MILK INSPECTION.

Until some change was made in the local health laboratory, it was useless to emphasize the necessity for honest and efficient milk inspection in Bismarck. Protests against the grade of the lactical fluid served citizens of Bismarck by a certain dairy seemed futile in face of the clean bill given by a chemist who has since gone to other fields and in face of a clique of the Bismarck physicians who met and "resolved" upon the purity of said milk.

Revelations were made last week that vindicate all the criticism expressed through the columns of the Tribune. Samples from the supply of the dairy that received the blue ribbon each month from the recently departed bacteriologist were secured last week. One registered slightly below the minimum established by law. Later another sample was secured. It tested around 2.8, which is considerably below the butter fat test prescribed as a minimum.

One wants to use milk that just gets under the wire of inspection. But when the grade falls below the minimum standard, steps should be taken to protect the consumer.

The present milk inspector is doing all in his power, in co-operation with Dr. Strauss, health commissioner, to protect the milk supply. Reports filed Monday evening with the city commission substantiate the criticisms of the Tribune, which some physicians dismissed in formal resolutions as being unfounded.

It might be profitable for the Burleigh County Medical society to study these reports. The co-operation of physicians is always valuable in safeguarding the milk supply.

A BITTER CRITIC.

Charles Evans Hughes has no more caustic critic than the New York World, the newspaper that a few years ago held him up as almost perfect in matters political. So deep was the admiration of Joseph Pulitzer for Hughes that he appointed him as executor and trustee of his property, demanded no bond and bequeathed him $100,000. Of course, Hughes declined the legacy and refused to act, demonstrating the same rectitude that won for him the admiration of the late founder of the New York World.

But Pulitzer is dead. New hands mould and fashion the destinies of that great journal. In its advocacy of Wilson, the World has abandoned its traditional policy of independence in politics. It is now a narrow partisan and often undignified in its violent attacks upon Hughes, whom it once eulogized.

The admiration the World expressed for Hughes under the direction of the elder Pulitzer nullifies much of the harsh criticism that exudes from its columns now, not to mention the stultifying effects of such a policy upon the World itself.

President Wilson, in answer to a telegram from President O'Leary of the American Truth society, says he does not want the "disloyal" vote. While not specific in designating just what constitutes the "disloyal" vote, the President can assure himself that whoever they may be, they will not be "too proud to vote."

FINE COMPLIMENT.

Bismarck's financial standing could be reflected no better than by the premium paid for the paving warrants in the First district. The strides made by the Capital City within the last two years have caused comment in many of the important financial centers of the United States.

The fiscal affairs of the city are in excellent condition. Public improvements are being made to keep pace with the rapid commercial development of Bismarck. There is manifested on all sides a better civic spirit. The credit of the city was never better.

Co-operation is more apparent in the promotion of the city's affairs than ever. Important ventures for the permanent benefit of all the citizens are being divorced from purely partisan consideration.

Bismarck is on its feet and coming and each year will add fresh laurels.

WHAT IT'S DUE TO.

Editor—I see that world series baseball tickets will be higher. It can't be due to the war. Why is it?

A. FAN.

No, it isn't due to the war, or to a short crop, or to a low tariff, or to the foreign policy, or to germs of any sort. We'll tell you, Mr. Fan, how it is done.

First, you get hold of a thing that is exclusively yours. Secondly, you work up a popular craze for it. Then, you sock on as high a price as the crowd will stand. Two-thirds of any average crowd are composed of folks who will stand for the game and those who can afford to stand for it. Never mind the other third. Get two-thirds of the crowd coming your way, in any game, and your gate receipts will surely please you, as most any self-made man will testify.

The only real reason for raising the prices of admission to those world series ball games is that the public will stand for it. "All that the traffic will bear" may sound porcine, but it goes as financial policy, here and there.

ALWAYS VIGOROUS.

Theodore Roosevelt's vigorous speech at Battle Creek, Mich., is typical of the man. There is no "pussy-footing" in his style of politics. There is affirmation and action in every line in the arraignment of the Wilson administration. He matches Wilson's indecision with his own forceful decision.

The times call for a strong man, whose conception of national honor will hold all belligerents equally answerable for any violations. It is silly twaddle to say he kept us out of war. With the Old World up to its waist in the bloodiest war of history, it is hard to imagine how Wilson could get us into war, except by some deliberate act of hostility.

Senator Nelson of Minnesota, who opened the national campaign in that state recently, proves how ludicrous is the slogan of the Democratic party: "He kept us out of war."

He said:
 "The claim that President Wilson has kept us out of war with the belligerents of Europe is most far-fetched and ludicrous, and would do credit to Munchausen. We all know that the warning nations of Europe have had their hands full on land and sea in battling against each other. None of them had any ships or soldiers to spare for an attack upon, or invasion of, our country, and none of them have manifested a purpose or desire to make such an attack or invasion. And as to our own country, we have not been in condition to invade or attack any of the belligerents or any other country save Mexico."

The nation needs Hughes in a crisis such as this. A strong national policy that has always differentiated the Republican from the Democratic party must be put into execution within the next four years. Hughes is a Nationalist, while Wilson is more or less sectional in his views. The Republican candidate belongs to the party of Lincoln, a party that opposed a subordination of national to state rights. Wilson is the champion of a party emphasizing the importance of the state. The traditions and the ambitions of his party are not nationalistic. The day has passed when such a policy is either wise or popular.

Wilson is not the leader to revive the sense of nationalism in the United States. The sturdy Americanism, such as Roosevelt preached at Battle Creek, must characterize our national policies in a time like the present. Hughes is the chosen leader to arouse a nation from "ignoble ease and peaceful sloth."

STATE BRIEFS

Jud. N. D.—George Schulte, living near this village, exhibited a bunch of grapes here which he grew on his farm.

Fargo, N. D.—Fargo will purchase another motor-driven truck, the city auditor being instructed to advertise for bids by the city commission.

Cayuga, N. D.—The only case of infantile paralysis in this city—in the John Sturdevant family—has been abated, a young boy being entirely cured.

Napoleon.—A school election will be held at the court house in Napoleon, Tuesday, October 10, for the purpose of determining the location for the new school building.

Jamestown.—Four score and ten years had been reached by Mrs. Anna Frederick of Homer township, Stutsman county, who died here today. Cause of death was heart disease.

Sanborn, N. D.—Lynn Frazier, Republican nominee for governor, has been invited to deliver the principal address at the Market day celebration, which will be held here Oct. 14.

Churches Ferry, N. D.—The Great Northern depot here was completely destroyed by fire. The first started on the roof about the middle of the building from the sparks of an east-bound through freight.

Mott, N. D.—While attempting to fix the engine of an auto Henry Moe, employed at the C. Walheim farm, received a badly lacerated hand, which was caught in the gear while the engine was running.

Devils Lake, N. D.—The city schools reopened Wednesday after a two-day vacation while the buildings were being fumigated. As none cases of diphtheria have been reported there is no danger in continuing school.

Fargo, N. D.—Dorothy and Walter Forsberg, daughter and son of Mrs. Anna M. Forsberg, of Fargo, have been awarded achievement pins by County Superintendent J. W. Riley for most exceptional attendance records.

Jamestown.—Martin Bjur, aged 15 years, living at Edgeley, sustained a compound fracture of one leg, and his sister, riding with him, was unhurt, when he lost control of his machine, which turned turtle near that village this week.

Work is now completed on the bridge and dam at Sentinel Butte and is again open for travel, and the dam is ready to hold water. It is hoped that the fall rains will be heavy enough to fill it so that the ice harvest will be good—and the skating.

Minot.—Rev. Nicolay Nilson, who for more than 1 year has been the popular and efficient pastor of Zion Lutheran church, has left for Willmar, Minn., where he has accepted the pastorate of the Willmar Lutheran church and St. John's congregation.

Minot.—C. E. MacLaughlin, one of the railroad men in the north-west, has assumed the position of division superintendent of the Great Northern railway at this point. He comes to this city with a record of achievement that makes his success in his new position assured.

Minot, N. D.—William O'Leary, chief of the Minot fire department tendered his resignation. This resignation is tendered because of the appointment of Mr. O'Leary as receiver of public money for the United States land office in Minot, the duties of which he assumed October 1.

Minot, N. D.—A $25,000 reinforced concrete garage will be erected by Eby Young at the corner of First street and Fourth avenue southwest. Plans for the structure are being prepared by Architect R. B. Stacy-Judd. The structure will front 75 feet on First street and 140 feet on Fourth avenue.

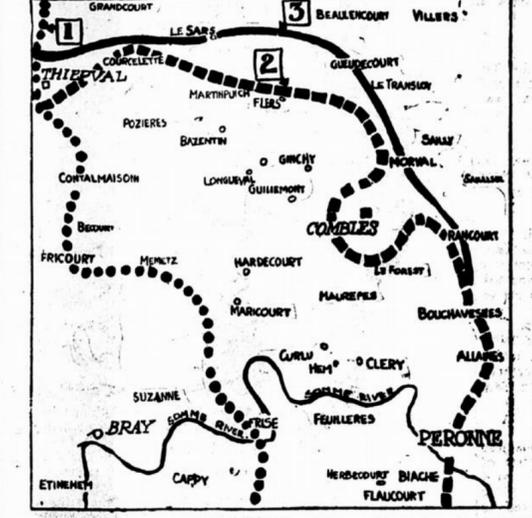

Kildeer, N. D.—P. H. Lee, formerly of this city, arrested last October on the charge of keeping and maintaining a common nuisance, pleaded guilty before Judge Crawford and was sentenced to 90 days in jail and costs, which amounted to about $38. The sentence was suspended during good behavior.

Minot, N. D.—Dr. J. R. Pence, city health officer, has given public notice that the city water is unsafe for drinking purposes and probably will be so for a month at least, due to the inadequacy of the filtration plant to purify all the water required for domestic and other purposes. The city schools are not allowed to use the city water for drinking purposes.

Dickinson.—A. D. Heaton again has his Ford car, which was stolen in front of his residence a couple of weeks ago, and the thief has already begun serving a term of two years in the state penitentiary. The car, however, is hardly recognizable. It was almost completely dismantled by the thief, the radiator stove in, and besides, Mr. Heaton is out $50, paid as a reward for the capture of the culprit.

LaMoure.—E. B. Roscoe, prominent Roscoe township farmer of LaMoure county, and candidate for representative, has a novel method of getting around the corrupt practices act. Roscoe planted a lot of squash seed in the spring and, as he is a good gardener, a bountiful crop was harvested. But Roscoe is also a politician. When he couldn't get a good price on the market for vegetables he distributed them among his friends rather than take ten cents apiece.

ALLIES DELIVER TWO MIGHTY BIFFS BY CAPTURE OF COMBELES AND THIEPVAL

This shows how the British and French have advanced on the Somme since July 1. The dotted lines (1) was the front at the start of the "big push." The dash line (2) indicated the battle front at the beginning of the last week in September. The heavy line shows what the simultaneous capture of Thiepval and Combeles, on widely separated parts of the line, did for the allies' advance.

Among State Politicians

Political dopesters are most interested now in the campaign for United States senator and the possibilities of a Hughes or Wilson victory. Primary returns can give the Democrats little consolation. Burke enthusiasts can hardly take any legitimate joy out of the fact that Frazier's vote was some 9,000 in excess of McCumber's. It is inevitable that McCumber's and Frazier's vote should be compared as affording a side-light upon the Non-Partisan League's attitude toward the United States senatorship.

Those who voted for candidates opposing McCumber in the primaries totaled 39,205. Those who opposed Frazier in the primaries aggregated 36,123. McCumber secured a plurality while Frazier won a majority. There were no special differences on issues in the senatorial campaign. In the state campaign, however, there were very definite issues and a special appeal for votes based upon specific issues sharply differentiated from one another. Burdick for instance had much in common with Frazier, disagreeing as to the methods to be followed in attaining the desired end. Fraire opposed the Non-Partisan program. Thus were issues sharply defined.

Such a condition was wholly lacking in the race for United States senator as the party is in greater harmony on national than purely state issues. In other words party affiliations in national affairs mean more as a rule than in state politics where independent voting is more and more a growing tendency.

It was not surprising then that Frazier polled some 9,000 more votes than McCumber.

Of course the chief reason for this is due to the fact that 3,500 more votes were cast for Governor than for United States Senator, again evidencing that more interest was manifested in the State than the senatorial campaign. McCumber carried 36 of 52 counties by a comfortable margin in each instance. It is reasonable to suppose that he can hold his primary strength and win a large percentage of the 39,000 votes cast for Hanna, Nestos and Midtbo.

Food for the dopesters but after all juggling primary figures is only interesting speculation.

John Burke, treasurer of the United States and candidate for United States senator from North Dakota, who last week campaigned the Missouri Slope and is this week covering the northern section of the state, will open his campaign in Northern North Dakota next Monday, probably giving that day to Grand Forks county.

Fred McLean, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, announced such plan yesterday, but the itinerary from Grand Forks county is not yet completed. Mr. Burke, however, will make a trip directly across the northern half of the state, spending most of the balance of the campaign in those sections.

Mr. Burke's itinerary for this week placed him in Emmons county Monday; in McIntosh county today; in Dickey, LaMoure and Ransom counties on Wednesday and Thursday; in Sargeant county Friday, and Richland county Saturday. He will spend Sunday at the state headquarters in Fargo.

Charles E. Towne, former United States senator of Minnesota, will spend October 10 and 11 in North Dakota in the interests of the Democratic party. Chairman Fred McLean tonight announcing the following proposed itinerary: October 10, Walpole City and Jamestown. The itinerary has been submitted to Mr. Towne for approval.

"Tell the whole truth," is the keynote of the addresses being delivered in North Dakota by James Manahan, former Minnesota congressman, and who is spending ten days in the state in the interests of the Republican ticket—particularly the interest of Hughes and United States Senator Porter J. McCumber.

Mr. Manahan advocates his plea to United States Treasurer John Burke, who is making a campaign tour of the state, and who is assailing Senator McCumber's record on certain points. The Archibald impeachment case is one that Mr. Manahan is bringing to the attention of his audiences, according to Wm. Lemke, state Republican chairman, who has received glowing reports of Manahan's success.

"Mr. McCumber voted against the resolution to disfranchise Archibald," says Mr. Burke in his speeches, but he doesn't tell you that Mr. McCumber voted to impeach Archibald—leaving the impression that McCumber voted against such impeachment."

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN
 in "A Virginia Romance" at the Orpheum Theatre Tonight Only. It's A Metro Feature.—Adv.

says Mr. Manahan, assailing this feature of Burke's address.

Mr. Burke's discussion of the income tax also is taken up. On this point, Mr. Burke has been charging place the tax on small incomes, making the tax burdensome. In his message to the legislature of this state six years ago, when the income tax amendment to the constitution was up for ratification, Mr. Burke dealt with the income tax measure as a "nonpartisan measure, supported by the entire United States senate," and Mr. McCumber was then a member of the senate.

Mr. Manahan had big crowds at Cooperstown, Finley, Valley City, during the first portion of his tour.

Republican campaign plans for southwestern North Dakota were announced in part tonight by William Lemke, state Republican chairman. Congressman Andrew Barchfield of Pennsylvania, already in that district, speaks tomorrow at New England, Mott and New Leipzig. He speaks at Mandan Thursday and on Friday at Napoleon and Wishek.

United States Senator R. C. Johnson of South Dakota will tour the southwest district from October 16 to 21, as follows:
 October 16, Selfridge, Shields and Raleigh; October 17, Leitch, New Leipzig and Mott; October 18, Mott; October 19, Amidon and Rhame; October 20, Sargeant and Bowman; October 21, Hettinger and Lemmon, S. D.

Congressman Britton of South Dakota will tour from October 18 to 26 in the central section of the state.

Congressman Sydney Anderson of Minnesota speaks in the southeastern cities Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

Congressman Ellsworth, Minnesota, opens the campaign tomorrow at Farley, speaking there and at Fessenden, Berthold, Stanley, Ray, Williston, Watford and Alexander between Wednesday and Saturday.

James Manahan, former Minnesota congressman, has 23 scheduled dates in the northeastern section of the state from today until October 1.

WITH THE EDITORS

"GINKS FROM MEXICO."
 (Chicago Post.)
 We often wonder how far the limitations of Mr. Joseph Tumulty have been the limitations of Mr. Woodrow Wilson, whom he serves as secretary.

The thought gets present point from the republication in the excellent bulletin of the Hughes Alliance of this anecdote, written originally for the Forum by Sidney Austin Weatherbee, a lifelong American resident of Mexico:

When I came to Washington in July, 1913, it was following letters and cablegrams to Mr. Wilson dating back as far as February, three weeks before his inauguration, and I had every reason to expect him to be glad of the opportunity of receiving the information that I was bringing him. Mr. Tumulty informed me that "the president could not see every gink from Mexico," adding: "I suppose you are another fellow who has lost a cow." I was informed that I could not see the president until after I had seen the secretary of state.

Now, the president himself, however closely his Mexican policy might approximate the same thing, would not quite call a protesting American citizen "a gink from Mexico." Mr. Tumulty need not have gone so far in his service in his failure to supply the personal contacts in which the chief is so singularly lacking. An able and energetic secretary, like Cortelyou or Loeb, would have kept in line by his own personal efforts the "young Wilson Democrats" who sprang up in the 1912 campaign and who have shrunk to but shadows of themselves in 1916. They needed no vast store of patronage. All they required was the occasional word of encouragement, the recognition of an occasional leader, the occasional opportunity to meet the president and feel that they were "on the inside."

Instead of acting as a help to these young men, Tumulty has acted as a positive barrier against them. The young Wilson Democrats of Illinois who sought to get the President's ear in the Raymond Robins senatorial campaign in Illinois in 1914 well know how completely the secretary blocked their path. The wreck of the "Wilson Democracy" in Wisconsin knows it.

Mr. Tumulty has considered not only the enemies but the friends of the administration as merely "ginks from Mexico."

AUDITORIUM
 "THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH"
 How true is that old adage—"The Wages of Sin is Death," and how awful was the poor girl's punishment who at heart was in no way at fault.

"The Wages of Sin is Death"—an unchangeable law of Nature that oftentimes strikes down the blameless. The young girl in that remarkable picture "Where Are My Children?" who died of her folly was not so much to be censured as to be pitied. Thousands of young girls fall by the way every year thru the same cause. This cause and its effect plainly told in this gripping picture, is told in such a way as to remain in highest dignity, yet withal powerfully gripping and sensational. Endorsed by the New York Newspapers, by the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, Superior Paulist Father John J. Hughes and thousands of citizens. Played by a brilliant cast of Universal players headed by that great artist, Tyrone Power.

This is the picture that set all New York agog. That created the sensation of sensations. This is the subject that will impress every living soul who sees it. It is remarkable, in that it deals with the premeditated slaughter of innocent lives by those who claim to be of the higher social standing in communities. This is the picture you will never forget. It is true to life, human, sensational, yet dignified. A subject that every man and woman should see.

At the Auditorium Oct. 12th and 13th.
