ANOTHER ON CHAUNCEY.

The Small Boy Blasts the Truth to the Great Story-Teller.

Here's one on Chauncey Depew. The genial doctor had dropped in to see a gentleman on some business at his private residence. An inquisitive small boy was playing in the extension room back of the parlor. He seemed to take a great interest in the visitor, and every now and then suspended his sport to reconnoiter him.

When Mr. Depew left the lad ran to the front window, and, looking out, asked:

"Who is that man, papa?"
"He's the gentleman your mother and I were talking about at the breakfast table this morning. Mr. Depew, the greatest story-teller I ever heard."

A few days after the visitor came again. The lad was standing on the front stoop, and as Mr. Depew rang the bell he said to him:

"I know you."
Mr. Depew is fond of children, and, patting the little fellow on the head, observed encouragingly: "Come, now, if you think you know who I am, who am I?"

"You're the gentleman who tells the biggest whoppers papa ever heard."

Tent Life in Mongolia.

In the plains on the western borders of the Chinese Empire, in the very heart of Asia there live roaming tribes who seldom visit towns, except it may be in the way of trade. They dwell in tents which they pitch wherever they may happen for the moment to be wandering or working. The tent used by some of the roving Mongolian folk is made of felt, and is unusually low, small, and pointed towards the top. The wooden door-frame is no higher than half a window-frame in our houses, but the tent, although not equal to the wants of a large family, is snug and comfortable enough in summer, but cold, cold in winter.

Sugar remains untaxed in its raw state and the duty on the refined article is cut in two.

Duties are made ad valorem. That is the only plan that deals honestly with the people. When this bill passes every man will know what tax and what bounty he is paying when he buys his household supplies.

Whatever there may be in the argument that duties are imposed to protect American labor, it has no application to this bill. In the great lines of manufacture all differences between labor cost here and in Europe is more than covered by the Wilson duties. When once it gets into operation as a law the activity of employment in factories and the steadiness of wages will be more satisfactory than under any of the war tariffs.

Now let the committee be as bold in presenting an income tax to meet any temporary revenue deficiencies and the Democratic party will be a unit in support of the policy.

The bill is admirable in theory and is a practical tax measure carefully worked out. It will need few amendments and only a short debate.

Our Federal taxation is getting close to the constitution—St. Louis Republic.

THE ARDMOREITE editor in behalf of himself and force desires to return thanks to Mr. Turman, of the Iron Store, for his kind invitation to partake of an elaborate Thanksgiving dinner yesterday. While we could not be there in person our appetites were with you.

Turman, hoping the thanks rendered will continue to you and as a year of happiness and prosperity.

THE ARDMOREITE will discontinue the Sunday morning issue and the steady issue Saturday afternoon. This step is taken with the hope that it can better serve the needs of many of whom have not received their Sun-
