

INDEPENDENTS IN DUNN HOLD CELEBRATION

Barbecue Attracts Many People at Gathering Held at Dunn Center

T. G. NELSON WELCOMED

Dunn Center, N. D., Nov. 7.—Dunn county Independent held a barbecue in celebration of the election of the Independent candidates, Saturday afternoon and evening, which took the form of a welcome to Theodore G. Nelson, secretary of the Independent Voters' Association, and Independent campaign manager. Mr. Nelson formerly lived in Dunn county.

Two bands were on deck, the Killdeer orchestra and the Dunn Center band. The roasting of the biggest steer to be found in the neighborhood had been going on since the previous night and 955 people were served at the barbecue. The auditorium was crowded when the indoor program was started shortly after one o'clock with Alfred O. Nelson acting as chairman in the absence of Bill Connolly who was prevented by a business engagement from taking charge until the evening program commenced.

Get Together, Says Murtha

After a few selections by the orchestra and a couple of solos by Miss Lois Evans, of Halliday, Attorney T. F. Murtha, of Dickinson, was introduced as the first speaker. Mr. Murtha gave a short review of the recent political history of the state complimenting the voters of the state on their decision in the recall election but declared that there was now no time for gloating over enemies. The best interests of North Dakota could be served only by everybody getting together and joining hands.

The new administration, he said, had no axes to grind. Attorney W. F. Burnett, of Dickinson, endorsed Mr. Murtha's statements as to the political outlook and urged diversified farming. The program was followed by the barbecue donated by Bill Connolly who wagered that if the Independents won he would roast the biggest steer in the neighborhood in front of the local league organ.

Mr. Nelson arrived on the 8:10 train and was welcomed by the gathering with the band playing. A waiting automobile took him to the auditorium.

Mr. Nelson said in part:

Conduct of Campaign

"I am glad that I can say truthfully that as campaign manager for the Independent forces I have not counseled or permitted any personal abuse or attack upon the personal character of an opponent. The fight has been bitter and no doubt things have been said that would have been left unsaid in calmer moments, but generally speaking it has been a clean fight from our side, and as I this evening look back I see nothing that could have been gained by delving into personalities.

It is natural in any campaign that the official acts of public officials must come in for analysis, attention and criticism in any and every political campaign and more so in a recall election campaign than in any other, and it is equally natural that public officials should try to defeat or at least justify their acts. The result is, of course, a controversy which must be settled by the voters.

"Such controversy has just been settled at the polls. We who are victorious have nothing to gloat over. We have no axes to grind, but we want the co-operation of all the people in the state to make North Dakota the best state in the American union. We have had troublesome times. We are looking towards a better future. If every man and woman in the state will do their public duty and stand for a square deal for everybody we are going to come out on top very soon.

"We have elected a set of state officials who have the best interests of the state at heart. Give them a fair chance before you render judgment, and then I have no fear for the outcome."

ABLE TO DO HER WORK

After Long Suffering Mrs. Siefert Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pottsville, Pa.—"I suffered with female trouble for four or five years and was very irregular. I was not fit to do my work at times and took medicine from a doctor and got no benefit. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers and took it and got all right. I gained twenty pounds or more and am now able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. SALLIE SIEFERT, 313 W. Fourth Street, Pottsville, Pa.

The everyday life of many housewives is a continual struggle with weakness and pain. There is nothing more wearing than the ceaseless round of household duties and they become doubly hard when some female trouble makes every bone and muscle ache, and nerves all on edge.

If you are one of these women who not suffer for four or five years as Mrs. Siefert did, but profit by her experience and are restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WIN IN LOVE LOTTERY!

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE MCKEAN, AS THEY WENT MASKED TO GET THEIR MARRIAGE LICENSE, AND AS THEY LOOKED WHEN FIRST REVEALED TO EACH OTHER.

By NEA Service.

Los Angeles, Nov. 7.—The happiest couple in California is Mr. and Mrs. George McKean, who won out in love's oddest lottery.

She was working in a mail order house four years ago.

He ordered handkerchiefs.

She put a note in the box, asking him to write.

He did. Courtship by mail. Engagement.

They met for the first time when applying for their marriage license. But, by pre-arrangement, they were masked.

They didn't unmask till one minute before the marriage—which was performed publicly before 5,000 persons in a dance pavilion.

"She was the girl of my dreams," said McKean afterward.

"He looked a little older than I thought he would," said the bride. "But he had just the kindly face I had expected."

"Anyhow," they agreed, love's a lottery always—and we're each satisfied with what we've drawn."

FORCE OF IMPULSE

BY WINONA WILCOX

Human beings do not always or very often move according to their own free will. They are put here—or there—by their instincts and impulses, they are forced to detour from the moral route they expected to follow.

by the ungressed strength of their emotions.

If they knew a little more about these emotions, they would be somewhat prepared to face and fight their unseen enemies.

"I have erred and the realization breaks my heart," writes a girl. "Working in my father's office, I fell in love with a man who has a wife and family."

"I drifted into this feeling. When I discovered it, I tried to conceal it. I thought I had succeeded when, without warning, he took me in his arms and kissed me."

"I am 30 years old. I awakened to what real love might mean to me. I did not know before."

"A few days later he kissed me again and I yielded willingly."

"I have never been at my desk since. Have never entered my father's place of business."

"The man wrote me a letter of apology. I replied that it was as much my fault as his and that I felt humbled and ashamed when I thought of his wife. She is a sweet little thing."

"How shall I judge myself? What shall I do?"

"I want to explain that when this happened I was in the clutches of an uncontrollable emotion, something I cannot define."

"Everybody respects me, no one would dare hint that I ever have slipped or stumbled like some of the foolish virgins I know. I'm sorry—sorry—the letter runs through several more similar paragraphs."

It is printed because it is wholesome reading. Conscience never goes out of fashion.

This confession betrays the complex nature of the sensitive wellbred American girl. Her inhibition had always ruled her until she arrived at maturity when they overwhelmed her to her amazement and humiliation.

Her remorse must be a confusing revelation to girls of a conspicuous modern type. The embraces to which she succumbed, and the remorse which ensued doubtless seem rather abused to many a girl who accepts spooning with any man, married or single, as the expected feature of a moment's isolation.

We rise on stepping stones of our dead selves to higher things, says the poet. But nobody can rise far if he or she keeps turning around and looking backward.

It would seem wise for the young woman to stop repending, and to go to work again. Her kind requires but one lesson.

The Brazil nut tree does not begin to bear fruit until it is about 50 years old.

Canada's fishing industry gives employment to between 80,000 and 100,000 workers.

New York State has 203 daily newspapers, while Delaware has only three.

ADVENTURE!

Plenty of It in Health Work!

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING, Washington, Nov. 7.—"We're still pioneering."

The deep, vital voice belonged to Miss Elizabeth G. Fox, head of the Public Health Nursing department of the Red Cross.

"But there is no woman's work that gives more opportunity for originality than public health nursing. When you finish something in connection with it, you feel that it is all yours."

"It has been all your work and your effort—even if the result does belong to somebody else! It was a generous smile which followed, something like her generous spirit."

"We have about 2,300 Red Cross chapters which are doing county public health work," continued Miss Fox. "That means we have 1,300 nurses who took care of one million people and corrected the physical defects of 400,000 children last year."

"Whatever the fault is that we find in a child whom we examine in school, we get in touch with the mother. If it is some simple thing which a little home attention and hygiene will correct, we tell them, and if it is something of a more serious nature, we advise the care of a physician."

"But no matter which it is," said Miss Fox, "once we find a fault, we watch the child and keep informed until it is quite well."

"Why, even the little toothbrush drills which my girls"—it's her way of referring to her nurses—"conduct, do works of good. The children learn the motion, they get the habit of it—and you know most things are habit with children—so when they're home they want to clean their teeth and take care of them."

The mode of travel arranged for the nurses in making the rounds of their counties is usually by Ford, which they drive themselves. But occasionally it becomes an entirely original thing.

One nurse, during a flood in the south, crossed a river in a basket on a pulley, while Miss Agnes Holland, who is stationed in Alaska, walked 72 miles to get from one place to another where she was needed.

"It's a life which isn't without its adventure," said Miss Fox.
