OTHERS LIKE CUT OF BRADY'S TOGA

Boise, Ida., Feb. 18.—The efforts of the opponents of United States Senator James H. Brady to prevent his reelection this year have precipitated an exceedingly interesting personal contest in Idaho. There are many powerful forces at work against him and if he succeeds in getting back to the senate in spite of them all it will be a remarkable victory. No Idaho politician has ever faced so formidable a combination as that which now confronts him.

Mr. Brady was elected to the senate a little more than a year ago to fill the unexpired term of Welden P. Heyburn, deceased. He had served as governor and had long been one of the leaders of the Republican party in Idaho. The state is normally Republican and under ordinary conditions it would seem a comparatively easy matter for Senator Brady to return to Washington for a six-year term. But the situation as it exists at present is badly complicated. On the Republican side alone there are four candidates for Senator Brady's seat. In addition to Senator Brady himself the candidates are Frank R. Gooding, a former governor of the state and one of the largest sheep raisers in the country; James F. Ailshe, chief justice of the state supreme court; and Burton Leu French, who has served ten years in Congress and has a large political following.

Geography adds to the complications. With interests and industries of an extensive nature, Idaho is a candidate, however, and Mr. Brady, whose home is in south Idaho, was successful in capturing the toga. Now north Idaho comes back with a very insistent demand that the old agreement be observed, but again it is handicapped by a division of its forces. Chief Justice Ailshe and Congressman French both live in north Idaho and unless one or the other withdraws from the contest, the plum may easily fall to a south Idaho man.

Fred T. Dubois, former United States senator and one of the most conspicuous politicians in the state, is one of the important factors to be considered in the senatorial campaign. There has been talk that he would be a candidate for Senator Brady's seat on the Progressive ticket and this it is admitted would break into the ranks of the Republicans in a serious manner.

With the Progressives opposing the regular Republicans and the latter fighting among themselves it would seem on the surface of things a comparatively easy matter for the Democrats to elect a senator. But the Democrats likewise are divided into bitterly hostile factions with the Federal patronage as the bone of contention. John F. Nugent is the champion of the Wilson-Bryan faction of the party and is expected to have the support of the national administration in his race for the senate. Opposed to him is a strong faction of the party which is boosting ex-Governor James H. Hawley for the senate. With Republicans and Democrats divided among themselves and a third party candidate in the field no one would be rash enough to venture a prediction as to the final result of the contest. The only certainty is that the campaign will be the hardest fought in the history of Idaho.
