

CARTER CO. FAIR GREAT SUCCESS

PRESIDENT OF THE ASSOCIATION WAS IN THE CITY YESTERDAY AND SAYS SECOND FAIR WILL BE BETTER IN EVERY WAY.

O. K. Darden, president of the Carter County fair association, was in the city yesterday on business. Mr. Darden states that he has every assurance from the best farmers and taxpayers in the county that they are going to make a supreme effort another year to make the second fair a greater success than the first was.

The first annual fair was not taken as seriously by many as it should have been, according to the officials. It was more or less an experiment, but they have found out that it is a serious certainty from now on, and those who had exhibited here this season are looking their friends and neighbors to raise something really worth while and have their stuff on display another year.

President Darden has nothing but praise for the first fair and the way the business men of Ardmore responded to the call for assistance. Of course it was expected that a deficit would occur the first year, but the business men and prominent farmers throughout the county are willing to stand the price, realizing that it was worth more to them than it ever cost.

It was plainly evident that the present equipment at the fair grounds is inadequate and more buildings will have to be provided. A larger exhibit hall, commodious and comfortable stock sheds and pens, and above all a first class poultry show house, where the many blooded birds, of which this city has thousands, can be shown.

All these Mr. Darden says will come in time, but he thinks that Carter County is entitled to great praise for the manner in which the first fair was conducted.

WILSON IS THE FAVORITE IN THE EAST

SAM A. APPLE SAYS SENTIMENT IS IN FAVOR OF WILSON — THE VIEW OF THE AVERAGE VOTER

Sam A. Apple has returned home from a business trip to Chicago and New York. He was pleased with the results of his trip and feels that some big things will be happening in Ardmore now within a short time.

In speaking of the political situation Mr. Apple says it seems that Wilson was the favorite everywhere he heard politics discussed. Business men are pleased and they do not want to take a chance at making things worse. The voter holds about this opinion—that he does not know much of how relations with Germany and Great Britain should be handled because he is not a diplomat and not acquainted with international law, but he does know that Woodrow Wilson has preserved the honor of the country and has kept it at peace. The average voter does not know much of the technicalities of the dealings with Mexico, but he does know that relations with that country have been handled in a manner that Mexico is not being ruined by invasion and our own armies are not in battle line. The people generally feel that the president has handled things pretty well, and they are for him.

Mr. Apple says in the theatres in the cities when a picture of Wilson is shown or his policies referred to that prolonged cheering results, and the situation in the east looks very favorable for his re-election.

graphed, asking my position and 'Why I will speak against Hughes.' I answered:

"Because I have the right to vote as I please and shall fearlessly express my honest opinion, regardless of political consequences. Because with great respect for Mr. Hughes' personal character, in my humble judgment the greatest calamity to this nation would be to again turn it over to the republican machine, which is still under the absolute control of the same bosses, against whom even life long republicans arose in vigorous and overwhelming revolt.

"Because no man could have closely observed conditions in Chicago without marveling at the complete domination of the republican old guard or pitying progressive leaders who succumbed to that powerful influence and then deliberately betrayed and sought to turn over to the republican party, men who can neither be lulled nor bought.

"Because instead of constructive statesmanship, republican leaders prefer to indulge in personal abuse and seek to revive sectionalism, which all true patriots know is a dead and buried issue."

"The republican party has been the party of special privilege, and during its long period of absolute control of the affairs of the nation, has worked infinitely harder for the 'interests', and then largely overlooked legislation for the benefit of the farmers, our workmen, our women, our children, and other vital elements for human welfare.

"Read the progressive platform of 1912 and see how the combined effort of those who attended that splendid convention has largely shaped legislation for the past three years.

"Then look at the enthusiastic gathering held in Chicago on June 7th last, every state and territory represented by patriotic, thinking men and women, who came at their own expense to do what they could to continue the fight for those principles in which we progressives all deeply believe.

"See the tragedy of that splendid gathering, waiting for four days for the word that never came.

"I speak freely in regard to these conditions, because the nomination for vice-president was not sought and not desired by me, and in accepting the nomination, I used the words: 'If perchance I should be elected,' and then as a friend congratulated me, as I left the platform, stated I should be consoled with, for it hit me like a thunder clap, to have learned a few minutes before that we had been deliberately betrayed by former republicans in whom we believed, and whose sole object was to again secure control of the power and patronage of the national government.

"To save it from what?"
"To save it from the prosperity which is rampant from New York to California?"

"To save it from the farmers who are making large crops, for which they are realizing more satisfactory prices than ever before in their history?"

"To save it from the workmen whose brain and brawn is needed in every state in the union, and who are receiving more money than ever before in their experience, with shorter hours of labor?"

"To 'save the country' to them means to fleece it for their personal, political and financial gain.

"Such brazen hypocrisy from such men who must be judged by their past record cannot deceive the American people.

"As a large cotton planter I have nothing whatsoever to protect, but am an earnest advocate of protection, have reached these conclusions after deep study and very careful thought, and believe protection absolutely essential for national prosperity.

"I stand firmly and squarely as a progressive and believe the greatest benefit that can accrue to this nation will be two great national parties, the conservatives and the progressives, both along broad patriotic lines, absolutely free from sectionalism of any character, permitting the states to work out their own problems, and do team work for the upbuilding of the nation. Such parties would attract to them the best and brainiest citizens of America, who, without the sacrifice of one iota of principle, could take such stands on the tariff and other great matters as their patriotic judgment might dictate.

"There are no German-American, Irish-American, French-American, or other hyphenated Americans in this country. They are either all American, or else all foreign citizens.

"Even American men naturally regard with reverence and sympathy that country or nation which has been the home for centuries of their ancestors, and it is a great pity politicians harp upon 'Americanism,' and 'pollitid hyphens' to create unrest and discord.

"In the event the day should come (and let us hope it never will) when our men must fight and die for our country, history will emphatically repeat itself, and show that we have no more truly patriotic citizens than those from foreign lands, who have made America their home, and whose splendid patriotism, when needed, is measured by their all.

"Stamp out for all time the politicians' cry of sectionalism.

"No single locality holds a monopoly of the patriotism or brains of the United States, and team work will alone enable America to continue to accomplish those results which have made her the marvel of the world."

Good Manners Help.

A merchant who returned from England just before the war broke out has been voluble ever since on the manners of the children he happened to meet abroad. Apparently American parents and schools do not lay on good manners the emphasis that they receive abroad. Yet good manners, like the gold at the foundation of all money, are current the world over. Emerson noted this: "Give a boy dress and accomplishments and you give him the mastery of palaces and fortunes wherever he goes. He has not the trouble to earn or own them; they solicit him to enter and possess." "All your Greek," Chesterton wrote to his son, "can never advance you from secretary to envoy, or from envoy to ambassador, but your address, your air, your manner, if good, may."

The difference between a well-bred and ill-bred man is this," Samuel Johnson said. "One immediately attracts your attention, the other your aversion. You love one until you find reason to hate him; you hate the other until you find reason to love him." Civility, polished manners, mean much to a youth in his first position.—Kansas City Star.

Small Things.

As with music, so with poetry it is the little things that pay. Many an indifferent composer has made more out of a single song or waltz than Sir Edward Elgar has made out of "The Dream of Gerontius," and many a poet has received more for a brief lyric than he can hope to get for work that may have cost him months or years' of labor. Indeed, a volume of verse often makes less for the author than he receives for three or four pieces printed in magazines or newspapers. It is the same with less exalted matters. The inventor of a patent collar stud or boot protector will make more money than the inventor of something that really benefits the human race. The little thing that every one wants is the thing that pays, whether in trade or art. Herold accomplishment has the herold reward of starvation.
