

Odors and flavors roll off Crusto like water off a duck's back. It just simply refuses to absorb the odor or taste of anything that's cooked in it. And it is odorless and tasteless itself. You can do this with Crusto.

Fry fish in it. Strain it to remove the food particles—and it's as fresh and tasteless as new. Use the strained Crusto for frying onions—there will be no fishy flavor. Use that strained Crusto for baking waffles. Your waffles won't taste of fish or onions. This is the truth. Crusto does not absorb odors or flavors.

Further—it does not smoke or smell when heated "red hot"—no frying odor in the house. And besides all this—Crusto is the best and most economical cooking fat for frying and baking; for doing all that lard or butter can do and doing it all better.

How To Get the Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind and You Save 25% Fully Guaranteed

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in quelling distressing coughs, chest and throat aches, is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough, quins, strident, low, for bronchitis, spasmodic cough, tracheal asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex 50 cents worth, pour it in a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you—at a cost of only a cent—a full pint of better cough syrup than you could buy for $2.50. Takes but a few minutes to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heats the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in quinine, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Truck Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

During the evening, punch and wafers were served.

AT THE THEATRES

At the Majestic.

"The Seventh Noon," Mutual Masterpiece, is on the program at the Majestic today.

Peter Donaldson has made a failure of his life and decides to end it. A friend of his, a noted chemist, has discovered a poison which acts fatally exactly seven days after taking it. The chemist tries it on a dog with apparently fatal results, so Donaldson drinks the poison, draws his money out of the bank, and resolves to live the seven days to the full. He registers at an exclusive hotel and there he meets the girl. From that very moment the spectator is held in breathless suspense until the Seventh Noon is reached. * * * What happens then? The answer—See the play, which is shown at the Majestic Theatre today.

At the Palace.

Marguerite Clark, the dainty little actress who has won the hearts of the motion picture public by her marvellous artistry and her irrepressible vivacity in recent productions of the Famous Players Film company, is being starred by that feature concern in "Still Waters," a story of the circus and of canal boat life, written especially for Miss Clark by Edith Barnard DeLone. This rare combination of comedy and drama is shown at the Palace today.

Thursday, "Wm. Fox presents Wm. Frennan in 'The Broken Law.'"

Few actors, granting that they possessed the requisite histrionic talent, would have been qualified to play Daniel Esmond, William Farnum's masterpiece, "The Broken Law." This stupendous feature has to do with the destiny of a spry lover, and necessarily calls for an artist skilled in romantic acting. That is not all, however, for it makes one other requirement—bravery.

Were not Farnum the physical culture enthusiast that he is, he would never have survived the fight scene in "The Broken Law." The play is cast in England in 1850, and the fight between Farnum, as Esmond, and Gaspar, who also aspires to be chief of the clan, is with bare fists, in accordance with the boxing rules then in force. And the fight is real—thrillingly real—in so far as the weight of the blows is concerned.

DUTCH MARINE CORPS MAY BE DISBANDED

The Hague, Dec. 27.—The Dutch marine corps, popularly known in the Netherlands as "Soldiers and Sailors Too," celebrated the 50th anniversary of its formation at Willemsoord on December 10. Although the corps has had a history of gallant deeds in every quarter of the globe, the celebration was held under the cloud of possible disbandment, for there is an inclination in official circles to abolish the corps altogether in the near future, as its usefulness is believed to have disappeared under modern conditions of naval warfare. Gradual reduction of the number of officers has been going on for some time and for several years no appointment to the commissioned ranks have been made. The marines, however, have been maintained at a high state of efficiency, and among the Dutch people they are more popular than any other troops.

It was in the days of the famous Dutch admiral, De Ruyter, that the corps came into existence. Only two years later, in 1667, the corps took part in the Dutch naval raid on Chatham in England. For two and a half centuries since their daring exploits have included the Spanish war of succession against the French at Cadix, the storming of Gibraltar in alliance with the British marines in 1704, the capture of Barcelona, and battles in Spain against the French at Madrid, Alicante and Saragossa. For many years they fought in the Dutch colonies, suppressing native uprisings, and in colonial expeditions against England and France. It was in the latter campaign that the Dutch marines were forced to capitulate after a hard fight at the Cape of Good Hope in 1803, and South Africa thus fell into British hands. Since the beginning of the last century, except for the Belgian revolution in 1830, the Dutch marines have been employed solely in naval duty and colonial wars, but they have scarcely ever been idle.

Because he had neglected to swear to the allegations he made in his petition for divorce, R. E. Drennan was not granted a legal separation from Daisy Drennan in Judge Clark's division of the district court, Monday.

The Drennans were married at Ardmore and the suit was not contested by the defendant. When it was discovered that no affidavit had been made to the allegations, the case went over until the law on the subject can be looked into by Drennan's attorneys. —The Oklahoma Times.
