Red Cross Urges Workers To Prepare Supplies Now

An urgent appeal is made to the Red Cross workers to come to headquarters on Monday and Tuesday and help complete the preparation of the supplies promised for the first section. Now that the draft has been made, those in charge feel that it is essential to have all that they have promised ready at once, as Dr. Quinn may be called at any time. Another day or two of hearty co-operation will be sufficient to accomplish this end, and they therefore hope for a large attendance on those two days.

Stutman Sheriff Here.—J. H. Ross of Jamestown, sheriff of Stutman county, was in the city today, to get registration papers from Governor Frazier, for a man in Montana. Sheriff Ross left for that state this afternoon.

From Sheridan County.—Fred Trepp of the Finneman & Trepp garage at Martin, and A. J. Skogmo, well known grain buyer of the same place, spent the forenoon at the capital as guests of N. A. Mason, secretary to Governor Frazier.

Land Men.—Joseph Hare, son of Joseph Hare of this city and president of the Montana-Florida Land & Livestock company of Butte, Mont., and B. P. Castner, the Pacific coast representative of the same concern, are in the city today in the interests of their company. They are working eastward, appointing agents and opening branch offices.

Tracks Extended.—Through the courtesy of State Architect Sam Crabbe, the new street car tracks will be extended to the north sidewalk line of Thayer street, making a good crossing for Thayer and Fourth, instead of stopping with a hump in the middle of the block on Fourth, as originally contemplated. Mr. Crabbe found this morning the state would have sufficient new rails and ties to make the extension. He proposed to City Engineer Atkinson that the state would furnish the material if the city would do the excavating, and Mr. Atkinson immediately began rustling the necessary labor.

Queer Fire.—State Architect Sam Crabbe stepped from Northern Pacific train No. 1 last night to behold a pile of the state's hard-bought cresseted ties merrily blazing down Fourth street. At the same moment with a clamor of gongs two fire trucks have

TAILORMADE FOR MOURNING WEAR

By BETTY BROWN.

New York, July 20.—A firm which specializes on garments for mourning wear continues to use black tulle as the conventional material. While trimming of any kind is considered out of place on a mourning garment, the huge sleeves and extra broad collar are telling points of style in a very handsome coat suit.

Although many fall suits have the "tuyau" tube, or straight up-and-down line, those designed for mourning wear retain the belt and full skirt which can never be considered too striking or freakish.

draft, after credits are given for the men now in federal service at Fort Lincoln with Co. A, probably will not exceed 150 men. As numbers were drawn yesterday at Washington, they were written on a blackboard and photographed. Copies of these photographed numbers will be dispatched as soon as possible to Adjutant General Frazier, who will forward them to the county exemption boards in each of the 53 counties. The county boards will then send out notices, beginning with the number first drawn and continuing until they have notified twice the number of men required to fill the quota. In the case of Burleigh county, this will mean that the first 300 men whose numbers were drawn yesterday will be notified, probably within the next week, one-third to report in five days, one-third in six days and one-third in seven days. Those who fail to appear within ten days will be regarded as draftees, and unless they report within a certain time thereafter will be held as deserters.

SPEND YOUR VACATION WITH UNCLE SAM
"California and West Coast people have always taken full advantage of Uncle Sam's invitation to spend their vacations in the National Forests," says L. J. Olfier, vice president and director of sales of the Studebaker corporation, "but I have noticed that during the last year or two, people from all parts of the United States are beginning to realize what wonderful vacation lands are offered to the motorist by the United States national forests, and these forests are not all segregated in the western part of our country. We find them in New England, in the South and Central Atlantic States, in Oklahoma and Arkansas, in Michigan, Wisconsin and in Minnesota. They occupy principally the more rugged and heavily timbered regions of the White Mountains, the Appalachians, the Ozark of the East and of course, the Rocky mountains, Sierra Nevada and Coast ranges of the West.

"There are one hundred and fifty-two national forests in the United States, and they offer not only splendid opportunities for the camper and fisher, but they also delight the eye with some of the most superb and majestic scenery in the world. The seeker after health, rest and recreation can do well to turn his attention to the national forests in our country as a summer vacation land unsurpassed.

"The forests, of course, are free to all. Visitors are not only welcome to camp and motor where they will, but Uncle Sam issues in official form, under date of April, 1917, a most cordial invitation to the 3,000,000 motor car users of the United States to visit him in his wonderful forests.

"Firearms are permitted, and there are no restrictions on fishing and hunting excepting those imposed by state game laws."

GAY CHINTZ FOR CHILDREN

New York, July 20.—Chintzes and gorgeous flowered prints which seem to have been designed solely for house decorations have been taken over by the designers of children's garments. And it needs but a passing glance at this snapshot of little Cynthia Pratt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dallas E. Pratt to convince all doubters that the old fancy is charming. Moreover, it has the great advantage of delighting all youthful wearers. "How pretty," they say. And everybody agrees.

Aptitude.
My observation in life leads me to believe that nearly every human being has an aptitude; that is, there is something that he or she can do better than all other things. One in a hundred, again, has a remarkable aptitude and in one in a thousand this aptitude is developed into something extraordinary. It then amounts to natural insight and constitutes genius. Now, a perfect system of education, if it could be devised, would be one which, while developing to the fullest extent all the faculties, would allow free play to the special aptitude. But this is just what our American school system fails to do, and does not aim at.—Autobiography of Charles Francis Adams.

DIRECTS FOOD NEWS

A fiction writer is the hero of this story:
Last summer he was going through a particularly dangerous stretch of road in the mountain fastnesses of Kentucky. A cow, dazzled by the headlights, failed to get out of the road and the car smashed into her, putting the lighting apparatus out of commission. "There were many lightning bugs flying around," he said, "and so I set the members of my party to work catching them. We used bottles that we had in our lunch boxes, and filled two full of the bugs. They gave out a glow that could be seen probably 300 feet ahead. We tied the bottles, well corked, on to the front of the car, and then proceeded into the village safely. I rarely tell of the experience, because few will believe it, but it is a fact."

News about food conservation given to Uncle Sam's housewives is published under supervision of Miss Leckie, veteran newspaper woman and publicity expert of New York. She is now with the food administration in Washington.

SIDEWALKS AND COLD GERMS

Relationship Between the Two Traced to Conditions Which Result in Getting Feet Wet.

That a close relationship exists between sidewalks and grip epidemics is asserted in Good Health by Martin Nevins. Grip and colds, says Mr. Nevins, are germ diseases. Germs are floating about us in the air. We breathe them in by the thousands. "But they are cowardly fellows—once they get inside of a healthy body they retreat." He goes on:

"It is only when one thing or another disturbs our health equilibrium that the 'bugs' manage to gain a foothold in our system. It may be injudicious eating. It may be lack of fresh air, but most frequently it is some kind of exposure—getting the feet wet—that lays the fortress open to them.

"It is not at all hard to get your feet wet. And that is where the sidewalk comes in. The ordinary sidewalk is a right-hand assistant when you want a cold foot bath. It is built flat, without any slope to drain it.

The condition is aggravated if there occurs a natural depression in the sidewalk. The water runs into it and stands until it is dried or is frozen. The natural result is a harvest of grip epidemics, and any number of colds, bronchitis and lung troubles. And tuberculosis, too—this disease can often be traced to sidewalks, since it usually starts with some simple lung affection.

"We must stop building flat sidewalks and make them convex instead, so they will drain easily, and elevate them slightly above the level of the ground."

EFFECT OF MIND-WANDERING

Day-Dreaming With a Purpose is All Right but Much Time is Lost in Kind That Serves No Purpose.

Have you ever stopped to think how much time is lost in mind-wandering? How many times during the day do you let your thoughts wander from the main task at hand? And once a person's thoughts start wandering, how they skip from one link of recollections to another until a chain of wasted moments is forged!

Mind-wandering seems to be a general characteristic of the human race, but those who have succeeded in conquering the characteristic and concentrating upon the task at hand have been the men who have advanced in the business and professional world.

Day-dreaming is all right when the dreams are busy with plans for promoting business methods or with ideas for practical inventions—and when other work is not being neglected.

The inventor of the steam engine, watching the steam in a kettle lifting the top of the pot and day-dreaming about what that power might be made to accomplish—was not wasting his time, but was advancing the human race.

Useful day-dreaming is all right, but mind-wandering should be relegated to the scrap heap.—Arkansas Democrat.

O'Connor the Hero.—M. J. O'Connor, motorman conductor and general superintendent of the capital street railway, deserted his car long enough this morning to stop the beginning of a bad runaway at Thayer and Fourth. A young farmer, driving a colt and an older horse to a light spring wagon, was thrown violently to the street when the colt kicked over the pole, breaking it, and the two horses started to bolt. A girl who was in the wagon leaped to the ground and escaped unhurt, and an older woman remained in her seat. By a fast sprint O'Connor caught the horses before they had gone 100 feet, and with the assistance of the driver, who held on to the lines, stopped the runaways.
