Cancer From a Tongue Bite

An instance of cancer of the tongue arising in unusual but significant circumstances was reported recently in the Boston Record. A junior at Wellesley college bit her tongue severely in the course of a basketball game. Cancer of the tongue developed and the girl died in spite of all efforts to save her. In the absence of a detailed medical report, it would perhaps be unwise to accept the story at its full face value. Nevertheless it carries an implication of the greatest practical importance. One thing about cancer that is now established is that irritation and injury play a great part in causing the disease. Consequently, cancer is to some extent preventable. It is not always possible to prevent a sudden injury, but many sources of continued irritation of the skin can be and should be avoided. Cancer of the tongue is one of the most dangerous, most rapidly fatal forms of malignant disease. Yet like most kinds of cancer, it is curable if the patient will only act quickly on the first indication that something is wrong. Irritation from sharp edges of teeth, or decayed

CAREFUL DOCTOR

Prescribed Change of Food, Instead of Drugs. It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines. Some truly scientific physicians recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated. Here's an instance: "Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation. "I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me—a specialist from N. Y., and, as a last hope, sent for him. "After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more. "I kept at it and gradually began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered. "Now, after a year on Grape-Nuts, I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. stumps, or badly fitting plates, especially when coupled with constant smoking and with the local manifestations of a constitutional blood disease, has been shown in many cases to result in cancer of the tongue. The disease spreads very rapidly from this organ, more so than in other parts of the body, and the chance of safety in operation is shorter lived than in many forms of the disease. Attention to the warning must therefore be immediate. On the other hand, it is fortunate that the tongue is so accessible an organ that the first signs can be discovered almost immediately. Often cancer of the stomach or other intestinal organs may exist for months before it is discovered. With the tongue there is no such excuse for delay. Frequently the first danger sign is a little hard white spot on the edge of the tongue, where it rubs, perhaps, against a sharp tooth. The correction of such sharp edges of the teeth and plates is a simple and easy matter for the dentist. If such precautions were taken cancer would be prevented in many a case. It is idle to assert that such conditions will always cause a cancer, but they should not be tolerated anyway, and if they are corrected there is not the slightest doubt that the chance of cancer is lessened. Such stories as that of the Wellesley student should not excite foolish fears, or misdirected apprehension. To quit playing basketball or to fracture a finger every time one bites the tongue would be to substitute morbid and senseless anxiety for rational self-knowledge. Care of the health, like moral reform, should be directed by the best intelligence we can muster.

From a financial and entertainment standpoint, the success of the minstrel show is assured. Last night's rehearsal was evidence of the highly polished state to which the members of the cast have been drilled. Every seat in the big theater will be occupied when the curtain rises on the first part of the show, the committee at present facing the problem of accommodations as the demand has already practically taxed the capacity of the playhouse. As a result of this popularity and the fact that the special booster edition published in connection with the minstrel has contributed a substantial amount to the cause, the coffers of the Elks will be benefitted by a neat sum. Mr. Draper Heard. Mr. Clint Draper of the firm of Miller and Draper, under whose direction the entertainment is being staged in this city, has been on the ground since Wednesday and by his presence is lending invaluable assistance towards making the show a complete success. Draper is an experienced showman, an expert in his line of work, and after hearing the boys in rehearsal the other night had nothing but the choicest words of praise for the talent. "Gentlemen, it is a pleasure for me to share in the success which your efforts are going to make this entertainment," he said following last night's rehearsal. "I want to congratulate each and every one of you for the spirit and the energy you have brought to bear in preparation." Mr. Draper was busy yesterday with the task of getting scenery and costumes in readiness for the attraction. The Miller and Draper firm has a reputation, covering the past fifteen years, of making Elks' minstrels of the brightest and best successes. Not a single detail is overlooked in producing the most complete and up-to-date minstrel show it is possible to enjoy.

Warden Talcott Scores States Attorneys Who Advise Youths to Plead Guilty.

"The warden is here to reform me, not as a guardian for babies." "Any state's attorney who will advise a young boy to plead guilty to a criminal charge, with the boy running a chance of being sentenced to the state penitentiary, should not be allowed to hold the office twenty-four hours," says Warden Frank Talcott of the North Dakota penitentiary, in an article printed in the prison paper. "There are about ten boys in this institution who ought to be at home with their mothers. We have had talks with all these boys, and have asked them what they were doing here. They told us that the state's attorney had told them to 'cop' a plea and get off with 'petty,' which means that the state's attorney has recommended them to plead guilty and he would get them on a petty larceny charge, with 10 to 15 days in the county jail. "These kids appeared before the district judge and pleaded guilty. They did not know the difference between petty and grand larceny, so they simply pleaded guilty to larceny, and the judge taking it for granted that as the information read grand larceny, they were pleading according to the information. "We recommend to district court judges that when young boys appear before them to plead guilty, that the judge first find out what the boy is pleading guilty to. Ten chances to one the boy doesn't know, but the state's attorney said, 'plead guilty.' Make a man of the boy instead of sending him to prison."

TAKES A TRIP TO THE CAPITOL

Schumann-Heink Looks in on the Various State Officers for a Moment.

Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink and party left here yesterday for Grand Forks where the great singer will appear in concert on Monday night and where she will look over her farming interests. Schumann-Heink owns a fine half section of farm land near Grand Forks. The Madame suffered from a severe attack of catarrh, which she calls her "old enemy," on Wednesday night, and this is why she did not respond with an encore at the close of the concert. She had planned on singing "Mother o' Mine," by Kipling, for her enthusiastic and appreciative Bismarck audience, but was not allowed to do so for fear that she would be in bed the next day. She was very much improved yesterday morning and felt well enough to go to the state capitol to look into the various departments of state. "I love this city," said Schumann-Heink. "It is named after the grandest man God ever made." She was deeply touched by the tribute paid her at the close of the concert Wednesday night, for not a soul moved from his seat for many minutes after the last note had died away. She stated that she loved to sing in the smaller cities, that she was more appreciated there than in the large centers of population.

procedure. This means that the prosecution called all the defendants present at the trial to the stand and cross examined them for whatever testimony they wished to secure. The above statute, however, prohibited the attorneys for the board from interrogating the defendants on any ground as cited in the demurrer and also on the ground that the evidence offered by the plaintiffs did not show them to be entitled to an injunction or any other relief. This motion was sustained by the court and the action was dismissed. Effect of Dismissal. The effect of the dismissal will be to allow the board of control to complete the improvements which are now almost finished—there remaining but about $1,200 worth of work to be done on the receiving ward building; and also to allow the state officers to sign the contract, W. J. Curran, the money due him. Mr. Curran has had about $18,000 tied up for the last two months on account of this action. Return to Bismarck. W. J. Jackson of the board of control; E. G. Wanner, secretary to the board; Carl O. Jorgenson, state auditor, and Andrew Miller, attorney for the board, returned to this city on No. 1 last night. One hundred and fifty inmates, or about that number of insane patients, are the real sufferers in this action for they have been kept crowded in basements, and in the annex and in the overcrowded ward buildings when they could have been accommodated in the new building sixty days ago had the action not held up the work on the building. That the judgment of the board in doing more than the 1913 legislature provided for is sound is proven by the fact that the new building is not big enough now, even though it is not yet completed, and the first thing to be done will be the addition of two wings to the new building. And this in spite of the fact that the new building as erected by the board is half again as large as the 1913 assembly provided for. Had No Case At All. STATE HAS REASON TO FEEL PROUD (Fargo Forum.) Has a North Dakotan a right to feel proud of his state and optimistic regarding the future? Read the following from The Financial World, one of the leading Wall street publications and a paper of national circulation: "According to statistics, compiled from the last decennial government report, one-sixth of all the increase in improved farm property in the United States was in North Dakota. "The increase in improved land in that state during the past ten years has been 112 per cent, more than any other state in the Union. "In 1914 North Dakota marketed more than five times as many hogs as in 1912. "Corn production nearly doubled during the same time. "The average farm in North Dakota is 582 acres. "Business conditions at the present time are excellent and real estate and loan agents state that the loan business is very slow this season, owing to the splendid financial condition of the farmers." NOTICE. Dr. H. O. Danford, City, wishes to announce to the public the fact that he is in no way connected with the Union Dentists and that all work done by him is guaranteed. Signed, DR. H. O.
