Bismarck's Sons.

[Chicago Times' Berlin Letter, 31.] The two Bismarck boys are perhaps the most vicious of their kind, and yet in the towns where they have played their most scandalous pranks, they are spoken of with a sort of admiring awe. Count Herbert, who has been in during his winter mission, has introduced more than Prussian diplomacy into the by no means grateful Bavarian court. There is no end to the scandals circulated concerning that gentleman, the hundredth part of which would serve to banish him from self-respecting communities in other countries. His younger brother, Count John, is too young to conceal his excesses, and too blunt, even if he were not. He is of the impression that his father holds Germany in fee-simple, and if that doesn't give him the right to do as he pleases, what can? So he does as he pleases, and he pleases to do exactly what the world in general holds to be low and very debasing. His haunts are more notorious for Democratic viciousness than aristocratic seclusion. His habitual state is not one to recommend him to polite attention, and if the face is, as Mr. Beecher searchingly says in some of his character analyses, an index of man's ruling passions, Count John would be about the person to bring on a Brooklyn witness stand. Herbert is rapt in looking as his race go, but John is dumb, bleary of eye, scrobbled of visage, and coarse of manner generally. The pair give the price, their father, unceasing anxiety, not only for their notorious profligacies, but for the difficulty he finds in keeping them on terms with their army and diplomatic associates. He has been striving to marry Count Herbert to a pretty countess of the Protestant party, but I am told the father refuses. The consent of the lady is never asked in affairs of this kind.

Wit and Justice in Missouri.

It is well known that some of the judges in Missouri were very reluctant to enforce the law against ministers of the gospel for exercising their profession without having taken the test oath, and availed themselves of every pretense to discharge those who were accused.

Three ministers charged with the crime of preaching "the glorious gospel of the Son of God," were arranged before a certain judge. They were regularly indicted, and it was understood that the profligate against them was very clear.

"Are you a preacher?" said the judge to one of them.
"Yes, sir," replied the culprit.
"To what denomination do you belong?"

"I am a Christian, sir." (With dignity.)
"A Christian! What do you mean by that? Are not all preachers Christians?"

"I belong to the sect usually called, but wrongly called, Campbellites." (Not so much dignity.)
"Ah! Then you believe in baptizing people in order that they may be born again, do you?"

"I do sir," defiantly.
"Mr. Sheriff, discharge that man. He is an innocent man. He is indicted for preaching the Gospel, and there is not a word of Gospel in the stuff he preaches. It is only some of Alexander Campbell's nonsense, discharge the man."
"Exit, Campbellite, greatly rejoicing."
"Are you a preacher," said the judge, addressing the second criminal.

"I am sir," said the miscreant.
"Of what denomination are you?"
"I am a Methodist, sir." This looks showed it.

"Do you believe in falling from grace?"
"I do, sir," Without hesitation.
"Do you believe in sprinkling people instead of baptizing them?"

"I believe that people can be baptized by sprinkling." Much offended.
"Do you believe in baptizing babies?"

"It is my opinion sir, that infants ought to be baptized." Indignantly.
"Not a word of scripture for anything of the kind, sir, shouted his honor. 'Sheriff, turn that man loose! He is no preacher of the gospel! The gospel is truth, and there is not a word of truth in what that man teaches. Turn him loose! It is ridiculous to indict men on such frivolous pretenses! Turn him loose!"

Methodist disappears, not at all hurt in his feelings by the judicial abuse he had received.
"What are you sir?" said the judge to the third felon.
"Some people call me a preacher, sir," Meekly.

"What is your denomination?"
"I am a Baptist." Head up.
"His honor's countenance fell, and he looked sober and said. After a pause he said:
"Do you believe in salvation by grace?"
"I do." Firmly.
"Do you teach that immersion only is baptism?"
"That is my doctrine." Earnestly.
"And you baptize none but those who believe in Jesus Christ?"
"That is my faith and practice."

With emphasis.
"My friend, I fear it will go hard with you. I see you are indicted for preaching the gospel, and it appears to me by your own confession that you are guilty."

Baptist looked pretty blue.
"May I please your honor," said the Baptist counsel, springing to his feet, "that man never preached the gospel. I have heard him say a hundred times that he only tried. I have heard him try myself."

"Mr. Sheriff, discharge this man! He is not indicted for trying. There is nothing said about the mere effort. Let him go sir! I am astonished that the State's attorney could annoy the court with such frivolous indictments!"

Exit Baptist, determined to 'try' again.
Court adjourned for 'liker.'

Diversifying Southern Crops.

One of the most encouraging circumstances in the agricultural condition and prospects of the south is the experiment which it has now successfully made in the way of a diversity of products. Hitherto King Cotton has allowed no rival, nor even accessory, near his throne. A prediction ten years ago that any of the cotton-raising States would in 1875 have a surplus of cereals would have excited an incredulous smile. Yet the States of Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama will this year have enough and to spare. In addition to this unprecedented grain yield, the old staple, though reduced in acreage, has by a more thorough system of cultivation rewarded the planters as never before, and they boast of an independence that has heretofore been unknown to that portion of the country. They claim that with their surplus of breadstuffs they can obtain the means by which they will be enabled to hold their cotton, take advantage of the market, and sell for cash instead of following the practice that has almost universally obtained of mortgaging their crops early in the season at ruinous figures. The agricultural resources and capabilities of the south have never yet been fully developed. It is able to feed itself as well as to clothe, in certain essential respects, both itself and the world. The sovereignty of cotton would never have been disputed if it had enjoyed the aid of such auxiliaries as the cultivation of the cereals and manufacturing industry.

Pleasant Bedrooms.

There is nothing more indicative of refinement and genuine culture in a family than bright, cheerful and tastefully decorated bed-chambers. Tasteful decoration does not necessarily mean expense, and it is possible to make a chamber look very pretty at a very small outlay. Indeed, in many instances, no outlay at all will be required beyond what would be incurred under any circumstances. The women of a family, especially, are apt to pass a good portion of their time in their bed-chamber, and in some households the sleeping apartments are used alike for sewing rooms, sitting rooms, and nurseries. It is worth while to obtain all the innocent pleasure we can find in this life, and there can be no doubt that life is pleasanter if most of its hours are passed in cheerful looking apartments.

Town and Country.

The Richmond Whig cleverly ridicules the foolish prejudice between town and country which is sought to be fostered by certain demagogues, inside and out of the legislature. It says:

"Country against town and town against country" is the cry we often hear from demagogues in the legislature. Are country and town at loggerheads really? Do country people dislike town people, and do town people dislike country people? No. It is all nonsense. Where did the town people come from, but from the country? Originally all was country.

"And now the country and man made the town," but the man came from the country who made the town. The cities and towns are the children of the country. Every year thousands of people, mostly young men, move from the country to settle in the cities and towns, to become clerks in stores, to learn trades, to study for the professions, to engage in the various callings of life. Why, country and town people are of the same blood, and it would be the most unnatural thing in the world for them to dislike each other."

Brother Jonathan.

This term, as applied to the United States, originated in a playful remark of Washington. The incident is this: When Gen. Washington, after being appointed commander of the army of the revolutionary war, went to Massachusetts to organize it, he found a great want of ammunition and other means of defense, and on one occasion it seemed that no means could be devised for the necessary supply. Jonathan Trumbull, the elder, was then governor of the State of Connecticut, and the general, placing greatest reliance on his excellency's judgment, remarked: "We must consult Brother Jonathan on the subject." The general did so, and the governor was successful in supplying many of the wants of the army; and thenceforward when difficulties arose, and the army was spread over the country, it became a by-phrase: "We must consult Brother Jonathan;" and the name has now become a designation for the whole country, as John Bull has for England.

Tote.

The Philadelphia Press displays its curious learning as follows: The word tote (to carry), long in vogue in Southern Delaware and Maryland, and said to be a negroism, is of ancient and honorable origin, from an old legal term tollere, to carry up a case to a higher court, which came to be known as the writ tote, which was pronounced tote. It was applied particularly to cases "carried up" from the barons court, in old English times, to the country court, and was as dear to the yeomanry as the common law itself. Therefore, let us not ridicule tote as a more Maryland and Delaware provincialism, originating with the former slaves of those States, but class it as belonging to one of the first families of words.

Mr. and Mrs. Penny went to church last Sunday, and listened to a most beautiful sermon. On coming out, they walked for awhile in silence, the discourse no doubt having made a deep impression on their minds. Finally the husband said: "Wasn't that beautiful, Mrs. P. and the wife absently replied: "Yes, I wonder how much she gave for it."

Valuable Property IN HALIFAX COUNTY FOR SALE!

I HAVE TWO VALUABLE TRACTS OF land in Halifax county which I offer for sale.
In the first tract there are 600 acres of good land. On the premises are a stone house 100 feet deep, a dwelling large and commodious with all necessary out-houses, all in excellent repair. The farm can be divided into two or three parts as may be desired. It lies near to the village of Palmyra, the store and residence of the late Mr. J. B. Coffield, and is excellent as a place of business. A Hotel and Livery Stable would also pay at this point, and for both purposes there are houses suitable on the premises.
The second tract contains 450 acres with a dwelling and out-buildings. It is situated on Roanoke River 1 1/2 miles from Palmyra, with a good landing and a Warehouse 38x72 feet, just built and used by myself for storing fertilizers and for other purposes.
The water at both places is excellent.
MY price for each tract is less than it will fetch in the Western part of the State.
TERMS:—One-third cash, balance in four payments of one-twelfth each, for four years. Possession given when desired.
Growing crops will also be sold.
Further information can be obtained by applying either in person or by letter to the undersigned.
