SPANIARD KILLING.

Mapp, the Slayer on Trial
Judge Gibbons' Court--A Statement of the Case.

Trial of James Mapp for the of Jack Spaniard is in procure Commissioner Gibbons. he evidence so far adduced about this state of affairs. had had about a year since invited of breaking up a Sun-ool gathering at the Chickaapel. He was arrested, tried in Judge Stuart's court, ag a jail sentence which he out here.

was one of the principal witnesses against him.

During his time, he returned neighborhood and attempted his respects to Mapp's daughter. This he was discovered, which led to his hatred of Mapp and it is said he had threatened to kill him. On last Saturday night he entered Mapp's house, armed with a knife. They met at the church arbor Sunday evening and deceased asked the defendant to take a walk with him as he desired to have a talk. They walked away about sixty or seventy five yards distant when the shooting occurred. They were accompanied by a man named Foley.

There were four shots fired all of which took effect in the person of the deceased, and three of which any one of them would have been fatal. Search was made and no arms found on deceased. Mapp rode away with Foley, the latter shortly returning to the scene. The defense had not at press hour introduced any testimony. It is supposed they will rely upon the desperate character of the deceased and the utterance by him of threats to kill Mapp. Mapp stands well where he is known as an honest and peaceable citizen. It is quite likely he will be held to answer, but in case he is, can give bond in any amount.

Court street has a dangerous nuisance which should be abated for the sake of public safety to say nothing of convenience. We refer to the trap door leading to the cellar of Whitehurst's grocery store. It is located in the middle of the sidewalk and is a greater part of the time left standing open. It is a regular dead-end and should be closed for once and for all.

CHICAGO AND ITS BATTLE.

A Century and a Half Before the City Was Located.

"In the year 1635," Tony says in his memoir, "I arrived at the fort of Chicago, where M. De la Durantaye commanded." This was the first fort here of which we have any account.
Edward G. Mason writes in the New England Magazine, and was probably a stockade structure constructed by Durantaye in 1635. Tony also marched from the Illinois with sixteen Frenchmen and two hundred Indians to take part in this campaign, and according to one account he came by the way of Chicago and mastered some recruits here perhaps from the garrison of the fort. He led his party across the country to Detroit where he met Durantaye and two other famous pioneers, La Foret and Daniel Graysolon Du Lhut, from whom the present city of Duluth takes its name.
They had a large body of French and Indians from the upper lakes, and the united force pushed on to Niagara and joined the governor general's army at the rendezvous on the southern shore of Lake Ontario, near the Seneca country. Two thousand five hundred men marched through the wilderness toward the great town of the Senecas, with Durantaye, Tony and Du Lhut, and their couriers de bois in the van. In the narrow defile the advance separated from the main body, came upon an ambush of three hundred Indian warriors who closed upon their rear with yells of triumph, thinking this detachment to be the whole army. But better leaders for such a fray there could not be than these three intrepid Frenchmen, who held their wood rangers steadily to their work until suddenly through the forest came the main body, headed by four companies of the fighting Carignan regiment, and the Senecas suddenly abandoned the field. Their great town was taken and destroyed, and down to our own time their descendants knew the scene of their crushing defeat by the French as Dya-godiyu, or 'The Place of a Battle.'

He trimmed his finger nails. On the seat in front of him sat a lanternjawed passenger trying to read a newspaper by the dim light of the smoky and archaic car lamp overhead, and the pulseless atmosphere was vigorously conscious of reminiscences of orange-peel and Connecticut tobacco.
And he sat with his knees against the back of the seat in front and trimmed his finger nails.

He trimmed his finger nails. The raindrops made slanting lines of moisture on the windows. Across the aisle a sleeping woman, long past the meridian of life, snored drowsily. He looked at the brakeman moving with slow, perfunctory step through the car, and yawned. He yawned, and continued to trim his finger nails.

He trimmed his finger nails. All about him were fellow-beings, the orbits of whose existence were for the time mysteriously co-existent with his own. Should he ever meet them again? Ah, me! And he trimmed his finger nails, and from his pale, trembling lips there came the murmur:
"Damn such a full knife!"

The man who killed Spaniard last stead of Flagg. This mistake was due to the parties filing the complaint, they getting the wrong name.

What do business men expect of a newspaper if they do not give it a support? Do they expect the paper to stand up for them and the town, defend their business, praise their liberality and honesty, invite people to come from far and near to trade, call attention to the fact that the people can do better at that particular town than anywhere else on earth, jump onto other payers all spread out when they assail the town and its citizens, work day in and day out for town and community and then live on faith and slough water?
Is that what is expected of a newspaper in this enterprising era?
