Hope.

Hope is the bloom of tomorrow
Fearing the frost of tonight;
Hope is the nectar that sorrow
Uses to calm our affliction!

Hope is the song of the mother
Rocking her baby to sleep;
Hope is the prayer that another
Says for her boy over the deep!

Hope is the reed of our sorrow
Under the fall of the day—
Promise that some sweet tomorrow
We shall live ever, away!

Live in a land all eternal
When all our trials are through,
When hope has blossomed supernatural
And all our hopes have come true!

—Byron Williams.

Misses Ada Bennett and Ada Cruce will entertain the members of the Kosmos Club this evening at the home of Miss Cruce on Hargrove Heights.

The Bible class will meet with Mrs. George A. Ramsey tomorrow afternoon.

Musical recital by the pupils of Walter Nichols at Broadway Baptist church Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Frederick Greenleaf left today to spend the summer with northern and eastern friends.

The members of Circle 2 of the Broadway Methodist Aid will entertain with a reception at the parsonage this evening from four to seven.

All members and friends are cordially invited to attend. There will be a musical and literary program rendered.

The Majestic was crowded at every performance last evening and Miss Hunter has found it necessary to add a number of fans, which are being placed in today and the pictures for the night are especially good and humorous. Miss Hunter promises the public the most interesting films in the circuit, and also expects every effort to make her patrons comfortable.

On Friday afternoon at the Elks' home forty-two will be the game at a reception tendered Mrs. S. T. Bledsoe. The hostesses will be Mesdames W. A. Edwards, George Walker, E. E. Guillott, C. M. Campbell, W. I. Cruce and C. P. Dings.

Miss Randal, who is to have charge of the art department in the London conservatory and who is now in France studying under the masters was a teacher of Miss Joe Mason during her schooling at William Wood college in Fulton, Mo., last winter and is specially fond of Miss Mason and remembers her frequently with souvenir post cards from abroad.

The Maccabees will meet in regular session tomorrow afternoon in the Odd Fellows hall. An interesting program is on. Initiation will be the order of the meeting, after which refreshments will be served.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the W. C. T. U. Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. A. Madden. Many plans were discussed as to making money in the future for the erection of a drinking fountain on Main street. A report was given from the committee that had charge of the fountain serving at Wall's last Saturday and something over ten dollars was realized. Mrs. Bivens, one of the earnest workers of the organization, added over three dollars to the amount from baking and selling flowers. The union will meet during the summer months, so anxious are its members to raise the required sum for the erection of the fountain.

Miss Itea Wolverton was hostess to the members of the Young Woman's Home Mission society Monday. The afternoon was spent in mission study. There was a good attendance and after the lesson refreshments were served. The club will meet with Mrs. Leo Tyne next Monday.

The violin recital given by Mr. Harry Ross on Monday evening at the Broadway Methodist church was looked forward to with great expectation as he had been highly commented by those who had heard him in private, nor were any of his hearers disappointed for before the program was hardly over he had captivated the entire audience. He gave several numbers, each distinct in style and all with a cleverness and ease that was as convincing as captivating and denoted not only the best school of training but that innate talent which is born, never created. The coming of Mr. Ross in our midst is an acquisition to the musical circle in the city that has long been needed and his reception is a hearty one. He will be connected with the London conservatory. The fine violin playing was partly due to the inspiring accompaniment of Miss Lottie Gray, whose piano music is considered among the best if not the best in the city. Miss Hester's numbers were very enjoyable and her coming to our town is another acquisition to our musical clubs. Immediately after the music numbers an informal reception was given by Mesdames Walter A. Ledbetter, N. H. McCoy, A. G. Addington, S. T. Bledsoe, E. E. Guillott, C. M. Campbell, J. B. Wall, J. R. Pennington, D. B. Lester; Misses Thadde James, Dorothy Dixon, Bliss Corlew, Edna James, Maybel Warren and Madge Roberts. The program: Mendelssohn Concerto Op. 64.

Miss Freda Graham and Miss Ruth Blake returned yesterday from a very pleasant visit to their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Bo Blake, in Marietta.

Regal Wedding for Miss Reid. London, June 23.—Beautiful and historic Chapel Royal, in St. James' palace, before whose sanctuary Victoria was wedded to Prince Albert and which ever since has been held sacred to royal nuptials, was today the scene of the marriage of Miss Jeannette Reid, daughter of the American ambassador, and John Hubert Ward, King Edward witnessed the ceremony and was the first to extend his felicitations to the happy groom and the blushing bride. Near all of the members of the British royal family and the cream of the London nobility and diplomatic corps, as select an assemblage as ever gathered at the marriage of an American girl, aided by their presence in making this the most noteworthy matrimonial alliance that the English metropolis has known in years.

Aside from his desire to do honor to the daughter of the American ambassador, King Edward contributed the prestige of his presence and the solemnity of the Chapel Royal to the wedding through a sincere respect for the groom, who is his quarry-in-waiting. The Hon. John Hubert Ward is the first member of his majesty's household to take a bride since the accession of Edward, and this also added to the notability of the occasion. He is a brother of the Earl of Dudley, the recently appointed governor-general of Australia. The wedding took place earlier than expected in order that Lord and Lady Dudley, who will leave shortly for Australia, might be present.

The bridesmaids included Miss Beatrice Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills of New York, and Miss Jennie Crocker of San Francisco, both cousins of the bride. Among the presents received by the bride was a magnificent emerald necklace, the gems mounted on platinum, costing $5,000, the gift of J. Pierpont Morgan. Ambassador Reid's chief gift was a diamond necklace, and that of Mrs. Reid a diamond tiara. King Edward, Queen Alexandra and all the members of the royal family contributed lavishly to the magnificent array of gifts, as did scores of the English nobility and every ambassador and prominent diplomat in London. A ton of house linen, woven to order on Irish looms, was given the bride by her mother.

The bride's trousseau was in keeping with the regal nature of the wedding and was mainly the production of leading Parisian creators of feminine garments. The wedding gown was the creation of Doucet and was of a striped satin mistral, adorned with magnificent needlepoint lace, draped in front in the form of a "V," continuing the simple under the arms and trimmed with garlands of orange blossoms, myrtle and white roses. The drapery of lace fell on the sleeves, forming a sort of fichu continuing the simple on the back. The sides of the skirt were entirely covered with the same needlepoint lace. The train was caught at the back by a garland of orange blossoms, myrtle and white roses. The splendid veil was of tulle adorned with embroidery and needlepoint lace.

The trousseau includes many other beautiful gowns of Parisian make, among them a tea-gown of rose mousseline de soie, an afternoon gown of old blue voile, a cream-colored tailor-made costume, a decolette gown of Nile green and a muslin frock, braided with crystal beads.

Mr. Ward is thirty-eight years old, and a member of a family of great antiquity. He has no chance of succeeding to the title, inasmuch as the Earl of Dudley has a large family. He received a legacy of $500,000 when he became of age, and has had other legacies since.

The new Mrs. Ward has a considerable fortune in her own right and will receive a considerable addition from her father.
