COMING THAT WAY.
 In the state of Washington the school authorities propose to stop the use of perfume by the girl students.
 In Kansas the board of education will consider the proposition of adopting uniforms for girls in all the public schools, so that one may not dress better than another.
 First thing we know there won't be anything left in school for the girls but an education.

Many a married man grows cold at the sight of an old flame.

SHORT-SIGHTED.
 Rear Admiral McLean, commandant of the Norfolk navy yard, has ordered an investigation of the complaint that German interned sailors from the cruisers, Prinz Eitel Frederick and Kron Prinz Wilhelm, raided the watermelon patch of a Virginia farmer. That farmer is a chump. Instead of filing a complaint, he should send the Germans a whole cart load of melons. If he was alive to his opportunities he might work up a Jim-dandy advertising stunt out of the incident. "Watermelon grower to the Kaiser's Navy." Think of it! He couldn't begin to supply the demand.

The world needs men who can give reasons instead of excuses.

MODERN HEROES.
 Everybody applauds Shackleton's rescue of 22 explorers marooned on an Antarctic island.
 Everybody also honors Sir Ernest for his persistent efforts to restore his lost comrades to their places in the world. The successful relief expedition was the fourth, and a fifth was already under way, in the event of present failure.

Everybody approves the great expenditure of money and energy in these relief expeditions—such is the high value set on human life, such is the great responsibility we all feel for conserving it. This is a pet form of modern idealism.

Everybody follows the war news. We read one day that 22 men are dead in an airship raid, and the next day, multiplying that number by 100 or 1,000, yea, even by tens of thousands, we count the slain on Europe's battlefields—heroes, never again to be known in their accustomed places. That men should die for a great cause is another popular form of idealism.

But we view these tremendous war losses very calmly now. And the widespread rejoicing over the handful of rescued sailors emphasizes sharply the quietness with which we accept the awful toll of war.

Why shout so loudly when a score of adventurers escape death and be dumb concerning the constant slaughter of armies?
 Because we are ashamed if we must attain any ideal at the cost of another man's well being. Sir Ernest

Shackleton could not wear his mantle with comfort until he had saved those who had helped him win it.
 When a race must climb up to a higher degree of civilization over the graves of millions of soldiers, silence is the only decent tribute to the sacrifice made by the dead.
 All who survive the war will profit by it somehow. But grateful men will take their gain in humility and quietness.
 Little does the praise of the living profit the dead.

WITH THE MOVIES

GRAND
 That truth is sometimes stranger than fiction is powerfully illustrated in the history of that world famous couple, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, whose lives will be shown in all the remarkable detail in the big photoplay production, "The Whirl of Life," which comes to the Grand Theatre tomorrow, matinee and night shows. As the name of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle is linked throughout the world with the art of dancing, no picture of their lives would be absolutely complete without some dancing episodes and the "Whirl of Life" not only contains a number of ballroom and cabaret scenes, in which this requisite is supplied, but it also shows a new dance step, called, "The Castle Glide," which the talented couple quite accidentally discovered during the making of one of the scenes. It will make a big hit with young and old when it is mastered.

BISMARCK

Though there have been many songs extolling life on the ocean wave, and innumerable plays that picture the deeds and misdeeds of the socially elect, life on our inland waterways has seldom aroused the interest of the playwright. Hence, "Still Waters," the story of canal-boat life and of the circus, in which Marguerite Clark is featured by the Famous Players Film company on the Paramount Program at the Bismarck Monday of this week, will prove of special interest.

In this remarkable combination of pastoral romance and gripping drama Marguerite has the best opportunity yet afforded her of displaying her wonderful versatility. Already acknowledged as superb in the art of screen equitry and generally recognized as one of the most winsome little Misses in motion pictures, Miss Clark, by her tremendous powers as a dramatic actress, will add to her laurels as a photoplayer. It is seldom that a young actress who gains popularity as an ingenue rises to any considerable heights in emotional expression. Therefore the performance of Miss Clark in "Still Waters" is one of the most notable of recent screen achievements.
