ENGLAND NEEDS MORE FIGHTERS TO WIN BATTLE

Conscription May Have to Be Resorted to to Produce the Soldiers

EXPECTING VICTORY BUT MUST FIGHT

Ireland Can Give Another Half Million Men and She Should Do It.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(3:37 p. m.)—Gen. Sir William Robertson, chief of the imperial staff at army headquarters, said in a speech today at Doldley, Lincolnshire, that while the allies were winning the war slowly, but surely, he wished to impress upon his hearers the necessity of procuring more men for the army and munition factories. In this connection he said he had a serious word of warning to give.

"We are not justified in expecting to win the war," he said, "unless the service of every man and woman in the country is utilized to the fullest extent."

"We must be under no delusion," he continued, "as to the end or probable duration of this great struggle. We must be prepared to continue for a time which can not at present be estimated."

"In fact we must prepare for the worst while we hope for the best. We have adopted in theory the principle of national service. We must see that we put it into practice because we want more men and we want them now and eventually we shall want all who can be spared."

When parliament reassembles next week the government will be confronted with new embarrassing proposals for the application of conscription to Ireland. The Times and other newspapers recently have been conducting a strong campaign with this object in view and the decisions announced today by the manpower distribution board and by Gen. Sir William Robertson, chief of the imperial staff that more men are urgently needed will be believed strengthened the hands of the agitators who have been joined by Sir Edward Carson.

Need of Conscription. Sir Edward asserts that the situation is such that without conscription in Ireland it will be impossible to even maintain the Irish regiments of the front in their proper strength. He contends that Ireland could provide another half million men of military age and asks what the colonies which have made such sacrifices for the empire will think of the shrinking of Ireland.

While most of the responsible politicians are agreed that it would be inexpedient to attempt to apply conscription to Ireland while home rule is withheld from it, and already in the present phase of the war the European war those who are demanding conscription hold a strong hand and the government may find it difficult to resist their demand.

The official statement issued by the commission today follows: "The morning session of the American and Mexican joint commission was devoted to presentation to the Mexican commissioners by the American colleagues of the importance of giving consideration to certain questions which have a distinct international bearing because of their effect on the status and the rights of foreigners resident in Mexico and of foreigners who have invested capital in Mexican enterprises."

The postion taken by the American commission is that the satisfactory solution of these questions is an integral and necessary part of a general program the purpose of which is to assure to Mexico the resumption of her normal position among the nations of the earth."
