

GEN. SHERMAN'S REPORT,

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Gen. Sherman has submitted his annual report to Secretary McClellan. It is the most complete and difficult to read of any of his reports. It is a particular commendation of the Civil War. The report is a long and detailed account of the military operations of the army during the year. It is a masterpiece of military history.

bility of bonded agents of the bureau. Suits were brought against the late commissioner of that bureau, but the accounting officers of the treasury who have no claim on the funds of the government are not to be considered. The report is a long and detailed account of the military operations of the army during the year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The following is issued by the treasury department to-day: "Any person subscribing hereafter for four per cent. bonds, consols of 1907, authorized by the act of July 14, 1870, may pay for them with any of the 5-20 bonds of the act of March 3, 1865, redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after the first day of July, 1870, in the same way as if they were called at the date of the subscription in regular course; but a subscriber to avail himself of this privilege must accompany the subscription with a full description of such bonds by numbers and denominations, and must within thirty days thereafter forward the bonds to this department to be applied like called bonds. Of the amount issued of the above described 5-20 bonds there is now outstanding and uncalled an amount of $26,085,650.

(Signed) JOHN SHERMAN, Secretary."

HE RATHER LIKES US.

At the breakfast given to Dean Stanley by the Century club in New York, on Saturday, Dean Stanley said, in response to a toast:

The hospitality shown me has been no exception to that which every Englishman meets with in this country, in the endless repetition of kind words and the overwhelming crush of genial entertainment which has been thrust upon me. When Samuel Johnson, that sharp critic and outspoken Englishman, was asked whether on his famous Scotch tour he had been disappointed, he replied: "No. I was told that I should find men of rude manners and savage tastes. I have not been disappointed. [Laughter.] So, too, when I set out for your shores I was told that I would meet a kindly welcome and the most friendly hospitality. I can only say, with Dr. Johnson, I have not been disappointed. [Laughter.] I have done much and seen much, and have had a vivid experience of American life and manners, and my only disappointment is that I did not anticipate so much, and I was compelled to remodel my anticipatory impressions of your country. I can find it in my heart even to forgive the reporters and the interviewers who have left little of what I have said or done unnoted, and have often given me credit for doing and saying things of which I had no recollection and was sure that I had no personal experience in. [Laughter.] Sometimes the question of the curious as to my impressions and views of America have driven me almost to the limits of endurance, yet I appreciate that there was no disrespect, no wish to take me off my guard, but only that pressing urgency which is so marked a feature of American character. When the questioners came in extra force I have been tempted to say with an old-time Englishman, 'This is the humblest moment of my life that you should take me for fool enough to answer all your questions. [Laughter and applause.] If there is any criticism I would make it is that the manifestations of kindness and friendliness have been too many and too strong. The two months which I have spent on these shores have been two years in actual work, or two centuries rather, since I have lived through all American history. In Virginia I saw the ear of the cavaliers, or of the early settlers, and as it were, I met Smith and Pocahontas, and witnessed over again the drama of the struggle in the great central State among the States. In Massachusetts I saw the work and sacrifices of the pilgrims, and in Philadelphia—well, I lived in a way that would have shocked the simple soul of Wm. Penn. [Laughter.] There are two impressions which are fixed upon my mind as the leading characteristic of the people among whom I have passed, and the almanac informs me, but two short months. Everything seems to be fermenting and growing, and yet I have been no farther west than Niagara. As I stood in the moonlight at that great work and ceaseless labor of nature and saw it for the first time it looked to me like the incessant activity and tireless, restless, beating whirlpool of life and existence here. In the everlasting tumult of the abyss I saw the undying push and activity of America. In the mist cloud that rose in the moonlight I saw images somehow of American destiny. I saw the silver column that rose silent in the night I saw the watchful power that should be the pillar of light to the posterity of each nation. The other impression I have had very strongly forced upon me is the ever-present hopefulness and buoyancy of the people. Ready ever to step forward and try again what had been abandoned as beyond the grasp of the older people of Europe, they work night and day to supercede these progressions by new devices and new methods. This will probably be my last visit to this western world, and I have likened it to Wordsworth's Yarrow unvisited, Yarrow visited and Yarrow unvisited. The third stage would not in all probability be a full fruition, but if it was, I should come to a land of kindly homes, where I had been treated as the best and with the best. But even were it never to be my pleasure to repeat this visit, I can recall it in my cordial greetings of my American friends abroad. The two lands are bound closely together, however, by the telegraph, and by my friend, Cyrus W. Field, who crossed the ocean so often that I hear of him, in the same moment in London and in New York. [Laughter.] I shall have my friends, Mr. Harper and Mr. Grove, to help my friendly recollections. Without them I could never have come, and they have taken such good care of me that I do not believe I have handled $2 in money in the whole two months of my stay.

In closing his remarks he expressed a fervent hope and an abiding belief that the bond which fastened America to the mother and would never be broken. At the Loch Katrine of America—Lake George—he saw an oak and a maple growing on the same root. He was reminded of the oak of England, with its gnarled and twisted root, and the young shoot of America, with its glorious promise for the future. Might the union of the two trees on one root be always typical of the union of America and England.

- A MODEL CINCINNATIAN. [Cincinnati Enquirer.] The evidence against Jesse P. J. DeBeck, principal of the fourth district school, accused of taking indecent liberties with one of his girl pupils a few days since, continues to accumulate until it piles mountain high, leaving little room for hope that he will be able to overturn it. On the day of the opening of the examination of his case against pretty Fannie Hampton, he informed the representatives of the press that he was going to literally bury her beneath a load of testimony against her character. "Oh, I'll give you the richest reading you ever saw," was his remark. "I'll bury her, I'll use her up completely; I'll show her character to be the vilest you ever saw. I'll give you the heaviest dose you ever had before this thing is ended," and the poor little shivering, timid girl was obliged to sit for hours listening to his efforts to blacken her character by attempts to overawe her schoolmates and successful work in that line among the teachers. How far he succeeded in this the testimony of the former session in the testimony of the press that he was going to literally bury her beneath a load of testimony against her character.
