Facing the New Year With Hope And a Feeling of Work Well Done, A Spirit of Optimism Prevails

WITH the coming year at the threshold, awaiting us as a new face at the door, we are unable to sing with Tennyson, "full knee-deep lies the winter snow."

There is little in the weather to give us a feeling of sympathy for the groans—as a dying year is supposed to groan—that attend the passing of 1922.

There is no cheerless blast to freeze the marrow of our bones. Instead, a balmy breeze and a clear sky diffuse a feeling of spring, and as we greet the new year, we welcome the new face at the door with joy and the hope that he brings us better things.
