"Grand Old Flag" Still Is Missing

Woman Suffrage Union Gives Up Hope of Getting Back Its Banner

HISTORIC EMBLEM AT BIG GRIDIRON DINNER

This Gave Women New Hope but Their Urgent Pleas Went Amiss

(United Press.) Washington, Dec. 30.—Who got the button, Ann's ago, and who hit Billy Patterson probably will be solved before the National Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage finds out who got the banner they swung before President Wilson from the house gallery. Also, the question of where it is now.

Union Gives Up Hope. Press Agent Henry Swinehart, who engineered the affair that startled the joint congressional audience on that otherwise peaceful day, admitted today the union has about given up hope of getting back its banner.

The day after its appearance in the house, those who flung it to the legislative breeze only to have it unceremoniously jerked to earth, went to the sergeant-at-arms' office to get it back. They failed to do so.

At the Indian Dinner. The next heard of the now historic emblem was at the Gridiron dinner several Saturday nights back, when the Gridironers pulled a burlesque of the incident while the president was addressing them. The same banner was used in the burlesque.

News of this event gave Congressional Union officials hope. They buttonholed every Gridiron club member they knew and some they didn't. They pleaded they wanted the "grand old flag" to use as a background when they were photographed in their new home upon the occasion of dedicating it. They did not get it.

The men were called back from their Christmas vacations at home half a week in advance of the opening of school. It is considered likely today that a game may be secured at Wapeton, Jan. 8, this game being played before the A. C. boys return to Fargo.
