Someone has discovered that Mr. Taft has a Kansas "double" in Dr. C. W. Brandenburg of Frankfort. The resemblance, if any, is only physical. Dr. Brandenburg has been a Kansas democrat so many years that not even the state historical society can remember when he wasn't.

The astronomers have now discovered fifty-six distinct canals upon the planet Mars and if not restrained there is no telling what they may see up there within the next year. Two to one they never discover the money which so mysteriously disappeared from the United States sub-treasuries at St. Louis and Chicago nor any missing police commissioner under accusation.

The idea of declaring a law conditionally unconstitutional is something new under the sun. Yet Judge Pritchard, President Roosevelt's appointee to the federal bench, did it in the North Carolina 2-14 cent fare injunction case. The old rule of statutory construction is that every law is promulgated valid, and when attacked as unconstitutional, the burden of showing it to be so beyond a reasonable doubt, rests on the party attacking it. To enjoin the execution of a law and postpone the question of its validity to a more convenient season is to copy the tactics of King Agrippa.

The Standard Oil company has been a leech upon the railways of the United States for many years. Its means of the tremendous pressure it has been enabled to bring to bear, it has extorted vast sums from the carriers, both directly in the form of rebates, and indirectly in other forms. There can be no question that if this great corporation shall finally be held to have broken the law, and shall be heavily punished, the ultimate effects will be most salutary, for both the public and the railways.—Railway Age. VIENNA GETS BAD SCARE

RUMOR OF ASSASSINATION OF AUSTRIAN EMPEROR CAUSES MUCH EXCITEMENT. By Associated Press. Vienna, Sept. 5.—Vienna suffered a severe scare this morning at an early hour over the report that the emperor had been assassinated.

It developed, however, that an old peasant, carrying a cane, attempted to approach the emperor for the purpose of presenting a petition, which led to some confusion and the circulation of the rumor.

SWATTED IN LACE

DRESSMAKER'S SWINDLE EXPOSED BY CUSTOMS OFFICIALS. HELD IN BAIL.

New York, Sept. 5.—W. T. Hardy and Huxton Baldwin, dressmakers of this city, who arrived from Europe yesterday on the steamer Kron Prinz Wilhelm, were arrested for smuggling an hour after they landed. Search of Hardy's baggage resulted in the discovery of several thousand dollars worth of lace, which was pinned in the side of skirts, pajamas, suits, sleeves of coats and legs of trousers in the trunks and pockets of a traveling coat which Hardy carried on his arm.

When Custom Inspector Campbell looked inside of the first skirt and saw that it was full of lace, Hardy said coolly: "Never mind taking out the others. They are all alike." Yard after yard of costly lace was taken out and piled up on the pier. Only a small quantity of lace was found in Baldwin's trunk and that, he said, had been put there by Hardy. Mr. Hardy and shipmates were also overhauled. Wound around the body of Mr. Hardy was thirty yards of handsome lace valued at about $25 a yard. "He accepted the exposure with smiles. The customs officials think they have uncovered a syndicate of smugglers who have within the last three years brought into this port more than a million dollars worth of dutiable goods. The men were each held in $2,000 bail.

Island in Yalu River Was Long the Subject of Dispute Between Chinese and Koreans. Japs Assume Control for Korea.

Yokohama, Sept. 4.—The probability of a serious clash between the Chinese and Japanese troops is involved in the action of Hul, the viceroy of Manchuria, in dispatching a force of Chinese soldiers to Kwanto or Middle Island, where, in the name of the Korean government, the Japanese have assumed control. The island named is the only rich region between the Yalu river and Manchuria on the northern side of the Shiang range of mountains. It has long been the subject of dispute

FEARFUL WRECK

FEARFUL WRECK. SIX KILLED AND TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY INJURED IN CANADA.

Orangeville, Ont., Sept. 4.—A Canadian Pacific railway special train carrying over 300 passengers, bound for the Toronto exhibition, was wrecked at the Horseshoe Falls, nine miles south of here today. Six persons were killed and over 250 persons were injured.

The train reached Orangeville an hour late, and half an hour later the locomotive jumped the rails on the down grade of the horseshoe curve of the Caledon Mountain. Five crowded coaches were piled on top of the locomotive. When the train left Orangeville every seat was occupied and a number of people were standing in the aisles.

The only explanation of the disaster is that the engineer was trying to make up time and took the horseshoe curve at a high rate of speed.

C. R. DAVENPORT.

The advance proof of Henry Clews Weekly Financial letter says some improvement can be recorded in the financial situation, which was due partly to reactionary influence, partly to the satisfactory policy of Secretary Cortelyou, and partly to the efforts to take up the new four million New York City bond issue which indicates reviving confidence. After such a violent reaction as has been experienced during the present month, a partial recovery was to be expected; because liquidation had been exceedingly thorough and the purchases of an important short interest contributed to the rally. Whether liquidation has reached the end or not, it is somewhat premature to decide. Much depends upon the future course of the money market. The credit situation has undoubtedly been greatly improved by recent liquidation, and this of itself should afford substantial relief. The outlook, however, for the money market continues uncertain. Firm rates are likely to prevail throughout the balance of this year, though it is to be hoped the extreme figures reached two or three years ago will not be repeated. Nevertheless, it is idle to conceal the fact that there is more or less anxiety concerning the monetary situation. Very shortly we shall be in the midst of the crop moving season. The prospects are for full average crops if we escape early frost, and as farm values upon an unusually high level, the monetary requirements this fall will inevitably be heavy. According to all accounts, business in the interior continues upon an active scale, and as values of all commodities are very high, the requirements for business purposes must be correspondingly large.

One way to avoid fire is to keep out of the frying pan.

BUFFALO HONORS M'KINLEY DEDICATES GREAT MONUMENT

Ardmoreite Special. Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Six years, lacking one day, after William McKinley was shot by a cowardly assassin at the Pan-American exposition grounds in this city, inflicting wounds which caused the death of the president on September 14, 1901, a great monument typifying the love of the people of Buffalo was dedicated in Niagara square today.

The beautiful white marble shaft was planned and executed under the direction of a commission of prominent men at a cost of $150,000, furnished by this municipality and the state of New York. Impressive ceremonies marked the dedication, the speakers including Governor Hughes, ex-President Cleveland and others of national fame. The exercises formed the central feature of Buffalo's old home week and were witnessed by thousands of people from all over the country.

The obelisk is of pure white marble, eighty-six feet in height, with a base of six feet and tapering gradually to the top. It rests upon a great pedestal, on two sides of which are inscribed the record of William McKinley as a statesman and a soldier.

On the north side is the following: "William McKinley, died in Buffalo, September 14, 1901, victim of a treacherous assassin, who shot the president as he was extending to him the hand of friendship."

Facing east, west, north and south from the angles of the pedestal are four sleeping lions in marble of heroic size, the work of Phinister Proctor, the New York sculptor.

Flanking the sides of the four bases which support the marble lions are a series of fountains, which are fed with water from gargoyles located close to the four corners of the pedestal of the obelisk. Surrounding the whole is a broad circular promenade, with mosaic floor and embellished with balustrades and massive balusters connected with heavy chains. The approaches are flights of stone steps, which pierce the parapet at four points. Beyond the parapet leading to the street level are concrete walks between which are grassy plots and flower beds. The effect of the whole in the opinion of the authorities is the most beautiful of any similar memorial in America.

The monument commission in charge of the erection of the shaft was composed of Edward H. Butler and George E. Matthews of Buffalo; E. A. Curtis of Fredonia and John G. Milburn of New York, in whose Buffalo house President McKinley died. Mr. Milburn was president of the ill-fated Pan-American exposition company.

The fund for the erection of the monument was not given directly by the New York legislature, but was saved from the state appropriation for the Pan-American exposition, through the economical administration of the late Daniel Newton Lockwood, a former law partner of Grover Cleveland. At the close of the fair the money he had received by act of the legislature, instead of being turned back into the state treasury, was diverted to the erection of the monument which was dedicated today, the city giving the site, establishing the surroundings and agreeing to maintain the statue.

Incidents of the Tragedy. It was late in the afternoon of Sep. 6, 1901—a few minutes after 6 o'clock, to be more exact—that newsmen began rushing madly through the streets of Buffalo, themselves overcome with the consternation that their cries aroused in the breasts of others, wildly shouting. "Uxtry! Uxtry! President McKinley is shot by an assassin!"

It was only fifteen minutes after the madman had fired the fatal bullet that the first extra of Buffalo papers was on the street. News of the tragedy that had occurred at the Temple of Music, on the exposition grounds, spread like wildfire. The first were conflicting, some of the papers declaring that the president had been stabbed, but all agreed that he had suffered serious and perhaps fatal injuries. Every loyal citizen of Buffalo was overcome at the disgrace of the city, each individual taking upon his own shoulders a partial responsibility. In the first outburst of anger the police and detectives were roundly scolded, although the wrath of the populace centered on the miserable assassin, cowering wretchedly in his cell, his tottering brain filled with fear that he would be dragged forth by a mob and torn limb from limb.

The various shades of emotion with which the people of Buffalo received the news would have supplied an unprecedented field for psychological observation, if there had been in Buffalo a man who was sufficiently calm to undertake such a study. Even the newspaper men, tried veterans of many tragedies, to whom life and death was but a "story," were overcome by the universal panic and worked under a stress of excitement and indignation such as they had never before known. Workmen, homeward bound from the day's labor, heard the news and wept violently, their tears making furrows in their grimy cheeks. On the street corners little knots of men gathered, some stony-eyed and pale, some weeping, some swearing aloud for vengeance. "Let no one harm him," the words of the stricken president, bespeaking the supreme charity of the man great enough to love his enemies alone served to quiet the outburst of the mob spirit which for a time threatened to transform Buffalo into a pandemonium. On the sidewalks and in the street cars strangers, talked with each other, men shook hands in sympathy and women clasped each other and wept violently. Such a scene of universal sorrow was never before witnessed.

On the days that followed the city waited with bated breath for news from the room where the martyr president lay breathing his last. Each bulletin announcing that the president still lived was greeted with heartfelt prayers of thanksgiving, until on September 14 there came the bulletin that shocked the city with a great throb of grief. "The president is dead."
