

Forewarned, however, of a possible attempt against his life, the archduke was watchful and struck the missile aside with his arm. It fell under an automobile following which carried members of the archduke's suite...

On their return from the Town Hall, the archduke and the duchess were driving to the hospital, when Gavrilo Princip darted at the car and fired a volley at the occupants. His aim was true, and the archduke and his wife were mortally wounded. The Governor of the city who escaped injury. The bodies of his murdered companions fell across him and protected him from stray bullets.

The Governor shouted to the chauffeur to rush to the palace. Physicians were in prompt attendance, but their services were useless, as the archduke and his wife were dead before the ambulance was reached. BODIES WILL LIE IN STATE AT PALACE IN SARAJEVO. Until the Emperor's wishes are known the bodies will lie in state at the palace here.

In Sarajevo, there is mourning everywhere with black-draped flags and streamers on all public buildings. Throughout the day, white women were to be seen in groups, while great crowds surrounded the spots where the bomb exploded and where the fatal shots were fired.

The bomb which exploded at the assassination was violent. The iron shrapnel on many shops were pierced by flying fragments, and iron railings were shattered, but a score of persons were injured.

This final tragedy which has come to the house of Hapsburg is the culmination of the personal sorrows that have shadowed the life of Emperor Francis. His reign began with sinister omens, for he faced internal dissensions and external aggressions from the moment he came to the throne.

In 1858, the list of tragic incidents began with an attempt on his own life, when a Hungarian named Lehenye wounded him with a knife. Fourteen years later, his brother, Archduke Maximilian, Emperor of Mexico, was executed. Then followed the burning to death of a niece in Vienna, a sister in Paris, and the death by suicide in St. Petersburg of a cousin.

In 1905, the Emperor's wife, who was the daughter of Maximilian Joseph, Duke of Bavaria, was stabbed to death at Geneva by a French anarchist. They had been estranged for many years, but the Emperor had never ceased to show a deep affection for her. Less than ten years before the Emperor's only son, the Crown Prince, Rudolf, a man of ability and promise, met death in a mystery which to this day has not been cleared.

On January 28, 1889, his body was found in a hunting lodge at Mayerling, not far from Vienna. Beside his body lay that of the Baroness Marie Vetsera. DIFFERS FROM OTHERS OF IMPERIAL FAMILY. Archduke Charles Francis, known particularly as the "Crown Prince," becomes heir to the Austrian throne, owing to the morganatic birth of Archduke Francis Ferdinand's children, disbarring their succession.

differs from all other members of the imperial family inasmuch as he is the first member of the imperial family to have been educated in the public schools of Vienna, where he mixed with pupils representing every class of society.

Anti-Serbian demonstrations began to-night. The Mayor of Sarajevo issued a proclamation denouncing the crime, and declaring that by the confessions of the assassins it was shown beyond all doubt that the bomb came from Belgrade.

It is said after the attempt with the bomb, near the Girls' High School, the duchess tried to dissuade the archduke from venturing in the motor car again. To allay her fears, M. Potiorek, Governor of Bosnia, said: "It's all over now. We have not more than one murderer in Sarajevo," whereupon the archduke decided to go on.

At a meeting of the Provincial Diet to-night, the president of the chamber expressed Bosnia's profound sorrow and indignation over the outrage. He also declared his unshakable love and devotion to the Emperor and to the ruling house.

PROFOUND SENSATION CREATED IN VIENNA. Vienna, June 28.—The assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg caused a profound sensation here. The streets were thronged, and anxious inquiries were made regarding details of the latest tragedy to befall some of the most prominent members of the imperial family during the present reign.

When the assassination became known, the authorities took possession of all telegraphic and telephonic facilities at Sarajevo, and shut off unimportant communications. The utmost sympathy is expressed everywhere for the venerable Emperor, Francis Joseph, who only yesterday left Vienna after a serious illness, for Czech Emperor, King of Hungary.

Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife left the capital on Thursday for a tour of Bosnia and Herzegovina, where the archduke was to take command of important maneuvers. According to reports received here, they had met everywhere with an enthusiastic reception.

Tumors of a plot against the life of the heir to the throne had been in circulation, but the police thought they had taken effective precaution to safeguard the archduke and the duchess.

BECOMES HEIR APPARENT WHEN CROWN PRINCE DIES

Brother of Emperor Francis Joseph Declined Honors in Favor of Eldest Son.

ALWAYS TRAINED FOR THRONE Many of Criminal Pranks Related About Him Really Those of His Wilder Brother—Visited United States During Chicago Exposition.

Vienna, June 28.—Archduke Francis Ferdinand, who was heir presumptive to the throne of Austria, was born December 18, 1863. His father, the Archduke Carl Ludwig, was a brother of Emperor Francis Joseph, and his mother was Maria Annunziata, daughter of Ferdinand II of Naples. Francis Ferdinand was a boy when his mother died.

In 1893 his father, then past fifty, married Princess Maria Theresa von Brazanza, eighteen-year-old daughter of King Miguel of Portugal.

The new stepmother established an exemplary home. Ferdinand always held her in high esteem. She and her daughter, the Archduchess Maria Annunziata, were the only ladies present as witnesses at Francis Ferdinand's morganatic marriage to the Bohemian countess, Zophie Chotek, who later was elevated to the rank of Duchess of Hohenberg by the Emperor.

Francis Ferdinand became the heir presumptive when the Crown Prince Rudolf, the only son of Emperor Francis Joseph, met a tragic death in what is known as the "Mayerling tragedy," the result of an unrequited love for a young baroness.

With the crown prince thus removed, the first choice as heir to Francis Joseph fell to his brother, the Archduke Carl Ludwig, but he already was an old man, and he declined the honors in favor of his eldest son, Francis Ferdinand. The title of heir was never officially conferred upon Francis Ferdinand, but from his twenty-sixth year his training for the throne was carried on.

MANY PRANKS REALLY THOSE OF HIS BROTHER. His escapades had been such as are so often ascribed to royal lads, but it is said that many of the criminal pranks related about him were really those of his older brother, Otto. The story was once widely printed that in a drunken frolic he stopped a peasant funeral near Prague and amused himself by leaping his horse half a dozen times over the lid. This and many such instances were officially investigated by Parliament, and declared to be mendacious slander.

Francis Ferdinand, according to his admirers, had an altogether different personality than such stories indicate. He had a very thorough military training, extending over twenty years, and was a member of the Emperor's bodyguard.

"EMPEROR OF SORROWS"

FRANZ JOSEPH OF AUSTRIA. Franz Joseph has been called the "Emperor of Sorrows." The "curse of the Hapsburgs" is said to have followed his kin. The "curse" was pronounced by the aged Countess Carolyn, whose son was put to death for participating in the Hungarian uprising. She called upon Heaven and h-l to blast the happiness of Franz Joseph and strike him through the good Elizabeth. Thus he has been stricken: His wife, "the good Elizabeth," was assassinated in Switzerland. His brother Maximilian was executed in Mexico. His only son, Rudolf, was a suicide. His sister-in-law, the Duchess d'Alencon, was burned to death in a charity bazaar in Paris.

And now— His nephew, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, have been assassinated in the capital of Bosnia.

In 1891 he was made a general. He reorganized the general staff of the Austro-Hungarian army with such success as to excite the admiration of all Europe. As a hobby, he took up locomotive engineering, and received a diploma as a full-fledged railroad engineer. He was said to enjoy nothing so much as running an engine. He also became recognized as one of the best shots in his country, and the walls of his great chateau at Konopischt were hung with the antlers of some 2,000 stags and chamois as well as the heads of tigers killed in India, the tusks of elephants slain in Ceylon, and the pelts of bears shot in the Rocky Mountains.

His visit to the United States was made in 1893, at the time of the World's Fair in Chicago. He made a diary of the trip, which continued around the world, and which is an interesting piece of travel literature, displaying shrewd comments of appreciation of things he saw and did. He thought this globe touring would especially contribute to his education as a future monarch.

He also wrote two volumes of Alpine poetry, and put on paper for the first time many of the old melodies of his native Styria.

His admirers insist that his life was singularly free from scandal, with the exception of his infatuation for the former Bohemian countess. While she belonged to one of the most ancient noble families of Bohemia, her birth rank was far below that of the imperial house of the Austrian Hapsburgs.

As the Emperor's nephew and heir apparent, Francis Ferdinand's love affairs had been closely watched. By arrangement of the Austrian cabinet he was to become betrothed to a princess of Saxony, but so uncompromising was his refusal that the matter was dropped. He had fallen in love with the former Bohemian countess, then maid of honor to the Emperor's crown princess Stephanie. For nine years this attachment was a subject of gossip in Vienna. When his uncle, the Emperor, protested against plans for marriage, the archduke reminded him of his previous advice.

"I heard you once say," he repeated, "that in choosing a wife, an Emperor should pay no attention to politics, and should follow the impulse of his own heart." This was a chapter out of Francis Joseph's own life.

Francis Ferdinand stubbornly resisted the nine years of opposition on the part of the Emperor. When he married he answered all arguments with the reply: "The Austrians would not like to see an unhappy man on the throne. There was no question but that the two were deeply in love, and had ever since continued so. Francis Joseph, however, was never pleased with his nephew's conduct, and he never gave his imperial consent to the marriage upon condition that the archduke strictly observe the Hapsburg laws and never attempt to place his morganatic wife on the throne, or establish the right of succession for his children. He also elevated the wife to the title of Duchess of Hohenberg.

The terms of the archduke's oath were explicit and binding. They set forth that the marriage was not "ebenburtig," or to one highly born. The oath concluded as follows: "We pledge our word that we recognize for all time the present declaration, of whose significance and scope we are fully conscious, both for us and our wife, and for our children by this marriage, and that we never will attempt to revoke this, our present declaration, nor undertake anything calculated to enfeeble or to abrogate the binding thereof."

The precise meaning of this solemn renunciation was viewed somewhat differently in Austria and in Hungary. In Austria its force was thought to depend largely upon the provisions of the mysterious Hapsburg family law, hitherto most jealously kept secret. It is known, however, that the Emperor as sovereign head of the family had very far-reaching authority, but whether he himself was bound by the family law or was superior to it, and whether he could alter the law alone, or with the consent of the family in council assembled, are all questions which nobody could answer. This, again, how far the Hapsburg family law was binding upon the Austrian state is another question.

Baby of Future is Considered Much thought has been given in late years to the subject of maternity. In the cities there are maternity hospitals equipped with the most modern methods. But most women prefer their own homes and in the towns and villages must prefer them. And since this is true we know from the great many splendid letters written on the subject that our "Mother's Friend" is a great help to expectant mothers. They write of the wonderful relief how it seemed to allow the muscles to expand without undue strain and what a splendid influence it was on the nervous system. Such helps as "Mother's Friend" the broader knowledge of them should have a helpful influence upon babies of the future.

In a little book for such women these points are more thoroughly brought out and a copy will be mailed to anyone who will send us their name and address. "Mother's Friend" is sold in all drug stores and is highly recommended for its timely usefulness, its safety and the real help it affords. Ask for it at the store and write us for the book. MERCURY RANGES ABOVE PERSONAL COMFORT MARK

Sharp Morning Storm is Followed by Higher Temperature Throughout Day.

COOLING BREEZE AT NIGHT Weather Bureau Admits 93 Degrees, but the Average Citizen Believes That an Unduly Conservative Estimate.

Still ranging above the ninety mark, the mercury yesterday went up to 93 degrees, and the day was almost insupportably hot. Relief was afforded after nightfall, however, when a cooling breeze drifted up from the river and eased thousands into restful slumber. Few ventured out during the day, obeying a primal instinct to avoid the heat, and the people swarmed from their homes like flies at a watermelon feast, and front porches, back piazzas and fire-escapes afforded cool refuge far into the night.

The minimum temperature yesterday was 63 degrees, and the mean temperature 81 degrees. In Montgomery and in Oklahoma the mercury went up to 100 degrees, these two cities being the hottest recorded by the local branch of the United States Weather Bureau. Only in Washington was there rain. Through most of the rest of the country it was clear. A sharp thunder storm and burst of rain swept over Richmond about 9 o'clock yesterday morning, flooding the streets, but apparently having little effect on the temperature.

HOW TO KEEP WELL. THOUGH HOT How to keep well, though hot, is the text of a bulletin issued by the State Board of Health. To do no more work than is necessary, and to do that with the least possible exertion is one of the most important injunctions which it gives out. Discomfort, it is stated, is almost inevitable during the summer, but it may be minimized by care and foresight among persons of average essentials of personal hygiene. Over-exertion, the board says, is responsible not only for sunstroke, and serious ailments, but also for the direct cause of heat debility and depression. Every one should be careful to walk rapidly to run or to do other work in the sun beyond that which is absolutely necessary. It is best to keep in the shade as much as possible and wherever possible. A diet of vegetables and fruit is advised. Water should be drunk often, but never at a very low temperature or in very large quantities at one time. As for babies, they should have a maximum of fresh air during the summer and a minimum of clothes.

SERIOUS DROUGHT BROKEN. Farmers in Amherst Section Begin Planting Tobacco. Amherst, Va., June 28.—The drought, which has prevailed here for more than two months past, was broken on Friday night, when a terrific thunder storm, accompanied by a heavy rain passed over this section. Rain fell for more than an hour, and reports from different sections of the county indicate that the storm was general. By daybreak yesterday morning many farmers were planting tobacco, this being the first good season of the summer. Although it is rather late for this crop, it has been known to mature in this county when planted as late as July 1.

During the progress of the storm, the residence of J. W. Ware, near Amherst, was struck by lightning, and one end of the kitchen knocked off. Otherwise the building was not damaged.
