fair to the elder brother, now here, to state that, although he was mentioned in connection with the affair, yet that he was neither indicted nor brought to trial. He left the country on the arrest of his younger brother.

I would not go to the trouble of printing all this information concerning the "duke," were it not that I understand that his coming to this country is, as he has stated, for the purpose of obtaining a rich American wife, and that I should be sorry to-day, as I would have been then, to know of any American girl wedding him, without being fully aware of the true value of his nobiliary honors and of his antecedents.

Marriages of American women with titled foreigners seldom bring happiness to the former. Disappointment, humiliation and neglect too often have become the lot of the American bride in the case when the title for the sake of which they have given their hand and their fortune is either besmirched or else of doubtful authenticity. The title, at any rate, should be beyond question, and since otherwise it is akin to a gold brick, I have been fortunate in these letters in preventing quite a number of these so-called "international marriages" and much consequent misery, by giving the true history of the "dukes" and especially of the titles which they had adopted—the information being usually given in response to some members of the prospective bride's family, and sometimes actually on the very eve of the date appointed for the wedding.

The Duke of Warren-Surrey may be the most inoffensive of young men; but before any American girl would wed upon him her hand, she would do well to set at rest all the doubt existing as to his nobiliary honors, and to satisfy herself that they will be a source of social prestige to her, and not of ridicule. How to Banish Complexion Troubles
Wintry winds will have no terrors for the woman who uses a plain mayatone lotion for her complexion, because even in severest weather the skin will be clear, soft and velvety. This lotion is made by dissolving an original package of mayatone in one-half pint witch hazel. Using this gives to the skin a charming smoothness and fineness of texture and imparts to it the freedom from pimples, blotches and other complexion upsets.—Advertisement.

UNION EXPLORE BY WINE WORKERS

Charged With Maintaining Detective Agency to Get Spy Into Convention.

QUESTION OF CONSOLIDATION
Proposition for Formation of National Labor Party Is Voted Down.

Indianapolis, Ind., January 23.—On charges that it was maintained by a detective agency solely for the purpose of getting a spy into the convention, Local Union 973, of Pochontas, W. Va., was expelled by the convention of the United Mine Workers of America here to-day. M. D. Whitesell, the delegate accredited to the union, was not in the convention hall when the action was taken.

The attack on the union was started by A. R. Watkins, of Yorkville, Ohio, who declared that it was dangerous for a union miner to appear in the neighborhood of Pochontas.

"Show the spy to us and we'll take care of him," declared Thomas Cairns, of Charleston, W. Va., president of the district in which Pochontas is located. It was stated that it had been impossible to obtain information against the union, but the resolution to expel it was adopted unanimously amid cheers.

The convention voted to further a charge for Federal old-age mothers' pension laws and for liability and compensation laws.

Carpenters employed in and about the mines must give up their membership in the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and affiliates with the miners, according to a resolution adopted this afternoon. William O. Green, international secretary-treasurer, announced that steps looking to this action were taken at the convention of the American Federation of Labor in Seattle. He said the miners' officers had conferred with the carpenters' officers in Seattle, and that the carpenters had agreed to the change. It was pointed out that since the miners had taken a stand for industrial unionism, it was the duty of the miners to include every workman employed about the mines in their organization.

The question of consolidation of the United Mine Workers of America with the Western Federation of Miners was brought up, but was postponed until the national delegates from the metal trades could be heard on the subject. Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western federation is expected to attend the convention later.

The proposition for the formation of a national labor party was proposed as a national labor party, and was voted down without debate. The convention already had adopted a resolution stating that the laboring people should unite on the political field.

The convention went on record as favoring the bill presented to the lower house of the national Congress by Representative Charles E. Barrett, of Georgia, which would legalize agreements between employers and employees, and would limit the issuance of injunctions in certain cases. The question of the bill introduced in the United States Senate by Senator Dill-

Business Lot Sold.
Bristol, Va., January 23.—George J. Carter, millionaire coal operator, has sold one of his prime business lots in Bristol to Thad A. Cox, of Johnson City, and W. F. Carter, a prominent farmer of Washington County. The price paid was $8,600 cash. The lot is adjacent to the government building on Shelburne Street, and has a frontage on that street of 170 feet. The impression here is that Mr. Carter sold the property at a bargain, the price being nearly $4,000 lower than the property is believed to be worth.

NATIONAL CITY TO ENTER NEW SYSTEM

Largest Institution of Kind in Country Likely to Accept New Currency Law.

New York, January 23.—That the National City Bank, the largest institution of its kind in the country, will in all probability enter the Federal reserve system to be created by the new currency law, was learned from officials of the bank to-day. This puts at rest rumors recently current to the effect that the National City Bank contemplated surrendering its Federal charter and merging with the Corn Exchange Bank, the largest State institution.

It is probable that no public statement will be made until the return of Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, who now is in Paris conferring with James Stillman, chairman of the board of directors. It was the opinion of other bankers to-day that the attitude of the National City Bank assures the entrance of virtually all other national banks of importance in this section of the country where opposition to the law has been most pronounced.

One of the chief causes of opposition on the part of New York banks to the new Federal system has been the belief that they would be deprived of the power of keeping funds of out-of-town institutions which aggregate hundreds of millions of dollars, and the handling of which has been extremely profitable. Under the new system these funds will be diverted to the regional banks.

The convention of the United Mine Workers of America with the Western Federation of Miners was brought up, but was postponed until the national delegates from the metal trades could be heard on the subject. Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western federation is expected to attend the convention later.
