Disseminating the News.
It is estimated that 2,600 papers in the United States daily receive telegraphic service. At least 400 dailies divide between them 1,000,000 words of telegraphed news, in addition to the reports furnished by the collecting agencies. An average day sends 1,190,000 words over the wires in the United States, and the cables raise the daily average to more than 2,000,000 words. A startling or widely interesting occurrence raises this average by tens of thousands of words. A full third of the total in twenty-four hours may come from a single town, if it is Chicago holding some national nominating convention or San Francisco in earthquake and flames.

End Cold Quickly Broken Up.
Mrs. Mart'sa Wilcox, Gowanda, N. Y., writes: "I first used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy about eight years ago. At that time I had a hard cold and coughed most of the time. It proved to be just what I needed. It broke up the cold in a few days, and the cough entirely disappeared. I have told many of my friends of the good I received through using this medicine, and all who have used it speak of it in the highest terms."

HAROLD LOCKWOOD AT THE MAJESTIC TODAY

Harold Lockwood, the handsome leading man with the "American" Company, appears in a Mutual Masterpiece "The End of the Road" at the Majestic today. Following is the story in brief:

Wearied of the pleasures of social life, young Harvard goes to the Carolina mountains in search of rest and quiet. Instead he finds excitement and action a plenty. He stumbles upon a band of counterfeiters, unearthes a nest of moonshiners and rescues a beautiful girl from a dastardly lover, whom he fights single-handed to a finish. There is danger enough to daunt the heart of a braver man, but Harvard goes through to the end and wins the reward he deserves.

Theda Bara, Palace Thursday.
A cast of surpassing eminence is seen in the latest William Fox production, "The Galley Slave," in support of Theda Bara. Headed by the universal favorite, Stuart Holmes, the brilliant young American leading man, the players assembled are the best known in the country. Estely Claire Whitney has an important role, Henry Leone is seen in a part of striking power, and other players of equal ability are on the long cast of characters. Last, but not least (except in point of size) is little Jan Lee, the gifted child actress whose four-year-old talents have brought audiences the nation-wide to her feet.

Theda Bara, the star of "The Galley Slave" is the only motion picture actress whose temperament is so constituted that she is unable to give her best efforts to a part unless suitable to the emotion portrayed is provided.

In consequence, Mr. Fox has upon his payroll for the sole use of Miss Bara an orchestra consisting of a piano, violin, violoncello and flute. In making outdoor and street scenes in "The Galley Slave," the orchestra attracted so much attention that it was necessary in several cases to call out the police reserves.

This latest Theda Bara success will be shown at the Palace Thursday.

The Business Men's Credit association will hold its annual election of officers at the regular meeting tonight (Tuesday) at 7:30 and every member is urged to attend.

At the meeting, plans are to be formulated for the year's work, and among these will be a Pay-Up Week, the first week in February, the extension of trade territory, the increase of proportionate cotton receipts for next year. Legislation in the interest of collections, postage legislation and kindred matters are all scheduled to attract the attention of the association during the coming year.

The association begins the new year auspiciously, according to President Krueger, and expects to be a factor in the commercial uplift during the year.

standing today as a monument to his memory.

Some sixty years ago, the then young Dodge, who had moved from New England, where he had studied civil engineering, to Council Bluffs, Ia., entered the employ of the Illinois Central railroad Abraham Lincoln, who had done legal work for the same company, met the young Yankee. They talked of building a railroad over the Rocky mountains and beyond. The world had been laughing at the project. Lincoln and Dodge agreed that it was feasible.

The federal government shortly afterward decided to begin surveying for the proposed line. Dodge jumped at the chance of leading the party. Several trips were made as far as the Rocky mountains searching for the most feasible route, the men under Dodge plunging into many a wilderness to meet stubborn resistance on the part of the Indians.

In the midst of the undertaking, the Civil War broke. Dodge, born at Danvers, Mass., in 1831, was just 30 years old. He had had some military training at Norwich university, in Vermont, and some experience fighting Indians. Securing a colonel's commission from his old friend, President Lincoln, he raised, drilled and equipped at his own expense the Fourth Iowa Regiment.

Within two weeks Colonel Dodge was leading his command against the rebels in northern Missouri. His lantern soon afterward at the battle of Pea Ridge won almost instant promotion to the rank of brigadier general. He lost one-fourth of his entire command, but he saved the day for the federal army. He again distinguished himself in the decisive battle of the Atlanta campaign, July 22, 1864, when he defeated General Hood's desperate movement to the rear of the Army of the Tennessee. Later while standing in a trench before Atlanta, General Dodge was shot and severely wounded in the head.

After the fall of Vicksburg he received appreciative recognition from General Grant, being promoted to major general and given command of the Sixteenth Army Corps.

The hanging of "Sam" Davis, a Confederate spy who was captured in Tennessee, was one of the incidents of General Dodge's career. On Davis were found complete plans of the fortifications at Nashville, which, evidently, he had received from some federal officer high in authority. General Dodge offered the young spy his freedom if he would reveal the name of his informant, but the accused man refused. Half a dozen times before sending the man to the gallows, General Dodge offered him immunity. The spy went to his death with his lips closed. "He was the bravest man that ever died," said General Dodge.

When General Dodge retired in 1886, it was to go back to railroad building. Once, in the meantime, Lincoln had summoned Dodge to Washington for a conference on the route. Dodge suggested Omaha as the eastern terminus of the railway, and it was at his suggestion that this decision was made. Work had progressed but slowly, however, up to 1865, when Dodge took charge again. By May 1867 he had 12,000 men along the river Platte, and he kept them steadily moving westward. Within three years the last spike was driven.

In addition to his military service and his engineering successes, General Dodge remained up to late in life an active and influential man. He was elected to congress the first year after the war, and it was said that a promising political life was before him, but he declined renomination, in favor of the railway project. He was later a delegate to the republican national conventions of 1868 and 1876. In 1898 he was chairman of the president's commission to inquire into the management of the war with Spain. He was for a time commander-in-chief of the military order of the Royal Legion and an officer of numerous patriotic organizations.
