ROBINSON RECALLS BUFFALO STAMPEDE

(By George L. Robinson in the McLean County Independent.) In regard to that herd of buffalo that I told you about, I will give it to you as my memory serves me after 53 years. It was late in the summer or early in the fall of 1860. I was employed as teamster (or bullwhacker) in the train of Col. Wm. Bent, one of the old time freighters of that day.

But, about the buffalo. It was the second or third day after passing Pawnee Rock, one of the historic landmarks of the Santa Fe trail. We had yoked up for the afternoon or rather for the evening drive and had just straightened out on the trail, when we noticed our wagon master—who had as was customary, started out to select a camping place for the night—sitting on his horse about half a mile ahead of us on the brow of a hill, and looking straight ahead; thoughts of Indians came to us and every one went to his rifle which was slung on the side of his wagon and examined it to see if it was loaded.

My Faith Looks Up To Thee... Mabel Leonard, Magdalen Cunningham

the wagons we could hear the thump or tread of the buffalo as they kept up their march to the southern feeding ground.

Our usual time for starting on the evening drive was 3 o'clock and how long that herd had been passing when he first sighted them, we had no means of knowing, but it was after 4 the next afternoon before they thinned down enough to make it safe for us to pass through. As we traveled on we found that in the center of the valley about two miles wide was beaten down as though it had been traveled for ages. Half a mile or more on each side of that was beaten until there was hardly a spear of grass left, for the worn out lingered to eat.

How many buffalo passed over the trail while we lay there, I would not pretend to guess, but it must have been in the hundreds of thousands if not in the millions. That was in 1860 and by 1880 the buffalo were about exterminated. The last hunt that I know of was in 1883. I was but a tenderfoot, but my wagon master and the drivers had many trips on the plains. Our hunter, an old Indian, who had been raised on the plains said that the "stampede" (which it surely was) had been caused by hunters, most likely whites, as the Indians tried to do their hunting without frightening more than could be helped. The herd would then not avoid the grounds another year.
