

SPORTS EAST DIVIDES ALL-AMERICAN GRID HONORS

Snyder's Selection Gives West Even Break in Coveted Places

HIGGEST YEAR OF GAME

BY DEAN SNYDER Modern football has come into full blossom during the season of 1920, now drawn to a close.

It has been the biggest year the game has ever known. Record crowds have filled the stadiums throughout the country, increased enthusiasm has been shown everywhere and many great players have come to light by their spectacular and thrilling performances on the gridiron.

Picking an All-American eleven—a mythical eleven that has never played together and perhaps never will—is at best but a hazardous attempt, to include most representative of what an ideal eleven should be composed of.

All over America sporting writers are engaged in this fantastic and more or less futile pastime. The practice of proclaiming that any one or two players are best in their respective positions is nearly as time-honored, however, as the gridiron game itself. And it seldom leads to anything more definite than promoting endless argument by football enthusiasts all over the country as to the superior merit of their favorites over those selected by the nifty pickers of All-American teams.

In a season replete with surprises and interseasonal clashes the football-loving public has its conception of the great American collegiate sport broadened as never before.

All-American teams used to be picked for the most part from among members of the Yale, Harvard and Princeton elevens. Gradually and tardily smaller colleges in the east produced football players who by sheer power and individual brilliancy challenged recognition on this purely unscientific eleven.

War brought together almost all the star football players of high school and college and it was not unusual for high school stars to play alongside college heroes without discredit to the former. Service teams abounded and did much to promote morale for players and soldier spectators alike. Thus it was possible for follow-up of the game to see by actual demonstration that a tackle like Tolbert of Oklahoma was as good or better than the best in the army from any of the big three teams of the east. In fact, it was the superiority of Tolbert on the champion service team in France that led to his abandonment of Oklahoma for Harvard, where he has become an outstanding player on one of the most powerful teams ever developed at that institution.

With this discovery, made entirely through army football during the war, that the cream of football material of the land was not confined to the big three, came a liberalization in the picking of mythical All-American teams.

It is with a firm belief that the east has no corner on the best material and that the middle and far west and the south have every cause to be proud of their individual gridiron heroes, we present an All-American team that we feel is thoroughly representative of the country as a whole and is composed of players who, as individuals, possess the ability to play together and do all that an ideal football team is supposed to do.

WHEAT GROWERS OF McLEAN IN ORGANIZATION

Garrison, N. D., Nov. 29.—The Wheat Growers Association of the United States of America now has an active organization in McLean county. At a meeting held here under the direction of organizer D. G. Murley of Oklahoma an organization was formed and the following officers elected:

Aug. S. Johnson, pres.; Frank Josephson, and B. O. Everson, directors; Aug. F. Johnson, Otto L. Lebulz and S. W. Johapas, delegates to the Fargo convention on Nov. 30; B. O. Everson, County manager.

The purpose set forth by Organizer Murley are: First, gain actual farmers' statistics on expense of producing one bushel of wheat in each local, county, state and group of states. Second, market wheat through a sales department whose work shall be to market wheat as needed at the mills and so prevent it from getting into the hands of speculators and gamblers. Third, create and maintain with the aid of local banks a financial backing sufficient to hold the wheat until a fair market price is available.

Montana Town Plans Wireless Telephone Service

Minot, N. D., Nov. 29.—Without telephone wires for inter-city communication, the Commercial club of the city of Malta, Mont., plans to solve the difficulty through establishment of wireless telephone service, according to Max F. Kemper, formerly of Minot, but now a resident of the Montana City.

The wireless telephone system, Mr. Kemper said, is planned to connect Lovejoy, Zortman, Phillips, Landusky, Lonsome and several other inland towns, as well as a number of large ranches within a radius of sixty miles of Malta.

It is planned to have the "circuit" operate at certain periods each day with Malta as the central station. All important news, business transactions and important messages of every nature will be taken care of.

With no telephone service, communication between the towns is uncertain, especially in the winter, and with the exception of Malta, all are inland towns and mail service in the winter frequently is delayed.

Mr. Kemper is chairman of the committee of the Malta Commercial club which is endeavoring to establish the wireless telephone system. He has had considerable experience with wireless and was the first amateur wireless operator to install a station in this section of the country. This was installed twelve years ago while Kemper was in school here.

STRENGTH DEVELOPS Chicago, Nov. 29.—Fresh strength manifested itself today in the wheat market. Signs of further buying by European interests had much to do with the upward tendency of prices.
