Hours Spent in Presenting Long List of Candidates to the Delegates.

Chicago, June 9.—Flights of oratory in behalf of favorite sons characterized today's session of the Republican convention. Delegates were entertained by outbursts of enthusiasm for the different candidates as their qualities were depicted and extolled.

GOVERNOR F. B. WILLIS PRESENTS SENATOR BURTON

Governor Frank B. Willis of Ohio nominated Theodore E. Burton. He said in part: "History is to be made here today; we shall make America greater or disappoint a world. A mighty people, vast and nations beyond the seas await our verdict. We are not gathered to pluck the fragrant flowers of eloquence, to indulge in fulsome self-glorification or to engage in unhappy factional contest. A reunited, determined, forward-looking Republican party demands that mere personal ambitions and pride of opinion shall give way to the welfare of the party and the country. The faces of the mighty dead look down upon us and inspire us to achievement worthy of win, divided, the Democrats win and the country loses."

"His private life is as clean as his public career is distinguished; genial and approachable, he possesses the rugged grandeur of the great and presents in its best light, inspiring, uplifting party leadership. He is kind without being effusive, cordial without the familiarity which breeds contempt, scholarly without being pedantic; he is gentle without being weak and firm without being dictatorial. His modesty and unobtrusiveness are excelled only by his cordiality and warmth to those who know him best. He is common without being common-place. He is loved by his friends, feared by his antagonists and respected by all. It is no disparagement of any of the eminent Republicans who are candidates before this convention, when I say that no man in America is better fitted for the high office of President by natural ability, by breadth of vision, by wide acquaintance with world-problems, by successful experience, by high purpose and lofty character than is Ohio's candidate.

"In obedience to the command of a united party in our state and voicing the unanimous sentiment of her delegation, I present for your consideration Ohio's choice for the Presidency that scholar, leader, statesman, that citizen of the world—with another we can win, with him we cannot fail. I nominate for the office of President of the United States, Theodore E. Burton."

WILLIAM WOOD IS FAIRBANKS' SPOKESMAN

Charles W. Fairbanks was presented to the Republican National Convention today by Representative William R. Wood, of Indiana, as Indiana's candidate for the Presidential nomination, and as the man who not only would make one of the greatest Presidents the country ever has had, but whose election would assure the election of a Republican majority to both branches of Congress.

Mr. Wood pointed to the former Vice President's record as spokesman for President McKinley in the Senate before and during the Spanish War, to his part in framing the policy of the nation toward territorial acquisitions and to his championing of sound money and a protective tariff as proof that he was fitted by ability and experience to guide the destinies of the nation during the trying times ahead. He declared that Mr. Fairbanks, who had marched from an Ohio log cabin to a senatorship and to the Vice Presidency, of the United States, was in the zenith of his intellectual powers. Referring to the split in the party four years ago, he said Indiana's son spoke whenever called upon during the embittered campaign that followed, always expounded Republican doctrine, but at no time imputing evil motive to anyone who "for the time had departed from the house of the fathers." SENATOR LODGE'S EULOGY OF JOHN W. WEEKS "John Wingate Weeks of Massachusetts was nominated as a candidate for the Republican nomination for president at the national convention of the party today by his colleague in the United States senate, Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator Lodge said: "Born and bred in New Hampshire, adopted by Massachusetts, the candidate whose name I am about to present, commands the confidence and the high respect of these two old states, whose names stand together on the Declaration of Independence and on the Constitution of the United States. Admitted to the Naval Academy in 1877, he received not only the thorough education which is there always given, but he also learned those lessons of patriotism, of honor and of devotion to the country and to the flag which are never forgotten by the graduates of Annapolis and West Point. After leaving the Navy he attained in civil life to a large and well-earned success in the business world, whose trust he never failed to command. In that practical school he acquired a wide knowledge of all the great economic problems and of the problems of finance upon which the prosperity of the country so largely depends. In 1898, when war came to us, he returned at once to the profession of his youth and served his country in naval command during the conflict with Spain. He was chosen to be Mayor of Newton, the city where he lives, in 1903, and after an administration of great success, he was elected a member of Congress. In the House, he rose to the front rank and to high distinction not only as a debater but as a master of economic questions and a legislator of marked constructive ability. After eight years' service in the House, he was elected to the Senate, where he has not only continued but has added to the distinction which he had won in the other branch of Congress and where his standing and reputation are known to all men. A better training for the highest and most responsible of public offices could not be devised, and this training, rests on the firm foundation of distinguished abilities, strong and upright reputation without blemish or reproach. "Such a man in every fibre of his being, is the candidate I am now to present to you, and I name to you as a candidate for the nomination for President of the United States the Honorable John Wingate Weeks, of Massachusetts."

SEN. LAFOLLETTE'S NAME PRESENTED FOR THIRD TIME

The name of Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, was presented to the Republican National Convention today by M. B. Olbrich, of Madison, Wisconsin. He spoke as follows: "For the third successive time Wisconsin presents to the Republicans of the nation opportunity for party salvation. Twice before through the rejection of her message disaster came. Today she points once more the way to victory and honor. She presents again the candidate whose speech and action best interpret and express the hour's spirit and its needs. "Gentlemen, Wisconsin gives you the name of her loved and trusted leader,—brave, true-hearted, courteous, simple, gentleman, regenerator of a proud and prosperous commonwealth; first architect of the superb and splendid structure that goes ever forward to completion, a redeemed America, and today her truest prophet of international morality—Robert M. LaFollette."

GOV. BRUMBAUGH NOMINATED BY MARTIN GROVE

Chicago, June 8.—Martin Grove, Brumbaugh, governor of Pennsylvania, was presented to the Republican national convention today as a candidate for the presidency by Emerson Collins, deputy attorney general of the state.

Mr. Collins began with a prediction of party success next November and then pointed out that Pennsylvania, although long a stronghold of Republicanism, "has never been honored with a place on the national ticket." He then said, in part: "Obedient to the free expression and the solemn mandate of an open preferential primary, in which he received a quarter of a million votes, Pennsylvania presents to this convention for nomination the name of her distinguished governor, Martin Grove Brumbaugh. In the memory of her fealty in the days that are done, in Hawaii, Roosevelt gained 16 votes on the second ballot. One of these came from Maine, one from Massachusetts, two from Michigan, 15 from two Porto Rico delegates failed to qualify. This reduced the number necessary for a nomination to 494, instead of 495, as previously had been announced. Governor Whitman of New York tonight asserted that Hughes would be nominated tomorrow. "The peace conference tonight will be futile," he said. "There is no prospect of an agreement, and Justice Hughes will be named as the standard bearer of the republicans tomorrow on the third or fourth ballot."

tion, and one of the peace conferees. He got a reception that rose to the high ceiling and swelled out into the streets, but when he began to speak the old temper for Roosevelt named out again.

The senator spoke briefly. He said he hoped for harmony and peace and the spirit of setting together, but he promised to follow Mr. Roosevelt with all ardor, if he should be the nominee of the two parties.

Little Routine Business. There was little routine business during the day. The platform was tentatively agreed upon with only a few changes. The fight to insert a prohibition plank was beaten by the vote of 523 to 82 after the leaders had explained at length that to put it in meant prohibition and not Americanism would be the main issue of the coming campaign, for the rest, the delegates just cheered and listened. Realizing that an outbreak might be avoided only by keeping them in good humor, the leaders recognized man after man in the hall and called them to the platform, allowing them to play on the crowd's good nature and its sense of humor. Before the adjournment the delegates were told of the results of the first two ballots at the Coliseum. They took comfort from the vote for Roosevelt and the motion to end the session was unopposed. James R. Garfield of Ohio made the motion to adjourn and the delegates left the hall just twelve hours after they had entered it this morning.

The Progressive convention adjourned at 9:53 p. m. tonight, until 10:30 tomorrow, upon receiving word from the Coliseum that the republican convention, after taking two ballots on candidates for the republican nomination without results had adjourned until tomorrow.

Dorr Carroll Excited. Chairman Dorr Carroll of the North Dakota delegation said that when he had been asked if he could "control his delegation," he said he sometimes had difficulty in controlling himself.

"There is a lot of language in my system," he said, as he began, "that I'm going to keep there."

William Flynn of Pennsylvania faced George W. Perkins and said he also had "something in his system" he wasn't going to let out. "You needn't have for one moment any apprehension that difference down at the Coliseum is going to put it over on us," he said. "You take it from me, we're playing the game right. We know we may have to go to bat with a third party ticket and we want to go in good shape. "They accuse me of some time having been a boss. I don't know about that. I may have done it inadvertently."

BORN A SLAVE, DIES RICH

Stockton, Kan.—The will of the late Sanford Johnson has been filed for probate. According to this document he left 640 acres of Rooks county land, free from incumbrance, besides personal property to the sum of $7,000.

Born in bondage, freed by the Emancipation Proclamation and with no educational opportunities, Johnson succeeded in accumulating property far in excess of that of many of his white neighbors and associates. He came to Rooks county in the early eighties and homesteaded the quarter section on which he died.

He reared six children, giving all a common-school education. He has always been considered one of the substantial and up-to-date farmers in his community. His property was divided between his children.

TO PREACH HERE. The Rev. Albert Martyr of Oakes will hold services next Sunday at St. George's Episcopal church. An announcement of the services will be made Sunday.
