$200 Saved.—Rev. John W. Potter, Snow Hill, N. C., [January 6, 1868.] Says: "For twelve years I was a great sufferer. My liver was diseased. I lost my flesh and strength, and my skin seemed changed in its color by the bile with which my system was overcharged. I became subject to frequent and violent attacks of bilious colic, every attack leaving me weaker than its predecessor. The physician prescribed the PEPATIC PILLS, with no confidence in them. They acted like a charm on me. From that hour I improved. I have persevered in their use, until now, by God's blessing, I am well and hearty. I had a negro man, who, as I believe, was saved from death by a dose of these Pills. My Doctor's bill was annually from $100 to $200, but I had no need for a physician since I can so confidently recommend them as a superior family medicine." For sale by the Druggists. Directions accompanying each box. Sent to any part of the United States for $3 a dozen. Address, GEO. W. DEEMS, Baltimore, Md. April 1—1m

TO OUR FRIENDS. We still continue to sell books and stationery and all other goods in our line. We cannot sell at cost. If we do so, we shall be unable to buy other goods. We have been trading in our line for several years. Our friends have always patronized us largely, for which we are thankful. We have always tried to make a fair profit on our goods, and at the same time to give general satisfaction to our customers. We intend still to follow the same rule, which we deem fair and honorable. Such books as we do not have on hand, we will order for our friends. Among our late arrivals are: Methodist Hymn Books, Episcopal Prayer Books, Children's Illustrated Books in great variety, Photographs of Southern Generals and Photographs of Alabama. We have also a great variety of common and fine Bibles and Testaments; also a large variety of Sheet Music. We try to keep all School Books wanted by teachers, to whom we sell at a liberal discount. Call and see our stock before buying elsewhere. We are here to help you to the best book binding in the best style at short notice. We want to trade with our friends for years to come; hence we will sell as cheap as we can under the circumstances. BRANSON & FAIRBANKS, No. 40, Fayetteville St., Raleigh, N. C. Jan 5—1/4m

Tri-Weekly Standard. RALEIGH, N. C. TUESDAY, - - - APRIL 17, 1866.

We are sending out prospectuses of the Standard to our friends, and trust they will aid us in extending the circulation of the paper. Subscribers will please look out for the cross mark, and promptly renew. The mail facilities are limited, and money is so scarce, that it is no easy task to keep a newspaper establishment in the South in a flourishing condition.

On Saturday last the answer of Gen. Ruger, commanding the department of North-Carolina, to the writ of habeas corpus issued in the case of John H. Gee, was heard before his Honor Judge Fowle, in the Court house in this City. Gen. Ruger declined to produce the body of Gee. Col. Holland, one of the counsel for the defence, addressed the Court at considerable length, maintaining that the answer of Gen. Ruger was insufficient, and closed by moving an attachment against that officer in the usual form.

We took no notes, and shall not, therefore, attempt to present a sketch of Col. Holland's argument. He manifested a commendable zeal in behalf of his client, and his argument was characterized by force and ability.

After a full and patient hearing his Honor was understood to say, that according to the construction which the Court was disposed to give to the recent proclamation of the President, the Court had inferred that it was the purpose of the State all of the benefits of the civil law as in time of peace; one consequence of which was, "that no person could be subject to trial by martial law, unless he was in the land or naval service of the United States." It was taken for granted that the petitioner had never been in either service. The Court had always believed that in time of peace the civil law of the State, consistent with the civil law of the United States, and not in conflict therewith, was supreme, and martial or military law was subordinate thereto. It might be, however, that the Court had misconstrued the intent of the President's proclamation, and that it was not his purpose to suppress the exercise of martial law as to military commissions in actual session for the trial of offenders at the time the proclamation was promulgated. The Court, being desirous of avoiding all conflict between the civil authorities of the State and the military authorities of the United States, deemed it advisable to take further time for consideration, until it could have an opportunity of ascertaining the precise meaning of the proclamation on this respect; and accordingly, the motion was continued until 10 o'clock, A. M., 28th April, 1866.

Meanwhile the trial of Gee is progressing before the military court in this City. It is not perfectly clear that the proclamation of the President restores the habeas corpus in all cases, yet we think the Judge did right under the circumstances in granting the writ. It will test and settle the question; and besides, in every case of doubt it is well to lean to the side of the civil law against the law martial.

The correspondent of the Boston Commercial, while on his way from Boston to Washington, witnessed the following incident, which illustrates the difference between theory and practice: "While this political economist was in the height of his argument, the car filled up, and every pair of seats was taken except two directly opposite me. Upon a seat in each of these were two political philanthropists. Their legs were thrown over the vacant seat beside each of them, although three or four were standing. One of them was loud in his protestations of the social and civil equality of all men. The negro would soon get his rights. For his part he had no sympathy with those who would deprive him of them. Now one of the standing passengers was a colored man, and he, hearing such words of good cheer, turned to the ardent defender of the rights of his race, and said, "This seat does not appear to be engaged; I will occupy it," and he sat down. But our advocate for equality rose in high indignation; he scorned to beggar that walks a street seat beside his white friend. So much for preaching, and so much for practice."

A French writer says that there are but four great social ideas, viz: Birth, Marriage, Paris, and Death.

At a meeting of the Council of State in this City, on Saturday last—present, William A. Wright, Wm. Eaton, Jr., C. J. Cowles, H. A. Lemly, Jesse J. Yeates, and R. F. Simonton—the following appointments were made by the Governor and Council:

Board of Internal Improvements.—Patrick H. Winston, Jr., of Bertie, and Dr. J. G. Ramsay, of Rowan. Library.—Nereus Mendenhall, of Guilford, H. W. Husted, of Wake, and Col. S. D. Pool, of Wayne. Gov. Worth has recently appointed Prof. W. C. Kerr, of Mecklenburg, State Geologist.

We concur with the Wilmington Journal as to the propriety and importance of re-establishing the Medical Society of this State. This Society formerly exercised a marked influence on the profession, and was productive of much good: "Formerly, under the direction of wise and good men of the profession in this State, much good was done for the public and the science of medicine by the machinery of county medical societies, a State Medical Society, and a State Medical Journal. By those laudable means and measures, much was done to unite and harmonize the profession, to develop its resources, to improve its science, to elevate its standard and tone, and to contribute to the health and lives of the people. But all these means of good and progress were in the main, necessarily suspended during the war, and deplorable evils have hence resulted, to which we have just alluded.

We view we are glad to learn that steps are about to be taken to reorganize the profession of the State—to revive county Medical Societies and establish additional ones, and to call together again the State Medical Society. We are gratified at this, and are glad to be pleased to see a State Medical Journal also established at an early date as practicable. The profession in other States are moving in these matters, and why should the medical men of our State lag behind? We are glad to know that the physicians of North-Carolina, like their brave and generous soldiers, were not during the war surpassed in ability, skill and patriotism by those of any other State, and why now should the medical men of the State allow themselves to be surpassed?
