AGAINST QUIT CLAIMS.

The Chickasaw Legislature Has Passed a Townsite Law Taxing All Town Lots.

It is learned that the Chickasaw legislature, now in session at Tishomingo, last Saturday passed a bill known as the townsite law. It provides that all lots now held by virtue of quit claim deeds shall in the future be subject to annual taxation, the revenue derived therefrom to be converted to the national treasury.

The Ardmoreite's informant did not ascertain the rate of taxation assessed by the new law, but it is fair to presume it is sufficiently heavy to create indignation on the part of parties who have paid for their property under guarantee that it was theirs to all intents and purposes.

Every foot of ground along Main street is thus held, and under this law is subject to taxation. It would be nothing but justice if the Indian government would force the land violators who have grown rich from the sale of lots to pay at least a share of their wealth into the national treasury and pass a law forbidding any future quit claiming. There can be no doubt but this money properly belongs to the Chickasaw nation, but if its laws are to be based on equity, the landlords are the proper parties to legislate against.

Bring on your job work.
