REGULAR REPUBLICANS IN GRIM MOOD ARE ON VERGE OF CAPITULATION NOW

Washington, May 5.—Through the formation today of an organization which its leaders claim represents a clear majority of the entire senate and to be made up wholly of republicans of the "regular" wing, a movement was started with intent to settle the question whether the senate shall remain conservative, become radical or be thrown into political chaos as far as concerns any coherent policy in regard to the administration's legislative program.

Senator Aldrich called the "regular" republicans together and confronted them with a grim description of the possible political effect of their apparent defeat at the hands of the "insurgent" republicans and democrats in the fight over the traffic agreement section of the administration railroad bill. He asked his associates whether they were ready to submit to domination by such a combination. Any such surrender, he warned them, meant fall of the Taft policies and the downfall of conservative control, not only in congress but in the republican party generally. Someone reminded Senator Aldrich that the senators then and there gathered together were not in agreement on all points, whereupon he replied that they must get together and agree to stand together and let the details be secondary.
Otherwise, he said, congress would adjourn without a single item of the Taft program accomplished.

The entire tone of this conference was belligerent toward the "insurgents." This was the dominant note: "Let us get together and stand as a unit against every insurgent proposition if the insurgents propose anything good, we'll take it over bodily and put it through as our own; if they propose anything bad, we'll stamp it out."

It was stated without reservation that President Taft had been kept fully advised of the situation and was entirely in sympathy with the plan and virtually pledged to it. It was said in behalf of the conference that while the measures which would be resorted to were heroic, they were necessary in defense of the administration and the integrity of the republican party, and as a means to any effective legislation whatever.

To Senator Aldrich was given the leadership of the new movement. He left Washington today for Rhode Island, and will not return before Tuesday. The plan is meanwhile to "mark time," and endeavor to "hold the fort" while there will be many conferences at the white house and elsewhere and the details of the militant plan will be perfected. The intention is to avoid test votes on any subject of importance until next week.

Every hour brings additional evidence of the widening breach between the regulars and the insurgents in both houses, conservative republican leaders with hardly an exception, confess that in neither house is there at present a coherent majority. Even those unfamiliar as yet with the plans of the new senate organization seem to be awaiting the return of President Taft to Washington, to see what, if anything, he can and will do to induce or compel action sufficiently harmonious to get at least some remnants of his program through congress. As matters stand tonight, the prospect from the republican point of view, is anything but alluring.

The situation has developed almost without halt from the beginning of the last session, when the warfare began in the house over the speakership and the adoption of the cases. Some locate the beginning of the split as far back as the Fiftininth congress, and trace it down to the suddenly widening break of last year's tariff session, since when there has been little semblance of harmony on the majority side, especially of the house of representatives.

The direct and immediate cause of the danger to the legislative program is that the two factions in the republican party have been unable to get together upon details of the proposed legislation. Both sides agree that this is the case; but each side blames the other. The insurgents say that the fault lies in the arrogance and intolerance of the less able leaders of the majority toward the progressive policies represented by most of the republicans of the middle west. The regulars charge with bitter resentment that the insurgents are simply trying to destroy the republican party by attempting to discredit its time-honored leadership and principles, and ride over the ruins to coveted places of power.

The striking thing about the whole situation is the impartial observer in the evidently sincere conviction on the part of each side that it is itself loyal to republicanism and wholly in the right, and that the other either wilfully represent or fantastically self-deceived, is more or less consciously a band of public enemies.

Whilever side is right, the battle has assumed deadly and certainly historic proportions. A good many politicians looking beyond the moment and the concrete subjects of disorderly rights at hand, are asking what angle the struggle will take in the next republican convention.

Meanwhile the democrats in both houses are looking on with a "go it, husband, go it bear" expression.

They say that "whichever loses, we win," or as Senator Bailey put it, the other day on the floor: "The only policy we have in this affair is to keep both of you fellows irritated."

Majority Leader Sen. E. Payne of New York sounded the only optimistic note that could be heard in a canvass of the house.

"I haven't seen or heard anything on the house side which indicates a great split in the party," said Mr.
Payne. "Have you?" he inquired, with a broad smile. "I think those fellows in the senate are unduly alarmed."

On the other hand Representative Vreeland of New York, one of the ultra conservatives, said:

"This insurgency is not 'becoming' serious; it is already serious. If a division like this in the party continues, it is bound to become irreparable. If it existed only in congress, it might be patched up, but when it is in every state and in every district, no amity can come of it."

Representative Needham, a conservative from California, said that "insurgency in its national aspect is rapidly becoming anti-Taft and anti-protection. When this fact becomes generally known there will be a change in the sentiment of the country regarding it."

Practically all of the insurgents in the house were disposed to attribute the split in the party to the alleged intolerance of such leaders as Speaker Cannon and Senator Aldrich of Washington, and Hayes of California, both of whom are identified with the insurgent wing, said the party could not get together if Cannon and Aldrich were eliminated. Victor Murdock of Kansas put it differently. He said:

"I think that Aldrich and Cannon are not in line with either the party or the people, but we are going to work out these great legislative problems within the party." Speaker Cannon talked of the situation with characteristic vigor. He reiterated his statement that there was no longer a "working republican majority" in either house. It would "soon get thinned," he said, "if I kept repeating my opinions about insurgency."

"The danger with which he pronounced this word is indescribable."
"And I can only refer you to what I have said on that subject in my recent speeches. I guess everybody knows where I stand on that proposition."

HEROIC PRIEST DYING A LEPER

CARRIED CHEER TO OUTCASTS IN VILLAGE FOR THE "UNCLEAN" CONTRACTED DISEASE.

Canton, China, May 5.—Among the squalor and unspeakable horrors of a leper village, Father Lamber Louis Conrardy, a Roman Catholic priest is dying. Working among the outcasts and carrying cheer to those for whom there is no hope, the priest contracted the dreaded disease and now it is but a matter of time before his name will be numbered among those of the countless who have been claimed by leprosy.

On the outskirts of Canton is the village for the "unclean." Here Father Conrardy labored day and night, administering to the stricken and the last rites to the dying. He took the ordinary precaution against leprosy.
One day he was called to the side of a young man who was breathing his last. Unmindful of the peril the priest stayed by the bedside and stroked the hand of the dying boy.

A little scratch on his hand came in contact with the skin of the youth.
Soon it became known that the priest had contracted the dread disease, and it wasn't long before the first signs of leprosy showed. Six years is all that is left to the heroic priest, for this is the life of an adult stricken with leprosy.

Father Conrardy comes of a noble Belgian house. He gave up the life of ease and wealth for the cassock.
For many years he followed Father Damien, who came of peasant stock and upon his death continued the work alone. In the leper's colony of Molokai he followed the work, and when the government took over the colony and the condition of the unfortunate was improved, he turned his face toward a still more distressful community—the leper settlement near Canton.

One last visit he made to civilization, studying the disease and securing funds. Then he turned his back upon the life of ease and took up his work.

The smaller the town the more women have to eat at their parties.
