ENGLISH MILITANT VISITS AMERICA

Miss Christobel Pankhurst

This twenty-three-year-old daughter of the English militant suffragette leader, and herself an able lieutenant for her mother, posing specially for this photo in the office of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, on East Forty-first Street, New York, on October 15.

Miss Pankhurst arrived here on her first visit incoast aboard the steamship Finland, and was booked as Miss Margaret McDonald. There was none to herald her arrival and few on board knew her identity.

She is the guest of Mrs. Belmont, and will lecture here, heading to go as far west as the Pacific Coast.

William England has returned to Fredericksburg, after spending a few days in Richmond.

Mrs. L. M. Robinson, who has been spending some time in Bowling Green, is now in this city for the fall and winter months.

Miss Anne Erner, of Grove Avenue, is the guest of relatives in Harrisonburg for a few days visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Reid, of Richmond, are guests of the Misses Woolfolk at "Mulberry Place," Caroline County, for a few days.

Misses Katherine and Helen McIntire are leaving town shortly to spend the winter in New York.

Ware—Hobbeson. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] BLACKSBURG, VA., October 30.—Autumn leaves and blossoms, with an effective combination of white and yellow chrysanthemums, decorated the Presbyterian Church in Blacksburg for the marriage on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock, of Miss Susie Hope Robinson, daughter of the late J. Kyle and Mrs. Nellie M. Robinson, to Lieutenant Joseph Fulton Ware, for the last three years commandant of cadets at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and now with his regiment at Plattsburg, N. Y.

The pulpit platform and choir loft were banked with flowers, running cedar festooning the side walls, and candles in silver candelabra were placed on the altar.

Mrs. Wirt Dunlap, accompanied by Mrs. William L. Saunders on the violin, rendered a musical program as the guests were assembling, and Miss Katherine Spindle, of Christiansburg, sang "Still As the Night" by Bohn, just before the ceremony.

Rev. R. B. Nelson, of Christ Church and the heraldical service, and Rev. David J. Woods, D. D., pastor of the church, was the officiating minister.

The bride entered with her brother, H. C. Robinson, of Yale. Her wedding dress was of white duchess satin, with court train, and trimmed with rose point lace and hand-embroidered chiffon; her veil was of tulle and she carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Mary Stone, of Roanoke, wore an imported gown of white satin with lace tunic, trimmings of lace, rhinestone buckles and tiny rosebuds, and carried a cluster of yellow chrysanthemums.

The six bridesmaids, Misses Anne Edoff and Minnie Belvin, of Christiansburg; Elinor Jones, of Washington; Florence Ware, of Portress Monroe; Sarah Bell, of Blacksburg; and Louise Hope, of Blacksburg, wore white lace dresses, with yellow satin basques, and carried armfuls of chrysanthemums of the same color.

Agnes Bell, of Dublin, was the ring bearer and had on a frock of white accordion-pleated organdie with yellow ribbons. The groom and his best man, Lieutenant Allan Burdette, 17 U. S. Infantry, entered from the pastor's study, meeting the bride in front of the altar.

The ushers who seated the 500 guests and then joined the procession up the two aisles, were: E. B. Myrick, Granville G. Sutton, James R. DuShane, Randolph Harrington, Edward C. Fox, of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Hampton Hoge, of Blacksburg. They wore full dress uniforms, with

What You Can Afford

BY LILLIAN RUSSELL.

(Copyrighted, 1914, by Lillian Russell.) Good health is one of the cheapest things on the market to-day. In these days of high living costs an uppermost question is what can we afford? It is in the mind of the housewife with a basket on her arm. It is equally important upon other members of the family.

We can all afford a large measure of good health, but it is to be secured by the expenditure of energy rather than of money.

It does not cost anything to walk and exercise in the open air, enjoy the warmth of the sun. Where there are no private gardens there are parks or great open spaces where people may seek the ozone that fills the lungs and blood with new life and puts energy into the heart and mind to force them to materialize.

It does not cost anything to raise the windows at night and allow nature to inject new energy into the weary body. Exercise does not cost anything. The great remedy and preventive that nature offers are the cheapest in the market.

We must eat, of course, and it takes money to buy food. But the most nourishing foods are not the most expensive. Far from being so, the palaces is not the place for the most nutritious foods are found. The most nutritious foods are found in the most modest fact, the most comfortable and health producing clothing is found on the lower priced shelves.

It is so in every way you may look at the cost of living. The things that are most costly. Beyond a certain point the things we gather about us and the things we wear are not worth the trouble it would indeed be unfortunate if health depended upon luxuries.

We can all afford better health than most of us enjoy if we begin early and utilize with common sense the things that nature offers to us, but we must make an early start.

Mrs. Lillian Russell's Answers. Mrs. J. T. W. writes: My dear greatest enemy. Nothing spoils a woman's looks more than the habit of worrying over every little thing. Worry not only gives ugly lines around the mouth and wrinkles the forehead, but clouds the eyes and makes the hair fall out. Worry is merely a habit, and to break it, though not easy, is quite possible. To look on the bright side of things is the best way to meet trouble, whether it be trifling or serious, before it arrives, is to be able to take a thing as it comes, and appearance and whatever beauty one may possess.

Brownie E.: If you have always had a thick lower lip it will be difficult to reduce it, and I doubt if you can reduce it at all. However, there is a formula for reducing the lips which may help you. Melt one ounce of cold cream in a double boiler. Add one gram of tannin powder and one gram chopped alkanet root and let it steep for five or six hours. Strain the mixture into a jar and stir until cool. Rub into the lips night and morning.

Dorothy: Yes, it would be all right to follow all the exercises given once a day. It is not necessary to continue through them every day. They are good for developing the figure. Don't exercise too strenuously at first. Take the exercise but increase the number of times as your muscles become accustomed to the exercises. After cleansing the pores you must lose them to prevent blackheads from appearing again. Blackheads are nothing more than clogged pores. If you have a stamped, addressed envelope I shall send you formula for removing blackheads and a strong lotion for closing enlarged pores.

Katrine: You need something stronger for removing the blackheads. The complexion brush is excellent to use, and I would advise you to continue using it. Before washing the face with soap try cleaning it with cold cream. After removing the secretions from the pores dash cold water on your face to close them. You cannot get entirely rid of blackheads if you have large pores. If you will send me a stamped envelope I shall send you the green soap treatment for blackheads, which will help you to get rid of them. If ever, fall to remove them, I will also be glad to send formulas for cold cream for cleaning the face and an astringent lotion for closing enlarged pores. Yes, daily applications of peroxide and salicylic acid will remove superfluous hair on the limbs.

CHAPTER LXXXIV.—OUTWITTED. They made no effort to plead their cause and sedate passage, even as far as the edge of the desert; doubtless they knew too well the futility of that, she thought, as she settled back in a seat, smacking with the memory of those three masks of dismay unmitigated.

It was not until five minutes later, when she straightened up from making an uncomfortable that she realized what had made them so content to abide by her will.

Then she heard their voices lifted together in a long, shrill howl that was quickly answered by fainter yells from a stand a quarter of a mile away, then by pistols popping and flashing some two miles away, then by a growing rumor of galloping hoofs.

The night glasses in the car afforded her flashes of a body of several horse-

RINGWORM.

The trichophyton fungus causes three types of skin disease: (1) Tinea circinata or ringworm of the body; (2) tinea capitis or ringworm of the scalp, and (3) tinea sycosis or ringworm of the beard. The last is also called "barber's itch."

Ringworm of the body occurs among children and adults. It begins as a small, reddish spot, which spreads into a round, sharply defined patch. The patch becomes scaly, then clears up at the center, leaving a ring-shaped lesion, which gives the disease its name. One patch or many may appear at one time. Several rings may coalesce, or one large ring will assume an irregular outline as it spreads. The face and hands and neck are common situations, though the crotch is often affected.

Ringworm of the scalp is most commonly observed in young children and babies. It resembles the body ringworm, only the hairs in the lesion are broken off short and have split ends. It is difficult to pull out a hair, because it breaks at the ends. The patch may be the size of a quarter of a larger.

Ringworm of the beard—true barber's itch—appears usually on the lower part of the face and neck, sparing the upper lip. There are several patches in the range of the beard, one of a purple color, rounded, raised above the level of the skin, pierced by hairs and covered with a sticky or greasy discharge. Sometimes the patches appear.

All forms of ringworm burn or smart rather than itch. The common cause of all is a vegetable fungus. Once in a while the fungus will attack the nails. The diagnosis of ringworm is positively made by microscopic test, finding the fungus in the lesions.

The Treatment. Ringworm of the body is readily curable by the systematic application of any mild parasitic—common ink, or ammoniated mercury ointment, or tincture of iodine, or salicylic acid.

Ringworm of the scalp is more difficult to cure. Some cases resist treatment for months or years. It requires a doctor's supervision.

Ringworm of the beard—"barber's itch"—must be distinguished from sycosis, an inflammation of the hair follicles also common among "barber's itch." The treatment must be under medical care.

All forms of ringworm are contagious. Schoolrooms, barber shops, public wash rooms, and the roller towel are sources of infection.

Any one who has ringworm should first be sure it is ringworm, and not eczema or something else, then have expert treatment.

Questions and Answers.

A. B. D. asks: 1. What are the symptoms of auto-intoxication? 2. Does a fibroid tumor cause despondency and excessive nervousness? 3. How can I become rid of my auto-intoxication?

Reply: Strychnine is not a tonic. It is a powerful poison, and if taken in large doses it will cause death. The purpose of "drops" is to temporarily relax the focusing muscles of the eye, so that the actual state of vision may be accurately measured. In the hands of a physician "drops" never do harm. Your doctor should be consulted.

H. S. M. writes: I am a girl twenty-one years old, and weigh 225 pounds. My flesh shames me. Is vinegar good to reduce weight? Will you advise me?

Reply: Vinegar is useless and harmful. Don't imperil your health and life by experimenting on altered fat reducers, for they are all either worthless or injurious. I cannot advise you with any full knowledge of your condition. You had better rely upon the treatment of your doctor.
