THE HOUSE OF DREAMS.

I know a house that stands remote, With garden, lawn and pigeon cote, Below a hill, beyond a wood, Like some old face beneath a hood, Its barn, with its one windy eye, Gray roofed, and shaggy browed with rye, Keeps watch upon the old post road That wanders by.

"It's always autumn there. The ways Are strewn with leaves; all day a haze Spreads o'er the land a shimmering veil. At eve the lone wind lifts a wail, And nearing midnight, comes the rain And taps each dripping window pane. And in the barn, at dawn, a fall Beats, and a wail. Pulls, apple piled, up to its rail.

Sleep carpets all its room, whose doors And windows look on misty moors, And on a marsh where woad and pipe The wild duck and the long billed snipe; And over which the house beholds The morn come wrapped in ghostly folds And day retire in wild estate Of storm, that folds His couch with purple, glaring late.

At noon the moors discharge the moon Like some enormous orb. The loom Screams somewhere, like a soul that's lost.

And everywhere a smell of frost, And sodden flowers and fruits and leaves Makes sad the heart. A cricket grieves, And on a small window, seen from far, Beneath vinyl eaves, Glimmers o'er the marsh like some bright star.

And there it sits and dreams its dreams, The soul, that in a part, it seems, Of this old house, unto whose door Courtiers come riding overmoor, Splashed with the leagues of clay and wet, They bring strange news, that none may let, Of days long past and days to be Days men forget, And days no man shall ever see.

RESCUES GIRL, IS ARRESTED

Saves Belress from Mexicans But His Wife Was Not Divorced

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Rescue of a Mexican ranch owner's daughter, whom he brought to the home of his mother in Chicago, where he planned to have her stay until a year from the date of a supposed divorce from a former wife, brought Donald Scott, Mexican mine owner, into the hands of the United States authorities. He was arrested at the apartments where he lived with his mother, and where his sweetheart was sheltered, by United States marshals, charged with violating the Mann act.

The girl is Senorita Ch'anna Gall' da. Her father, Maridina Gallinda, owner of thousands of acres of land and several mines in the province of Durango, near Topia, Mex'co, was killed in August. After his arrest Scott learned that instead of a divorce his wife had obtained only a decree of separate maintenance when she learned he had brought the girl to Chicago. He had been paying alimony and supposed he was divorced, he said.

The story of the escape of the young couple from Mexico is a thrilling one. Price on Girl's Head. Senorita Gallinda's father was a member of the Council of the Social Defensa an organization of Mexican land owners, formed to resist devastation of their properties by the revolutionist armies which had seized the province. Gallinda was slain in battle and Senorita Gallinda was left an orphan.

Scott had been a neighbor and friend of her father and the girl and he had known each other for several years. With a price on her head because of her father's prominence in the country's affairs, the terrified girl left her land a property behind her and fled in the night to Scott's ranch. She asked him to save her life. There was only one way in which it could be done, and though it placed both their lives in the hand of a revolutionist, Scott took the chance.

In the revolutionist army were Marino and Domingo Arripas, who once worked for Scott and were his friends. He went with the girl in open daylight and appealed to them. A regiment of 800 men was sent as a guard to see them safely to Culiccan, a seaport, whence they embarked to San Francisco.

From the California city Scott telegraphed his mother. She was not living with his father, and Scott arranged an apartment for her and the young senorita with whom he had fallen in love in the perilous days in the war-ridden country. Scott visited his father, and his wife, who had left him four years ago with the girl, then 2 years old, learned where he was residing. She complained to the immigration officials and the Department of Justice investigators and the arrest followed.

Senorita Gallinda, who is 21 years old, is in tears. She does not speak English and Scott was her sole comforter. Scott has been manager of the Topia Mining and Developing Company for five years. The break between himself and his wife, he said, came when she became dissatisfied when his work required him to live in Mexico.

Few young people realize the need of a thorough practical education, as much as they should, so it is with great admiration that we watch those who "build the ladder by which they climb."

The Young Peoples' Literary Society of Trygg met at Trygg school No. 3 on the evening of January 3. A short program as rendered and the most interesting feature of the program, a debate, followed. The question discussed was the world wide agitated subject: "Resolved, that women should have universal suffrage." The speakers on the affirmative were E. A. Trygg, Milt. Cox, and Lydia Hartley. Those on the negative, C. O. Kell, Bessie Sheldon and O. Madland. The judges were: Emil Moses, Frank Trygg and Mary Anderson. Excellent points were brought out on both sides so that it was difficult to decide which had the better, but it was finally revealed that the affirmative had it, by two to one.

The next meeting of the society will be held on Saturday evening, January 17. All are cordially invited. The subject for debate is, Resolved: that the country school offers more advantages to its pupils than the city schools.

MOTHER! IS CHILD'S STOMACH SOUR, SICK?

If Cross, Feverish, Constipated, Give California Syrup of Figs.

Don't spoil your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated, this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeiters sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt, any other fig syrup.—Adv.

LOST IN SEWER; FOUND INSANE

Man Rescued After Wandering for Days in Big Mains

Stenboville, Ohio, Jan. 6.—After wandering thirty-six hours in big sewer mains under the streets of the city, unable to make his cries for help heard, Steve Hobob, 23 years old, an employee at the Carnegie Steel plant was rescued insane.

It is believed Hobob crawled into a sewer entrance at the river bank and was unable to find his way out. Passers-by finally heard faint noises under a manhole and pulled him out, nearly starved and raving.

From the incoherent fragments of the man's ravings it is believed that he went in the mouth of the sewer simply in a spirit of adventure, with an idea of exploring it a short distance and then returning. The first intimation that some one was in the sewer came at noon when persons passing on Front street heard faint cries. At first they were unable to locate the source of the noise but finally they were found to center at the manhole in the street. The cover was lifted off and down in the murky depths was seen the form of a man. He was unable to help himself, and a fireman was lowered with a rope, by which Hobob was hauled to the surface.
