The Order of the Bath. A very youthful British tourist, arriving at an old-fashioned hostelry, had the imprudence to order a bath in his room for the next morning. Very early he was awakened by sounds of hammering somewhere overhead. Then followed much bumping on the stairs; evidently a large and cumbersome weight was being brought down. The noise ceased outside his own door, which flew open, and in staggered two strong men bearing the big bath from the public bathroom, dismounted for his morning ablutions!

Copper of the Ancients. Metallurgists who have examined specimens of the so-called hardened copper of the ancients have found not pure copper, but usually an alloy either natural—that is, the two metals existed in one ore so that in reduction an alloy was formed—or an artificial alloy made by melting the two ores together, the one copper, the other zinc.

Browning's High Ideals. Probably the writer who most frequently refused money was Robert Browning the poet. During the last 25 years of his life editors offered large sums for a short poem from his pen. But Browning said "No." He told his friends when they pointed out the unwisdom of this course that he was determined not to thrust his poems down the throats of the people; that if they wanted to read them they could buy his books.
