

METHODISTS MARK 100 YEARS OF MISSIONARY EFFERT

The Rev. Charles Stelzle Tells How Centenary Will Be Celebrated

By the Rev. Charles Stelzle.

Columbus, O., May 19.—When the three wise men from the east, riding their careening camels, followed the guiding star to Bethlehem to find Jesus so that they might bring Him their gifts of frankincense and myrrh, they did it to honor Him "who had been born King of the Jews."

They were the forerunners of countless crusaders and pilgrims, who, in the ages that followed, sought to do homage to Him who is now acknowledged to be the King of the world.

The hundreds of thousands of Methodists and other Christians—pilgrims of the present day—coming from east and west, from north and south—many of them from the uttermost parts of the earth—in ship and train and trolley car, in carriage and stage and automobile, visiting Columbus during the centenary celebration of Methodist missions, June 20 to July 12, the name of this same Jesus through the preaching of His gospel during the 100 years in every land and among every race by the Methodist Episcopal church.

ESTIMATED COST OF CELEBRATION $750,000.

Just a quick glance at some of the outstanding facts about the celebration. It will cost $750,000 to bring together the people and the equipment for the celebration, to maintain it for 24 consecutive days, and to carry out the program of pageantry, music, parades, fireworks, motion pictures, demonstrations and addresses.

Music will be furnished by a symphony orchestra of 100 pieces, brass bands, a trombone choir of 100 pieces, a chorus of 2,500 voices, a children's choir of 1,500 and the new $50,000 organ, built especially for the celebration, besides well known quartets and soloists.

10,000 STEWARDS TO EXPLAIN FEATURES.

Ten thousand "stewards" will serve in various parts of the grounds and in the buildings, explaining the details of the exhibits.

A thousand cadets from Methodist schools will have an encampment, under the direction of a United States army officer, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood having consented to serve as honorary colonel.

Visitors will drop unexpectedly into a street of Peking, spend a couple of hours in the heart of an African village, cross a bridge over a pool and find themselves in Japan; take a few steps further and be in Alaska, the land of snows and romance.

There will be a reproduction of a European church shelled by the Germans, and through its battered walls you may see the devastated village just beyond.

A section of the great "Chinese Wall" will be shown, "life size," and the China building, with its pagodas and shops and chop suey restaurant, its monastery and hospital and theater, its schools and industries and farms and temples, will be typical of what may be seen in the African, Japanese, India and other buildings, all in actual operation, and mostly conducted by the thousand people who are coming from all lands to help in the celebration.

MOST UNUSUAL MAN IS NEW SPEAKER, GILLETT

To become speaker of the House of Representatives the man generally becomes famous and then ceases the job. Not so with Frederick Huntington Gillett of Massachusetts. Gillett may have attained greatness but fame was not connected with his name until he beat James R. Mann of Illinois for the speakership this spring.

Tom Reed, Uncle Joe Cannon and Champ Clark attained fame first and the speakership second. But why precedents and rules if they can't be broken?

Gillett is influential, has no enemies among Democrats or Republicans, been 26 consecutive years in the house, and knows what he's about.

He shuns the spotlight and once told a reporter he had "no sense of news."

For 26 years, thirteen elections, he has been returning to congress without missing a day, sniping voters on the back or giving away garden seeds. In fact last election he didn't even have an opponent. He never worried about the next election and therefore was able to devote all his time to duty.

He is a Highbrow with the capital H. He moves in the best society circles where brains overtop foolishness.

He makes few speeches. In his 26 years of service all his speeches assembled wouldn't take up as much space in the congressional record as some members make in one term. But he can debate with the best of them.

War measures had his support. He forgot partisanship. Yet he criticized the president severely at times.

He was a sturdy patriot. But he voted against prohibition and suffrage.

He has the reputation of being wise and fair and his counsel much sought after.

His program in the sixty-sixth congress:

First—Abolition of executive control of congress.

Second—Readjustment of business and labor conditions in pursuance of a back-to-earth program.

Third—Investigation of the conduct of the war to avoid repetition of costly blunders.

Three years ago Mr. Gillett married Mrs. Christine Rice Hoar, widow of the late Congressman Rockwood Hoar of Massachusetts. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gillett have moved in the highest society circles. For 23 years he kept bachelor quarters with General Crozier and former Associate Justice Moody.

He is an intensive reader. He plays golf well and is a good loser.

He is tall and slender, has clear blue eyes and wears a close cropped beard.

Born in Westfield, Mass., Oct. 16, 1851, he is 67 years old. He graduated from Amherst in 1874, from Harvard Law in 1877 and was elected to the Massachusetts House in 1890. In 1892 he began his career as a congressman.

FAMOUS ARCHITECT DRAWS HOMES FOR YOU THIS ONE'S MADE FOR GREAT CONVENIENCE

Aymar Embury II, most famous smallhouse architect in America, has been engaged by The Daily Tribune to design ten homes especially for Bismarck readers of moderate income. This design is his fourth.

By AYMAR EMBURY II, America's Foremost Small House Architect.

There are two requirements in home building, which stand out above all others.

First of all, a house must have a practical plan, and second, it must have the appearance of "livableness."

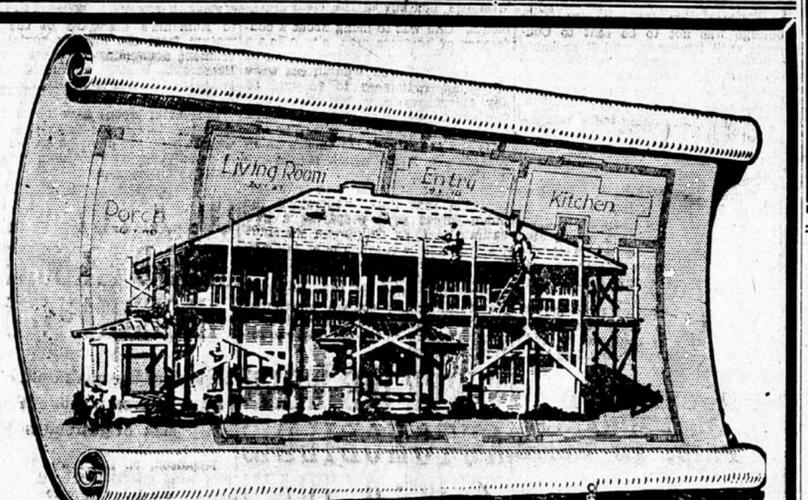

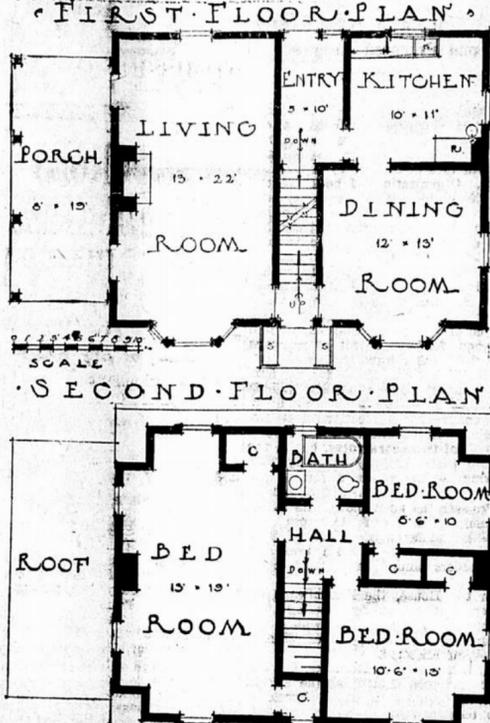

A practical plan is one which is suited to "easy housekeeping," that is, with no unused space and proper and convenient arrangement of the rooms.

The real appearance of "livableness" is extremely hard to obtain, and this point has been given the greatest study by architects of all countries. A low house, or one that appears to be low, has less formality than a stilted one, and as formality is not a natural attribute of the average American home, it should not be found in the house itself.

The house shown in the illustration is of the Dutch colonial type, the originals of which were built in northern New Jersey, but it is adaptable to almost any part of the country, and lends itself readily to the requirements of the modern house. The low roof line gives an appearance of greater length and at the same time is a type found to be the most successful.

The house illustrated was designed with a 50x100 corner lot in mind, using the lot the long way. This brings the porch and living room on the main street and the entrance on the side. As the house is only 24 feet deep plenty of space is left for restriction lines.

As this is essentially a "servantless" house, the kitchen arrangement will appeal to housekeepers. No butler's pantry is provided, but its place is taken by an entry which has a large opening screened or glazed and a place for the refrigerator, dish storage, etc., and is a passage way to the cellar stairs. This arrangement eliminates the outside cellar stairway.

PLAN TO BUILD NOW

THERE'S a tremendous lot of building that must be done in this city and we've got to get at it. We need homes, and apartment buildings, and schools, to say nothing of business buildings, and unless we get them soon our city is going to suffer. For two years all building has been stopped. Population has increased, rents have jumped. People are paying premium prices to find any kind of a place to live in.

We Need to Get Business Going

It's perfectly obvious that such conditions can't be permitted to last very long if this city is to be a desirable place to live and transact business. If we don't remedy it, we'll lose a lot of prosperity that should come to us—and that reacts on every man and woman that lives here.

At the same time, we need to keep business going. The end of the war has brought us an industrial situation that we must face in common. Building is the quickest possible way to stimulate business and tide over this crucial period. And we can build as cheaply now as we will be able to for years to come.

WE CAN FURNISH ANYTHING IN THE LINE OF BUILDING MATERIALS YOU MAY REQUIRE.

LEHIGH CEMENT STUCCO

Have a contractor figure the job for you. If you are renting a place you can get enough more money to make it pay well. If you live in it yourself you'll have enough extra comfort and enough more pride in your property to make the cost insignificant.

If you want, just fix the porches and stucco the house this year. Later you can make the other improvements.

This is a good time to make old houses new. There's no better way than by using stucco.
